Navy Cuts Army Down To Its Size In 21-21 Tie

Middies Bounce Back In Last 4 Minutes To Knot Count After Outplaying Cadets

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 27. With the fury of the scorned, Navy's supposedly punchless and hopeless football team turned on unbeaten Army today and clawed out a 21-21 tie before 101,000 fans watching in disbelief in Municipal Stadium.

As President Truman, with Mrs. Truman and daughter Margaret, flanked by top-level commands of both services, viewed the action from the Annapolis side of the field, the once-despised Middies produced one of Navy's finest peacetime hours.

Against an Army team that took the field as a three-touchdown favorite, the Middies bolted into a stunning 7-0 lead in the first quarter and then drove from behind in the final four minutes to salvage the tying touchdown.

Williams Dashes 59 Yards

Pistol Pete Williams, slender little veteran of Navy's backfield, keynoted the surprising proceedings when he fled 59 yards to set up the Middies' first touchdown on the longest run of a Navy back this season.

Navy cut loose with contempt for the highly-vaunted, whole-team defensive units that Army Coach Earl Blaik shuttled into the game. With Reaves Baysinger quarterbacking the Middies' offense smartly, and sneaking to the first touchdown, Navy also found a two-touchdown man today in plunging Bill Hawkins.

At the finish, Navy still had the ball and the Army team was happy to get the illogical Middies off their necks after the startling turn of events. It was the first tie game in the service series since 1926 when they played to the memorable 21-21 deadlock in Chicago.

It was a contest to go down with the top thrillers of their 58-year rivalry, perhaps the greatest upset of the series, for today's Navy team went into the game with 13-game losing streak against an Army club that was unbeaten.

Perfect Football Weather

But as late as the fourth quarter it appeared that Navy had shot its bolt, gallantly but futilely, for Andy Galiffa took the Cadets 55 yards downfield on a forced march to break the tie and move Army into a 21-14 lead.

Philadelphia provided the perfect recipe for a football day, sunlit, clear and crisp. At 11 a. m. nearly 50,000 fans were in the huge stadium, and President Truman with his official party was on the scene at noon.

With the President and his family were Defense Secretary

Army Team Reported Hit by Dysentery

Philadelphia, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Army football team was suffering acute dysentery when it played Navy in the annual service classic, it was disclosed today.

The dysentery was reported the result of a Thanksgiving Day dinner at West Point.

"BLUE BOY" HAS COURAGE—Thirteen-year-old Claude Sine will leave his home in Mountain Falls, Va., Monday to go to Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore to learn whether a delicate operation can correct the rare heart ailment which made him a "blue baby" at birth. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sine, feel that their son will "be a new boy, if they can operate." (Story on P. 12)

Truman Gets Kick Out of Upset by Navy

Philadelphia, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—President Truman, who staged one of the biggest political upsets in history, chuckled today as he watched underdog Navy upset football experts' predictions by playing to a 21-21 tie in the annual Army-Navy classic.

Mr. Truman happily noted also that even the weather prediction for the game was wrong. The weatherman had said there would be rain.

The President attended the game as an impartial rooter, although he sat on Navy's side of the field. He sat on the Army side last year. During the train journey from Washington, he walked through the cars and kidded reporters about "predictions." He said he wasn't forecasting anything.

Every time Navy scored a touchdown, Mr. Truman smiled, and he laughed heartily when the Midshipmen hoisted a big sign saying: "Gallup picks Army."

Mr. Truman came to Philadelphia aboard a special train, which carried 180 passengers. He was met by Mayor Bernard Samuel, Governor James Duff, Senator Ed. Martin and Senator Francis Meyers. All are Republicans except Meyers.

He reached the stadium more than an hour before game time so he could watch the Midshipmen and Cadets parade.

The President sat on the 50-yard line between Mrs. Truman and Mrs. Fred M. Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice of the United States.

His daughter, Margaret, chewed on a hot dog sandwich with Drucy Snyder, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury, and their escorts, Robert Morrison and John Lushley, young friends of their families.

When Navy put over a touchdown in the early moments of the first quarter, Mr. Truman, an old Army man himself, turned around and chided his military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan. He smiled as Army tied the score in the second period and the Navy goat paraded in front of his box.

Greek Premier, Seriously Ill, Rallies Slightly

Athens, Nov. 27 (AP).—The aged Greek Premier, Themistokles Sophoulis, made a slight improvement this afternoon. A bulletin from his physicians, however, said the 88-year-old statesman's condition remained serious.

A few hours after receiving the last sacraments of the Greek Orthodox Church, he rallied slightly. One doctor expressed faint hope for his life. Another, however, said his rally was only temporary.

Cut in Ration

Reds Restrict Electricity in Their Zone

Berlin, Nov. 27 (AP).—Soviet authorities today ordered sharp reductions in electric power usage in the entire Russian zone of Germany.

Allied authorities said the ration curtailment obviously was a result of the coal shortage caused by the western Allies' counterblockade against east Germany.

The reduction was announced by the Soviet-licensed news agency ADN. Power will be cut off to all homes five hours each day and power to stores and offices will be cut off nine hours daily.

Industry also was ordered to shut down one day in addition to Sunday each week. This will be called "power saving day."

Col. Frank Howley, American commander in Berlin, warned the Communists, meanwhile, he would tolerate no further removals of railway equipment from the United States sector to the Soviet sector.

At Bonn, the Communist delegates to the Constitutional Assembly proposed that the assembly dissolve itself as a result of "sug-

Truman Thinking Of Trip Abroad, Newspaper Says

London (Sunday), Nov. 28 (AP). The Sunday Pictorial said today that President Truman "is considering a trip to Europe next year to see the Marshall Plan in action." It did not give the source of its information.

The newspaper added that some government circles said they expected the President in the spring.

(Reports that President Truman is considering a trip abroad have been current since the election. Most rumors involve a Big Four chiefs' meeting to try to solve the Berlin impasse.)

Snorkel-Type Sub Believed Sighted in Gulf, Navy Says

By The Associated Press

Cruising of an unidentified ultramodern submarine in Gulf Coast waters was indicated last night in reports released by the Navy Department.

The locale was 20 miles southeast of the Naval Air Station at Corpus Christi, Tex. The time that the craft apparently was seen was Friday afternoon.

First indications were that it was not a United States submersible. Navy officials at the Corpus Christi station said "No United States submarines are known to be operating in these waters."

Navy reports showed this:

At 4 p. m. Friday the crew of a Navy training plane saw what they thought might be a periscope, with a long, trailing wake.

An analysis of the report indicated that "the object sighted could have been a snorkel, rather than a periscope," and that smoke near the object probably came from an exhaust beneath the water.

The object submerged completely and disappeared in about 10 minutes.

The reference to the "snorkel" was significant. This breather device for enabling a submarine to increase its range by running its Diesel engines while submerged reportedly is used by only two or three nations—the United States, Russia and possibly Britain.

Red Satellites Condemned for Greek Action

Paris, Nov. 27 (AP).—The United Nations Assembly today formally condemned three Soviet satellites—Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia—for aiding Greek guerillas.

The action came after a bitter debate in which John Foster Dulles, acting chairman of the United States delegation, called on the Soviet bloc countries to stop spreading communism by "force, coercion and terrorism."

The vote was 47 to 6, with only the Russian-led group voting no.

Dulles told the Assembly the American people hate communistic methods, but do not hate people who believe differently from the way Americans do. He virtually disregarded an hour and 40-minute speech delivered earlier by Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky.

The Soviet deputy foreign minister, shouting and gesturing, attacked investigators of the U. N. Special Committee on the Balkans (UNSCOB) as "amateur Sherlock Holmeses" and called UNSCOB'S report "junk" and "garbage."

The resolution approved by the Assembly was sponsored by the United States, Britain, France and China. In addition to condemning Greece's three northern neighbors, the measure extended the life of UNSCOB for another year.

Despite the one-sided vote on this resolution, Russia demanded a vote on a Soviet resolution which called for the end of UNSCOB and the immediate withdrawal of all

Reds Drive Within 35 Mi. Of Nanking

Madame Chiang Flying Here to Seek Speedy Aid for Shaky Nationalists

Nanking, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Communist troops drove within 35 miles of this Nationlist capital today as Madame Chiang Kai-shek left for Washington in a United States plane to seek quick American aid for her husband's shaky government.

Mme. Chiang tried to take off from Shanghai yesterday in a chartered plane but bad weather forced her to wait.

The Red push to Chingpaling, a railway town 35 miles north of Nanking, punched another hole in the Nationalist government's rail communications with embattled Suchow.

Government reports said the situation in Chingpaling was "obscure," but was not likely to constitute any real danger to Nanking for the present. They estimated the Communist troops totaled not more than 20,000.

Strong Nationalist reinforcements rushed south from Pengpu and north from Pukow, across the Yangtze River from Nanking, were reported in contact with the Communists along a line from Chingpaling to Tingyuan.

Some 160 miles north of Nanking, other Communist and Nationalist forces were locked in battle along a 45-mile front between the railway town of Suhsien and Linpi.

Gen. Chiu Ching-Chuan, commander of the Nationalist Second Army group, said the Reds had thrown 600,000 men into the battle in an attempt to encircle the key railway junction of Suchow, 45 miles north of Suhsien, and isolate it from Nanking and the lower Yangtze.

Government fighters and bombers were strongly supporting the estimated 500,000 Nationalist troops in the sector.

U. S. Plane Available For Madame Chiang

By The Associated Press

The State Department announced last night that the American Government would furnish official transportation to Madame Chiang Kai-shek, China's first lady, on her visit here next week.

A State Department statement said "a United States naval transport plane has been made available to Madame Chiang Kai-shek at her request for transportation for her and a small party to Washington." She is due on December 1.

Chiang Considers U. S. Obligated to Aid China

By the United Press

Chiang Kai-shek has told President Truman this country is obliged to rescue China from the Communists because of alleged United States diplomatic mistakes at Yalta, it was disclosed last night.

Chiang's charges seemed likely to receive cool treatment.

Officials said Chiang held that American diplomacy at Yalta was to blame for loss of Manchuria to the Communists.

The President reportedly answered Chiang's letter with what amounted to a mere acknowledgment.

The Yalta agreement, signed by Franklin Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and Josef Stalin, provided for joint Soviet-Chinese operation of two Manchurian railroads, turned over the Kurile Islands to Russia, and noted Russian

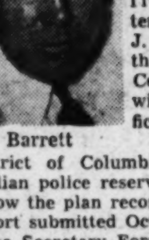
Chief Murphy Not to Form Emergency Fire Force Now; Defense Request Expected

Police Reserves Being Recruited in Anticipation

The Metropolitan Police Department Reserve Corps is being recruited in anticipation of a request by national defense officials to prepare Washington for civilian defense in the event of atomic warfare.



Barrett

Neither Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett nor the District Commissioners will admit it officially.

However, the District of Columbia's volunteer civilian police reserve will largely follow the plan recommended in a report submitted October 1 to Defense Secretary Forrestal by Russell J. Hopley, then director of the Office of Civil Defense Planning. The report has been made public and is for sale by the Government Printing Office, but has not yet received Forrestal's formal approval.

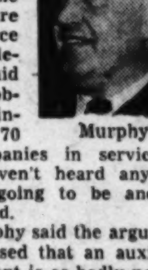
Department's Strength Is Believed Adequate

Fire Chief Clement Murphy yesterday said he did not plan to organize an auxiliary fire department at present, similar to the auxiliary police department.



Murphy

Chief Murphy predicted that even if Washington were attacked, the present fire fighting force would be adequate. He said it can be mobilized in 45 minutes, with 70 engine companies in service.

"But I haven't heard anybody say there's going to be another war," he said.

Chief Murphy said the argument might be raised that an auxiliary fire department is as badly needed here as an auxiliary police department in the event of a war situation.

Murphy called it a 'waste of time" to train a man for fire

CIO Orders Merger for 'Left' Union

Farm Equipment Workers Directed To Affiliate With Right-Wing UAW

Portland, Oreg., Nov. 27 (NYHT).—The Congress of Industrial Organizations' national executive board today directed the left-wing Farm and Equipment Workers "to take immediate steps to affiliate" with the right-wing United Automobile Workers.

Philip Murray, president of the CIO, indicated that this action was taken within the framework of a resolution adopted by the CIO convention Thursday, authorizing the executive board to correct situations in affiliates which have failed to succeed in their organizing efforts. Action under this resolution is expected to eliminate the left-wing leadership in a number of the smaller CIO affiliates.

Murray has made it clear that under authority of the resolution the CIO executive board can bring about the mergers of unions, seek removal of their officers or even charter new unions within the particular field. Full implementation of the organizational overhaul, however, will not be determined, Murray said today, until January 25, at which time the matter will be taken up at a meeting of the nine national CIO vice presidents.

Board Would Step In

In directing the Farm Equipment Workers to affiliate with the UAW, the CIO executive board asserted that "if at the end of 60 days amalgamation is not consummated as provided for herein, the CIO executive board will act to implement this decision." The board designated a three-man committee, headed by Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers Union, to bring about the FEW-UAW merger.

Murray said that the FEW has about 43,000 members. The FEW and the UAW have for several years been engaged in a jurisdictional wrangle over which should represent workers in the agricultural implement industry. Grant Oakes, president of the FEW, was understood to have protested bitterly during the executive board session today against the directed merger.

Two other left-wing unions slated for a complete overhaul are the United Office and Professional Workers and the United Public Workers, but Murray declined today to say when action would be initiated against them. He intimated the action was possible before the CIO vice presidents' meeting January 25.

Orders New York Inquiry

He said the executive board had also directed a seven-man committee, headed by Louis Hollander, president of the New York State CIO, to look into the New York City affairs of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes Union to determine how to get the 35,000 members of eight seceded store union locals back into the CIO.

Other actions by the executive board today included adoption of a resolution urging President Truman to re-examine the loyalty program "covering Federal and private employment."

Hanging of Tojo, 6 Aides Reported To Be Imminent

Tokyo (Sunday), Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters indicated today that former Premier Hideki Tojo and six other condemned Japanese war leaders may be hanged any time after midnight tonight.

Col. M. P. Echols, MacArthur's public information officer, said his office will begin around-the-clock service at 12:01 a. m. tomorrow (10:01 a. m., Sunday, EST), issuing spot news about the condemned men as rapidly as it is received from Sugamo Prison.

National Chairman Acts

Review of Presidential Vote In Three States Asked by GOP

San Francisco, Nov. 27 (AP).—A review of the presidential election ballot in Ohio, Illinois and California has been requested by Hugh Scott, jr., Republican National Chairman, to determine the possible need of a recount, McIntyre Fairies, National Committeeman, said today.

The California national committeeman disclosed Scott's request before a meeting of the executive committee of the California Republican State central committee.

Fairies said the review would be made in these States to determine "if the results were in accord with the vote."

In all three States, the presidential ballot was relatively close and the electoral vote of any two could reverse the national result. Mr. Truman's majority in California was about 30,000.

"There is no charge of fraud," Fairies told the committee, "but since there have been some rather large errors, I am directing all county chairmen in California to determine first, that there have been no vote frauds in their districts, and, second, that the vote count is correct with a view to considering a recount if it is not in accord with the result."

Fairies said Chairman Scott had made his request of the national committeemen today in Ohio, Illinois and California.

School Loan Of 38 Millions Urged for D. C.

Strayer Outlines Construction Plan Aimed at Bringing System Up to Date

The District government, which has neglected its schools too long, is going to have to pay out 38 million dollars for construction to bring its school plant up to date.

To finance this outlay, it ought to side-step its 74-year policy of pay-as-you-go for District expenses, and borrow from the Federal Government without interest.

These are the major recommendations in the first of two reports by Dr. George D. Strayer, hired by Congress to conduct an exhaustive study into District school needs.

A 10-Year Plan

Dr. Strayer warns, however, that his recommended spending program would simply put the District educational plant on a current basis. It would remedy these conditions, now prevalent, which were found by Dr. Strayer: "Overcrowded schools, half-time education of children, obsolescent buildings, fire and panic hazards."

Figuring on continuing population trends, Dr. Strayer believes that the construction he recommends would keep up with enrollments up to 1960.

Samples of this construction are 22 new schoolhouses, a new central administration building, eight school additions.

Of the $37,901,816 Dr. Strayer believes should be spent, he sets aside $27,655,626 for Negro schools and $7,513,690 for white schools.

The report calls for abandonment of several schools, among them Cardozo High School, and general attention to more acceptable safety measures throughout the school system.

Dr. Strayer, who believes the District started accumulating its present school bill way back in the '30s, wants the construction financed just as District parkland purchases are financed.

Annual Repayment

Strayer wants the Federal Government to lend the money as fast as District construction officials can put it to use. It would be repaid in annual installments.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, who prepared a six-year plan for Washington's development, based on the report of a Citizens' Planning Committee, yesterday termed Dr. Strayer's report a "very valuable" document.

Young's plan called for spending about 44 million dollars for a school program, but part of the work then suggested has since been completed. He said the Commissioners' program and the Strayer program agree on 32 projects, both as to location and scope, and are in general accord on money needs.

(See Section II, Page 1, for details of the Strayer report, including a rating of each public school building in the city for educational adequacy. For a word sketch of Strayer and a related story about the Virginia school system, see Page 2 of the main news section.)

5 Locals Hold Out

Dock Strike Ends in East; Work Today

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—America's shipping lifelines, strike-bound on both oceans, were restored on the Atlantic Coast tonight by an overwhelming back-to-work vote by AFL longshoremen.

CIO fellow strikers on the West Coast followed suit in first-day returns.

President Joseph P. Ryan of the AFL International Longshoremen's Association announced 66 East Coast striking locals had voted to end the walkout. Opposing the move, he said, were five locals—four in Brooklyn, one in Jersey City, N. J.

On the Pacific Coast, voting continues through Sunday.

A peace plan was accepted 19-to-1 by a San Francisco meeting of 6000 workers—almost one fourth of the West Coast strikers. It still wasn't smooth sailing.

Ryan was faced with a dissident group of strikers in his powerful Brooklyn locals. On the other

Inauguration A Bonanza for D. C. Hotels

Some Double Rates With Most of Them Already Booked Solid

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

It's a bonanza for local hotel men, this coming inauguration of Harry S. Truman as President.

The big event won't come off until January 20, but already the harvest is being gathered.

Most hotels were booked solid for inauguration week right after the election and most of them are getting cash deposits with their reservations.

Some hotels have doubled their rates. Almost all of them are refusing any reservations for less than three or four days.

"It's for their own protection," said a spokesman at the Mayflower Hotel. "If they don't pick up their reservations on Monday (January 17), we can't guarantee guests of a room Wednesday night, the night before the inauguration."

Pennsylvania ave. hotels like the Raleigh, Willard and Washington are in an enviable position. They line the parade route. They are getting double the usual rates.

They may also erect and sell bleacher seats to those who want an unhampered view of the inaugural parade.

The Raleigh, for example, is booked solid for January 18, 19 and 20 at double the usual rates and every reservation is backed by a cash deposit.

The Raleigh will also put up 50 seats on a tier of steps inside the Raleigh Room from which the parade can be viewed. The seats are already sold.

The Washington Post made a survey of 33 Washington hotels which have nearly 8000 transient rooms and learned the majority of them have stopped accepting reservations.

"Just can't handle any more," was the usual explanation.

Several hotel managers said it was necessary to increase prices because they will have to empty their hotels before inauguration week to guarantee the reservations and this will entail a loss of revenue.

Others declared they decided to hold to their regular rates rather than risk alienating their frequent guests.

Surprisingly, the hotels generally reported there were fewer can-

Man Is Drowned From Yacht in Anacostia River

A man identified by police as Jack Corrington, about 50, was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital early today after he was pulled from the Anacostia River near Buzzard's Point.

Police reported Corrington, who they said was a chemist, "jumped, fell or was pushed" from the cabin cruiser, Antoinette, on which he lived. At 11:30 p. m., a half hour later, he was removed from the river by members of Rescue Squad No. 1, who attempted to revive him.

An occupant of a neighboring boat, William E. Cope, of the Viking, told police he heard the splash, followed by a voice saying: "He'll come up in a minute over here."

Police are holding a 46-year-old engineer for questioning.

Tucson, Ariz., Nov. 27 (AP).—Phyllis Jo Farrand, 22, Spirit Lake, Iowa, former University of Arizona student, was rescued today after lying helpless in the rugged and wind-swept Santa Catalina Mountains since Tuesday. She had been out for a walk and became so ill she could not return.

Dr. Strayer Pushing 73, Has Kindergarten Bounce as Director of School Survey

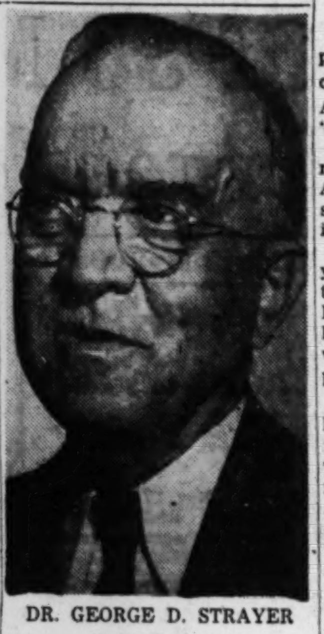
There still may be, even in this atomic age, educators who are sedentary fuddy-duddies, but never count among such static scholastics Dr. George D. Strayer, director of the Washington schools survey.

On the eve of 73—he'll observe that birthday Monday—Dr. Strayer generates as much kinetic energy as a kindergarten class.

For some four decades, the chunky-built, chubby-faced educator was a familiar figure racing around the halls of Teachers College, Columbia University. At the age of 65, the peripatetic professor was retired, and thereby freed for even more vigorous legwork investigating school systems over the country.

Dr. Strayer belongs to that breed of brain-worker who thinks best on his feet and expresses himself most fluently while in motion.

In his classes he'd pace to and fro, jingling his keys or loose change, and volley his lecture from over the shoulder. As digger of facts—conditions of school buildings, construction needs, personnel policies, finances, and the like—the bifocal-bespectacled professor emeritus dictates to his secretaries in the same vigorous manner he delivered his classroom lectures.



DR. GEORGE D. STRAYER
No fuddy-duddy

Got a 10-Year Jump

A Pennsylvanian by birth and a Baptist—his father was a minister at Wayne, Pa.—George Drayton Strayer began teaching at the age of 17, three years before he entered Bucknell U. He switched to Baltimore to become a secondary school teacher, and there earned his bachelor of arts degree at the age of 27.

That year—1903—he married, and entered Columbia University, where he won his doctorate and began his distinguished career.

Professor Strayer trained some four to five thousand school administrators, many of whom are today superintendents of school systems. At the same time the doughty scholar fought for Nationwide application of the principle that a school administrator should be a person trained for the job, and not a politician or a political appointee.

Today, Dr. Strayer is recognized as the Nation's outstanding authority in the field of school administration. A former president of the National Education Association, the septuagenarian schoolman is also a leader in the teaching profession.

While at Columbia, and even more actively since, the sparse-haired educator has undertaken scores of school system surveys, approximately 100 in all. He spent the past three years on the West Coast, investigating the schools of California and the State of Washington.

Home for Christmas

Mrs. Strayer, the former Cora Bell, of Baltimore, accompanies her State-hopping husband at each of his new headquarters. In Washington, they live at the Wardman Park Hotel.

But come Christmas, they try hard—and usually manage—to hold a family reunion at the large, rambling, vaguely-Tudor house they call home in the Riverdale section of New York City. They have four sons, three of whom are like their father, PH. D's and college professors, and seven grandchildren. Sons Joseph and Paul are teaching at Princeton; George, at the University of Washington. Son John is in business.

Dr. Strayer has decided liberal views on education. Here's one of them:

"We need more and more to emphasize the importance of teaching which will help pupils to understand the current issues of democratic living, such as safeguarding civil liberties, the economic adjustment necessary for the maintenance of political democracy, and the provisions necessary for the preservation of human worth and dignity in our industrial society.

She Blames Klan

Widow Held In Slaying Of Negro

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 27 (AP).—The widow of Negro Robert Mallard, arrested for his murder today, screamed, "He was killed by hooded Ku Kluxers."

A few minutes later the woman, Amy James Mallard, began wailing incoherently and collapsed in the arms of her brother, J. C. James, Buffalo (N. Y.) attorney.

She was arrested on a warrant charging murder as she left her husband's funeral. She was taken into custody by Lieut. W. E. McDuffie of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation.

Upon arrival at the police station a reporter asked if she would like to make a statement. "I'll tell the world I do," she shrieked. "He was killed by hooded Ku Kluxers. He worked hard for me."

Mallard was slain around midnight, November 20, and his wife said at the time he was killed by armed and masked men from ambush near Lyons, Ga. His body was found on a roadside. One bullet had pierced his chest.

Lieutenant McDuffie disclosed that three Negroes were being held in Lyons as material witnesses.

"I think the Ku Klux Klan has been wrongfully accused in this case," he said. "It is our belief they are not guilty of shooting Mallard."

Fund Raised For First D. C. Naval Museum

The Naval Historical Foundation has raised enough money to convert the carriage house and stables of historic Decatur House into Washington's first naval museum, foundation officials announced yesterday.

Rear Admiral Paul Bastedo, foundation treasurer, said that slightly more than the $25,000 estimated to be needed to convert the present structures and set up the museum has been collected. Bids will be sought as soon as architectural specifications can be written and the museum is expected to be open to the public by late spring.

The architectural plans approved by the foundation were submitted by Rear Admiral J. A. Furer and Mrs. Mark Andrews, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy. They were drawn in consultation with Mrs. Truxtun Beale, owner of Decatur House, who has leased the structures to the foundation for the museum.

Maintenance cost for the museum, to house naval relics such as ship models, weapons, uniforms and manuscripts, is expected to be about $5000 a year.

1090 Va. Schools Called Unfit for Use

Richmond, Va., Nov. 27 (AP).—Virginia school divisions report they are using 1090 schools unsuitable because of fire or health hazards or other reasons, State School Superintendent G. Tyler Miller disclosed today.

Miller's announcement pointed up claims of 100 counties and 25 cities laid before the State Board of Education and the Governor earlier in the week—that they need to spend 396 million in the next 10 years on school building construction.

Miller's announcement was based on supplemental information furnished by local division heads. The localities put needs for the present biennium ending in 1950—at more than 185 million dollars.

Local school officials provided this breakdown on the unsuitability of the schools:

Lack of toilets and unsanitary and unhealthful conditions—727 schools and 1609 classrooms.

Serious fire hazards—87 schools and 580 classrooms.

Other reasons—276 schools and 747 classrooms.

The localities also reported that 258 schools had been closed through consolidation during the last three years, and 49 closed for other reasons, with a total of 435 classrooms.

They believed it would be practical to reopen and use only 68 of the rooms to relieve overcrowding.

The report also showed that 3725 elementary school teachers were carrying excess pupil loads (more than 35 in a class) and that 550 high school teachers were teaching more than the accepted maximum of 150 pupils a day.

Some 476 elementary teachers and 35 high school teachers were holding double shift classes because of insufficient classroom space, the report said.

The entire matter, particularly the amount of money cited as needed, quickened speculation around the Capitol on the probability of a special session of the Assembly after the first of the year.

Before the survey on needs was conducted by the Education Department the Governor had received requests from more than half of the 100 counties to call a special session and provide State aid for school building construction.

Governor Tuck has the matter under advisement, but has taken the position that not enough was known about the actual needs to justify a special session at this time.

The Commission on State and Local Revenues and Expenditures is examining the matter of school needs and revenue sources.

To Protect Youth

College Fight Urged Upon Red 'Frauds'

By the United Press

A House committee research expert said last night that schools and colleges should do more to guard American youth against the "frauds" of communism.

Benjamin Mandel, research director for the House Un-American Activities Committee, made the statement during a radio (ABC) interview.

Mandel said many American youths have become enmeshed in the web of Communist conspiracy. He said some have left school and home to follow "the Communist will-o-the-wisp."

Blamed for Tragedies

Thus, he said, "the Communists have been responsible for a great number of personal tragedies, which have injured, sometimes, irreparably, the youngster involved, and brought sorrow to his family."

Mandel said that while the "overwhelming majority" of American youth are anti-Communist, "many gifted young people have been needlessly enmeshed in the Communist web."

This, he said "is to some extent an indictment of our schools and colleges in failing to prepare these students adequately to meet the facts of modern life and especially the machinations of international Communism."

Too Many Confused Teachers

"In fact," he said, "there are all too many teachers who are either confused themselves on this problem or more or less sympathetic with the Communists."

The Communists offer young people a "ready-made blueprint of an ideal society in which all our problems will be solved, a phony short-cut to paradise," Mandel said.

He said that "young people should be taught in our educational institutions to detect and reject all such frauds."

Heavy Decline Is Registered By GI Loans

By The Associated Press

The GI loan and unemployment-allowance programs dropped to new two-or-three-year lows during October, the Veterans Administration said yesterday.

Applications for guarantee of loans to veterans dropped 3 per cent below the September total, "continuing a marked decline that began 12 months ago," a monthly report disclosed.

October's total of 24,864 applications from lenders was 53 per cent below the October, 1947, figure, and the lowest monthly total since January, 1946. The loan-guarantee program, launched in 1944, began full-scale operations in 1945, after certain amendments of the original law.

Since the loan program began, the agency has guaranteed 1,486,080 loans totaling eight million dollars. Included were 1,337,548 home loans, 48,034 farm loans and 100,498 business loans.

Unemployment allowances during October fell 31 per cent below the September total and 43 per cent below the October, 1947, figure. With a weekly average of 245,000 continued claims, the allowances were the lowest since 1945.

Since the beginning of the program 8,900,000 veterans have filed one of more unemployment claims, and 967,000 have exhausted their entitlement. Unemployment payments have totaled $3,300,000,000, the September total being 35 million dollars.

Rome, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Pope Pius XII returned to Vatican City today after a four-month vacation at his summer residence in Castel Gandolfo.

'Socialist' Tag Put on Public Housing Effort

The National Association of Real Estate Boards said yesterday that promoters of public housing are working toward state socialism.

A pamphlet published by the board's legislative committee said a "clever propaganda campaign" about housing has been developed by a coalition of 'planners,' socialists and radicals.

"The objective of this powerful coalition is . . . simple: state socialism, with all its dangerous implications," the group asserted. "Control of housing is their first and logical step."

The pamphlet, entitled "The World Owes Me a Living," apparently was an attack on public housing features of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. President Truman will ask Congress in January to revive and enact this measure.

The bill failed to pass in the Eightieth Congress. It would lay down a long-range housing program, including incentives for private industry, and Federal subsidies for construction of 500,000 units of low-rent housing.

The real estate group pointed out that many people think meat costs too much. Yet few of them, the pamphlet added, would propose that the Government go into the meat business.

"Why, then, should the situation be so different when the commodity is housing?" the realtors asked.

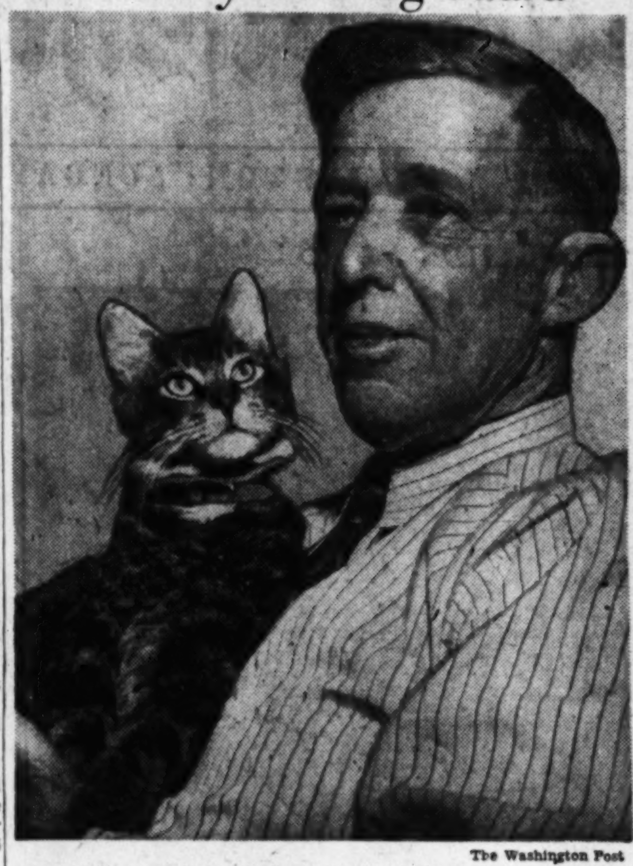
Floggings at Training School Recalled by Retiring Guard



The Washington Post

FRIENDS—"Dinks" will be seeing a lot more of George W. Heim, retiring instructor and guard at the National Training School for Boys

The lads at the National Training School for Boys in these modern times don't know how good they have it.

No . . . George W. Heim, an instructor and guard at the institution for more than 50 years, remembers back at the turn of the century when the boys were disciplined with a rubber hose.

And if they got too far out of line they were put in solitary confinement on a diet of bread and water.

"Nothing like today," said Heim, who will be honored by the staff of the school at a banquet Tuesday night. Heim's retirement from the school where he started work in 1897 becomes effective Tuesday. It will also be his seventieth birthday.

Heim recalls those floggings well.

"A boy had to bend over and touch his toes with his finger tips," he said. "Then he would be whipped 10 to 15 times with a rubber hose."

Today, a boy may be placed in a solitary confinement cell as a disciplinary measure, but there is no bread and water diet. And no whippings.

When Heim joined the school staff in 1897, he was assigned to work on the school farm. He was only 19. He received $18 a month wages with his room, board and laundry free.

By 1900, Heim had been advanced to night guard of one of the cottages. His salary jumped, too—to $22.50 a month. But he was required to work 15 hours a day—from 4:45 p. m. to 7:45 a. m.—and seven days a week!

Today, a beginning guard is paid about $2900 a year and works a 40-hour week.

Heim did much to improve the working condition of staff members at the school. He organized the Employes Union at the school, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Government Employes. He has been president of the Employes Union since its organization in 1934.

The union obtained better working conditions for the staff members, won them Civil Service recognition and urged that the school be placed under the Federal Bureau of Prisons. This latter step was taken in 1939.

Heim has seen thousands of wayward boys come and go at the Bladensburg rd. school and declares frankly that there have been few of them that he would recommend.

But there are exceptions, and one such boy worked under Heim in the milk house at the school. He had been arrested at the age of 15 in North Carolina for bootlegging.

Heim took an interest in the boy, who was an orphan, and after his release obtained a job for him. The boy completed high school. During the last war, he served in the Pacific theater. Now married and the father of a young son, he is manager of a chain grocery store in nearby Maryland.

Still Active and Spry

Heim and his wife live in a tidy little home at 3100 Douglas st. ne. They have no children but they have a pet, a cat named Dinks.

Still active and spry as he approaches the 70 mark, Heim has no particular plans for the future. He figures he'll keep busy with chores around the house.

The banquet at which he will be feted Tuesday night will be held at the school and about 200 persons are expected to attend. Principal speakers will be James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, and James C. Yaden, national president of the American Federation of Government Employes. Harold E. Hegstrom, superintendent of the school, will be toastmaster.

Frats Urged To Ignore Race, Color

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Fifty-eight college fraternities were urged today to consider the "character and personality" of any prospective member "rather than his race, color, religion or nationality."

Myers

This plea was made by the National Interfraternity Conference in a statement to its 58 affiliates, but at the same time it affirmed the right of fraternities to determine the qualifications of their members.

Declared the NIA:

"The wisdom or desirability of social considerations affecting membership, including religious, racial or national qualifications, are thus the concern of the fraternity itself. . . .

"The conference, however, believes that the fraternity system will flourish better if the character and personality of the individual are regarded as paramount, rather than his race, color, religion or nationality."

Judge Frank H. Myers of the Washington, D. C., Municipal Court, a member of Kappa Alpha, was elected conference chairman to succeed Dr. Gilbert W. Mead of Chestertown, Md., president of Washington College.

At yesterday's session of its fortieth annual meeting the conference delegates voted unofficially in favor of keeping the ban on Negroes maintained by most fraternities. The tally, by a 25 to 12 margin, was merely an expression of opinion.

Interest in discrimination was heightened at the meeting by the recent suspension by Phi Kappa Psi fraternity of its Amherst College chapter because the latter asked a Negro to join.

Phi Kappa Psi's national executive council will meet here Sunday to consider this matter.

Today's conference statement said it was recognized that "a chapter member may cast his vote upon discriminatory considerations" when considering a candidate for membership.

Tuck's Fast Trip Through Roanoke Brings Protest

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 27 (AP).—Governor Tuck was in too big a hurry to get to Victory Stadium for the V.M.I.-V.P.I. football game Thursday, Vice Mayor Benton O. Dillard said here last night.

Reports had come to him that the Governor's limousine was escorted through the city "at 40 miles an hour," Dillard said.

"I want to know just who gave the Governor the right to exceed our speed limit," Dillard asked at a meeting of City Council.

He added that the speed limit in downtown Roanoke is 15 miles an hour and "nobody has the right to exceed it." It was learned today that the Governor was escorted through the city by State policemen.

Dillard later said he sought no action, but he wanted to forestall any repetition of it.

4 Injured as Car Rams Into Another

Four persons suffered head injuries when the car in which they were riding rammed a car which had stopped suddenly in the 4200 block of 16th st. nw. early yesterday.

The driver of the first car fled and is being sought by police. Impact of the collision caused the car's gasoline tank to burst into flame, and the Fire Department was called.

In the second car were Bowen Kennedy, 25, of 1337 Jefferson st. nw., the driver; his brother, Oliver Kennedy, 23, same address; Miss Betty Lewis, 23, of 625 Quincy st. nw., and Miss Rhoda Morton, 23, of 1721 Hobart st. nw.

The two women were admitted to Emergency Hospital and the Kennedy brothers to Mount Alto Hospital. Condition of all four is described as "fair."

Police said the first car was demolished and the second badly damaged. Both were going south on 16th st.

The first car is listed as belonging to Carol C. Kuebler of 2008 16th st. nw., but police said he was not operating the automobile at the time of the accident.

Streetcar Hits Pedestrian

A 41-year-old pedestrian was struck by a streetcar operated by Leonard W. Booze, 24, of 4504 15th st. nw., in front of 3027 14th st. nw. about 1:40 p. m. Saturday. Police said she started east across the street, then turned back to avoid a northbound automobile and stepped into the path of the streetcar.

The woman, Mrs. Linda Kelly of 1460 Newton st. nw., was taken to Emergency Hospital. Her left leg was possibly fractured and she suffered injuries to the left wrist and eye and possible internal injuries.

Robert F. West, 82, of 6809 Laurel st., Takoma Park, Md., was struck by an automobile as he was crossing at Georgia ave. and Longfellow st. nw. about 9:25 p. m. Friday. He was admitted to Sibley Hospital for treatment of a fractured hip and severe cuts and bruises. His condition was reported "serious."

Driver of the car, Robert V. Metzger, 23, of 1301 Longfellow st. nw., was charged with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

Mrs. Florence Schraeder, 40, of 121 N. Galveston st., Arlington, Va., suffered lacerations of the forehead when struck by an automobile driven by Curtis H. Kline, 23, of 408 N. Linwood ave., Baltimore, Md., about 2 p. m. Saturday while crossing 9th st. nw. at D st. She was taken to Emergency Hospital where her injuries were reported not serious. Kline was charged with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

Hurt When Car Overturns

Mrs. Floydeen E. Simpson, 18, suffered a broken pelvis when her husband, Wayne A. Simpson, jr., 21, a plasterer, of 2 Albany ave., Silver Spring, Md., lost control of the car while driving west toward Rockville on Viers Mill rd. about 7:30 a. m. Saturday and the car turned over. Mrs. Simpson was taken to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, by the Rockville Rescue Squad. Simpson and another passenger, Ruby Yenzer of Route 2, Laurel, Md., were not injured.

Joseph Samuel Dagenhart, 41, a technician at Walter Reed Hospital living at the Carroll Garden apartments on Hancock st., Takoma Park, suffered a broken nose and lacerated lip when he lost control of a motorcycle he was riding on Agar rd., near Lancer dr., Hyattsville, Md., about 4:15 p. m. Saturday. He was taken to Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, by the Brentwood Rescue Squad.

To Avoid 'Smear'

Fay to Reject Unsupported Sex Evidence

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The United States attorney's office will refuse henceforth to prosecute routine cases of sex perversion based solely on the uncorroborated testimony of police officers.

In disclosing this policy yesterday, United States Attorney George Morris Fay declared it is designed to prevent smearing innocent persons.

"Such a condition might easily arise," he said, "where there is a mistake or misunderstanding on the part of the policeman."

Follows Activity Spurt

Fay's action followed a spurt of police activity against perversion. Leading the field in arrests was Pvt. Frank N. Manthos, who was termed a "one-man vice squad" after he made 150 sex arrests within a year.

Pvt. Manthos has since been returned to uniform patrol duty as an apparent result of testimony given against a fellow officer in the Mitchell Grill case before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

An increasingly large number of men have been charged in Municipal Court with soliciting others to join in indecent acts. In other cases, the charge has been indecently touching other men or abusing themselves in public.

In most cases, the only Government witness is the undercover officer where job is to arrest the pervert allegedly involved.

Practice Criticized

Some public criticism has resulted from this technique and on numerous occasions defense attorneys have complained of unfairness involved.

Fay said that in a smaller number of cases, his prosecutors have only the word of a single civilian complaining of having seen an indecent act performed. In these cases, too, he declared, his office will decline to prosecute in the absence of exceptional circumstances.

"In the absence of these exceptional circumstances, regardless of whether the complaining witness is a policeman or civilian, we will demand something further," Fay said.

The "something" referred to will be in the nature of additional witnesses to the act, legally sufficient circumstantial evidence, or confessions, Fay added.

"I will not say that we will never prosecute these cases on uncorroborated testimony alone. It may be necessary to do so in certain cases. But the policy of my office is as I have stated," he said.

New Law Added Powers

The matter was threshed out at a staff meeting of the prosecutors in Municipal Court late last week.

It was pointed out that the burden of proving perversion cases will be greater under the announced policy. On the other hand, the District is now equipped with the new Miller sex law giving increased powers to the prosecution.

The Police Department and Fay's office are developing a file on persons accused as habitual sex offenders with a view to possible committal to St. Elizabeth's Hospital for treamtent of the offender.

"Aside from the basic principle of protecting the innocent in the routine case, we must consider that if persons are unjustly accused of perversion, they might become listed as habitual offenders with all its consequences Fay declared.

Ad Fills Church For Young Couple Far From Home

San Francisco, Nov. 27 (AP).—A modern maiden's prayer for a full church at her wedding brought results today because she advertised.

The little personal newspaper advertisement read "please won't you come to a lovely wedding? Bride and groom are 3000 miles away from relatives and friends." More than 200 persons, nearly all of them perfect strangers, responded.

When the nuptial mass was completed the bride cried with joy.

The incident resulted from fear by 20-year-old Miss Lucile Cefalu of Oakland that the church would be empty because most of her rela-

When Miss Cefalu and her groom-to-be, Carl Martineau, 22, arrived at the church there were 100 persons on hand. By the time the cremony started this had swelled to more than 200 and the church was just about filled.

Youths Charged With Attack On 2 Newspaper Carrier Boys

The Washington Post

TALKING IT OVER—Melvin Lewis (left) and Bertrand Treadwell, newspaper carrier boys, recount their beating outside Tenth Precinct stationhouse

Two 19-year-old youths were arrested yesterday and charged with a knife assault on two newspaper carrier boys.

Accused are Bryant Deal of 1865 Mintwood pl. nw., and Bobby Deal of 1932 Cadvert st, nw., who are not related, police said.

According to the police account of altercation took place about 7 a. m. in the 1700 block of Calvert st. nw. as the Deals and a third youth were returning home.

One of the three made a remark as Melvin E. Lewis, 15, of 1803 18th st. nw., a carrier for The Washington Post, was coming down the steps of an apartment house after leaving papers.

When Lewis asked if the remark was meant for him, he was told: "You're too small to argue, bud," and one of the three struck him, police said, starting the fracas.

Bertrand Treadwell, 15, of 1636 Florida ave. nw., a Times-Herald carrier, went to Lewis' aid, and in the struggle that followed both carriers were hurt.

Treadwell was cut about the face and on the right hand with a knife. At Freedmen's Hospital, 13 stitches were taken in the face wound.

Lewis suffered a fractured left hand when he was struck with a bottle. He was treated at Garfield Hospital.

The Deals weer arrested by Pvts. R. S. Eichelberger and W. C. Wright of the Tenth Precinct, and charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Eichelberger said the Deals and their companion denied the assault, but admitted they had been drinking. The Deals were held in lieu of $500 bond each and will appear in Municipal Court Monday.

Police said their companion did not participate in the fight.

Man Hit by Streetcar As He Chases Thief

Johannes Hamasian, 63, was recovering yesterday in Casualty Hospital after being hit by a streetcar as he chased a pickpocket Friday.

Hamasian, who is assistant manager of the Taft Hotel here and resides at 3301 Brown st. nw., told police his pocket was picked of a wallet containing more than $100 while he stood on a streetcar at 7th and M sts. nw. Hamasian said he darted across the road after the thief and was hit by a streetcar coming in the opposite direction.

Hamasian suffered a fractured right arm and head injuries. The streetcar that hit him was driven by Herman Oliff, 52, of 6101 North Dakota ave. nw., police said.

Mechanic Held for Allegedly Attempting to Corrupt Child

28-year-old airplane mechanic was held for the grand jury here yesterday after a 7-year-old girl testified he told her how to commit an indecent act.

The defendant, Earl Harrison Newton of 943 G st. sw., was placed under $3000 bond after a hearing before Judge Thomas D. Quinn.

The prosecution is under a District sex law provision prohibiting taking indecent "liberties" with children.

According to testimony, Newton never touched the girl indecently nor did he ever suggest that she commit an improper act in his presence.

Child Testifies

The girl, who lives in the same block as Newton, took the witness stand and related that several weeks ago the defendant gave her 50 cents to buy comic books.

She told her mother, who said she forbade Newton to give the child money but permitted him to give her comic books if he wished.

Last week, Newton called the child who came to his porch where he gave her comic books and talked to her for 5 minutes, it was brought out by questions of Assistant United States Attorney Robert E. Short.

Previous Talks Alleged

The child testified that he previously had told her about puberty and of unnatural acts children could perform on themselves or one another. On the porch, she testified, he asked her whether she had done one of the things mentioned.

"Are you sure that this was not a bad dream?" Defense Attorney Harry Ahern asked the girl. Her reply was "No."

Ahern contended that even if the child's testimony is true, the law does not prohibit the acts involved.

French Communists End Coal Strike

Paris, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Admitting defeat, the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor today called off the nation's 8-week-old coal strike and ordered all miners back to work on Monday.

Officials of the miners' federation, faced with the fact that 80 per cent of their 350,000 men had drifted back to work, announced it was necessary to "regroup to continue the battle in other ways."

"Our fight has not been in vain," the announcement said. "A more serious fault would have been to let ourselves be beaten without fighting."

The victory was Premier Henri Queuille's, who fought the strike with mechanized army troops and republic security guards. But it was a costly victory. France lost an estimated five million tons of coal and was forced to divert credits from the purchase of petroleum and other vital supplies to buy emergency coal imports.

Rival Plans Offered For Europe

Paris, Nov. 27 (AP).—France and Britain tonight presented rival plans to a five-nation unity committee attempting to lay the foundation for a European federation.

The French foreign ministry announced that Britain proposed a "Council of Europe." France put forward a plan for a "European consultative assembly." Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg are also represented at the conference.

The communique did not give details. Britain is known to favor regular meetings of a kind of European cabinet composed of ministers appointed by and responsible to each of the governments.

British sources have criticized as "just another talking shop" a French plan for a "Parliament of Europe."

Both the British and French plans would give the proposed European political organization only advisory powers.

The unity committee is meeting in closed sessions here until January when its recommendations will go to the foreign ministers of the five countries.

The British proposal was presented by Hugh Dalton, a minister in the British government who heads his country's delegation. Dalton made it clear that additions and changes to his plan are to be expected.

The French plan was expounded by former premier Paul Reynaud and Guy Mollet, secretary of the French Socialist Party, who is deputizing for elder statesman Leon Blum.

World Food Planners Drop Price Guarantee Proposal

By the United Press

World food planners yesterday quietly dropped a proposal urging surplus-producing nations to guarantee prices received by their own farmers.

The proposal was offered to the United Nations Footed and Agriculture Organization by James M. Dillon, Irish minister of agriculture. The alternative, he said, would be that importing nations would have to pay more for food.

Sir Stanley Bruce, chairman of the FAO commission considering the matter, ruled that the proposal would have to be dropped.

There was no formal vote. But the United States, Australia and other big producing countries were opposed to it, and there was no question but that it would have been defeated.

Abundance Plan Adopted

The group did, however, adopt Dillon's resolution urging countries to plan for abundance rather than scarcity and requesting maximum food production consistent with soil fertility.

The conference previously reelected six countries to its policy making council despite protests of smaller nations that it was concentrating control in the hands of a few countries.

Renamed to the council of the United Nations group for full three-year terms were Australia, Denmark, Egypt, France, India and Mexico. They were nominated by FAO's general committee. It said they represented the best geographical balance.

Dillon led the small nation protest. He said the food group had agreed to rotate the council jobs. Anything else, he said, might lead to domination of the organization by a small group of nations.

Make Similar Protests

Similar protests were registered by Ecuador, Pakistan, Poland, Greece, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia and the Philippines. Dr. Francisco C. Banda of Ecuador said no country 'has a monopoly on brains." All should get a chance to serve, he said.

Dr. G. S. H. Barton of Canada supported the committee's recommendations. He said it would be a bad thing for the food group to insist on rotation of the council "merely for the sake of rotation."

Viscount Stanley Bruce of Australia was reelected unanimously to a one-year term as council chairman. He was praised heartily by the delegates for the "masterly manner" in which he has handled his job.

Meanwhile, world food planners shied away from a proposal urging big surplus-producing countries to stabilize food prices. The proposal was made by Dillon.

As things stand now, he said, countries depending on food imports to survive must pay high prices or see their sources of supply gradually drp up.

U. S. Rejects Proposal

The United States rejected the plan immediately. Australia, another big-surplus producing nation, also frowned on the proposal.

A spokesman said Australia never could afford to stabilize prices on some of its commodities because so much of its food is exported. If the export market slumped, he said, Australia would go broke trying to maintain commodity prices.

Although Dillon did not say so, he apparently was stumping for a two-price system. This is a system under which a government buys food from its farmers at one price and then re-sells the food to other countries at a lower figure. The difference is made up by the producing Nation's taxpayers.

Pakistan supported Dillon. Its delegate said the world's big food-producing nations may have to cut back their production within the next 12 months because importing nations lack dollars to pay for food.

Medina Rule Figures Return In Venezuela

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 27 (AP). Steel helmeted troops kept uneasy crowds moving in Caracas today while ministers of the military junta that seized power Wednesday urged management and labor to return to normal production.

The political complexion of the military government headed by Lieut. Col. Carlos Delgado Chalbaud became clearer with the announcement that it would include a large number of politicians prominent during the Medina regime of 1945.

(The army rebelled against the government of Isaias Medina Angarita in 1945 and paved the way for the regime of President Romulo Gallegos, who was later elected by the people. Wednesday's army revolt put Gallegos under house arrest.

(Dispatches from Cucuta, Colombia, today said followers of Gallegos broadcast from a clandestine transmitter within Venezuela that clashes had occurred in the Venezuelan cities of Maracaibo and Caracas between civilians and soldiers.)

The military government said "quiet prevails throughout the country."

All newspapers in Caracas are publishing, but under restrictions imposed by censorship.

The government claimed 85 per cent of the workers in the oil fields were back on the job after a temporary suspension of work.

The labor ministry of the junta announced the labor laws enacted in 1947 will continue in full force.

Col. Jorge Marcano, new minister of communications, arrived from Washington, where he has been military attache to the embassy. He said the ministry would retain all competent employes and there would be no discharges without good cause.

Inspector General Of Consuls Resigns

Miami, Fla., Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Carlos Blank, inspector general of Venezuelan consuls throughout the world, resigned today in protest against the coup that unseated the elected government of Venezuela.

He said the consuls general of New York and Galveston, Tex., also had joined the protest.

Fund Studied To Guarantee Latin Risks

By The Associated Press

Government officials said yesterday several agencies are considering the possibility of the United States setting up a guaranty fund to encourage private American investment in Latin America.

The idea originated, it was said, as a result of the present situation where:

1. American investors are reluctant to start up new enterprises in dollar-short Latin-American countries for fear they won't be able to get their profits out in dollars.

2. Latin-American countries are unable to increase their dollar earnings or raise living standards substantially without the industrial investments this country can provide.

Present planning on a guaranty fund is aimed at giving the American investor confidence of a dollar return on profits from a new enterprise until such time as it can secure its own exchange, and repay the fund's advances.

The current line of thought follows in some respects suggestions for a similar fund made recently by Agustin Edwards, Chilean editor and banker.

Government officials here said for some time several agencies have been exploring possibilities of encouraging United States investment in Latin America through some form of guaranty fund.

Reds Massing for Attack, S. Korea Warned

Seoul, Korea, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—A former North Korean official warned today that the North Korean People's army will start marching on South Korea on the very day the United Nations concludes its General Assembly in Paris.

Chung Sang Chin, former Deputy Minister of Agriculture in the Soviet-sponsored puppet regime, who fled to the south, said the invasion will be delayed only if Soviet troops remain in the north.

In a letter to South Korea Premier Lee Bum Suk, Chung wrote that the Russians want to get their troops out of North Korea first as proof the Soviets have no ambitions in Korea.

Chung told Lee that 200,000 Communist Koreans, freshly returned from the Manchurian campaign, are taking the place of withdrawing Soviet occupation troops.

In Seoul, Maj. Gen. John B. Coulteer, U. S. Army commander in South Korea, reported "satisfactory progress" by the American military mission training and advising new South Korean security forces.

The mission is seeking to ensure that "the Republic of Korea has a well-trained and efficient security force for maintenance of law and order," Coulter said.

Chung told Premier Lee that the top leaders of the North Koreean "Red Army" were trained in Russia and that high Soviet officers, dressed in civilian clothes, continue to work with them and advise them.

Russians Discuss Separate City Rule

Berlin, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Soviet Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky met with his top officials today to discuss establishment of a separate city government for the Russian sector of Berlin, the British-licensed News Agency DPD reported.

The agency attributed the report to "well informed sources close to the Soviet military administration."

The sources were quoted as saying Sokolovsky had ordered Berlin's city council ousted from the City Hall in the eastern sector before municipal elections December 5. Elections have been barred in the Soviet sector.

Allied officials were not able to confirm the DPD report, but they said Russia may set up a separate administration for their part of Berlin after December 5 and perhaps even before.

Soviet secret police sped into the American sector of Berlin before dawn Friday and arrested at gunpoint a Russian officer suspected of desertion. The officer was back in the Soviet sector and the incident was over before U. S. authorities knew about it.

Meanwhile, a Soviet military tribunal has sentenced Dr. Kurt Muecklenberger, head of the Berlin Central Coal Organization, to 3 months and 25 days in jail for defying Russian authority, the German News Agency Dena said.

Dena, American-licensed, said the jail term was to start August 1, which would free Mueckenberger today. His trial began yesterday morning and lasted past midnight. He was arrested by the Russians August 17 after he refused to obey a Soviet order dismissing him.

U. S. Willing For Berlin Money Talk

Paris, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Assistant Secretary of State Willard L. Thorp said today that the United States still is willing to negotiate for the withdrawal of west German currency from Berlin, but only after Russia lifts its blockade of the city.

Thorp reiterated the American stand at a press conference as a high American source warned that the Berlin crisis must be settled soon or not at all in the forseeable future.

Argentine Delegate Juan A. Bramuglia, meantime, was making a desperate last try to work out an acceptable compromise formula for the three western powers and Russia before his term as Security Council president runs out next Tuesday. But his efforts appeared foredoomed to failure.

Trend Blocks Agreement

The western powers do not believe there is any possibility of working out a settlement until the Soviet effort to split Berlin in two has stopped and a trend back toward a unified city and city administration is well under way.

Thorp told newsmen that there is no basis for reports that the United States has in any way withdrawn from the four-power Moscow agreement of August 30 as a basis for negotiation.

This provided for the use of the Soviet-sponsored mark as the sole currency in Berlin and for the lifting of all restrictions on transport between the western zones of Germany and Berlin.

Details were left to the four military governors to work out. Their talks broke down over the timing of the currency and blockade moves and the west's insistence that all four powers share control of the Berlin currency.

Admits Minor Differences

Thorp conceded that there were minor differences between the United States and Britain over how to proceed toward agreement on the currency problem. But he denied there was any fundamental split.

The high American source previously mentioned said the Berlin situation is deteriorating so rapidly that only an immediate solution will prevent virtually permanent division of Berlin into two cities.

Although the West still believes a solution possible, he said, continuation of the present trend will make introduction of the Soviet mark as a single currency for the whole city impossible.

gestions" which the military governors of the western zones submitted to the body.

These suggestions, in effect, advised the delegates against too much centralized power for the government they are forming. The Communists charged the western aide memoire proved the assembly is only "a creation of the occupying powers."

The assembly rejected the Communist proposal, but the western move caused some resentment, even among non-Communist delegates.

West Promises Treat

The Western allies promised Berliners in their sectors tonight a special treat for Christmas.

The combined British-American airlift will fly into the city over the Russian blockade a large quantity of coffee, sweets, honey and fruits for distribution to the 1,200,000 Germans in the three western sectors. Special rations will be authorized.

In another announcement, the western commandants said they had authorized an increase in the amount of insulin for German diabetics. The present daily allowance of 25 units will be increased to 40.

The day's political developments included an indirect admission that the Communist-controlled east has set up a "people's police" force of at least 4000, and maybe more, in Berlin alone.

This admission came in an announcement from ADN that 4000 members of Berlin's people's police demanded in a resolution the arrest of Deputy Mayor Ferdinand Friedensburg and Johannes Stumm, police chief in western Berlin.

King Has Ex-Mayo Surgeon

London, Nov. 27 (U.P.). — Dr. James Rognvald Learmonth, 53-year-old former Mayo Clinic surgeon, will be called in if it is decided to operate on King George's arteries, Palace sources said today.

Meanwhile, informed quarters did not believe amputation of the leg would be considered necessary now. An obstruction in the blood flow of the King's right leg has forced him to cancel public engagements and postpone a trip to New Zealand and Australia.

Learmonth is a ranking expert on the surgery of blood vessels and has carried out many delicate operations on nerves supplying arteries, with excellent results in a large percentage of cases.

He has been professor of surgery at the University of Edinburgh since 1939. He was at Mayo from 1928-32.

Present at earlier consultations, he will be summoned to the council of doctors on Monday, when the King will be given another thorough examination. This checkup is expected to determine just how ill the King is. A bulletin on the King's condition will be issued after Monday's examination.

Doctors hoped the rest they have imposed on the King would help restore circulation to the limb.

Meanwhile, letters and cablegrams poured in from all over the world, including the United States, suggesting remedies for curing the illness.

Some advised the King to carry healing remedies in his pockets; others suggested that he concentrate on faith-healing.

readiness to sign a Chinese-Soviet treaty of "friendship and alliance."

Informants said Chiang blamed many of his Nationalist government's present difficulties on the Yalta agreement in general and the treaty with Russia in particular. Under this treaty Russia received special concessions in Manchuria.

Chiang argued, informants said, that China signed the treaty against its better judgment. It did so, he said, only because of the American diplomatic commitments at Yalta.

Therefore, he is said to have told the President, the United States is obligated to help his government in its present crisis.

foreign troops and foreign military personnel. This was a reference to American and British missions in Greece. The Soviet proposal was rejected 47 to 6.

The Assembly spent the entire day on the Greek-Balkans case.

Dulles said the violent language used by Vishinsky and other opponents of the majority-approved resolution "is confirmation that Greece's northern neighbors are helping the Communist attempts to overthrow the Greek government."

"When men in high official positions assail their colleagues before the United Nations and use violent language," Dulles said, "There are lesser followers to use violent deeds."

The American delegate answered the remark made yesterday by Ales Bebler, Yugoslav delegate, who had said "we are hated because of our form of government."

Dulles said he hopes Bebler did not believe that.

"It is quite true," Dulles said, "speaking for the American people, that they do not want a Communistic form of government for themselves and that they doubt that that form of government is good for any people, but that opinion does not reflect itself in hate. We believe in a world society of diversity and tolerance."

Dulles said the Americans do not hate those who hold conflicting beliefs.

"What we do hate," he said, "is the use of force, violence, terrorism and coercion as methods for making one's views prevail."

Sun Fo Wants U. S. Military Adviser

Shanghai, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Dr. Sun Fo, China's new Prime Minister, said today Nationalist China needs some outstanding American military figure such as Gen. Douglas MacArthur to advise it in the war against Chinese Communists.

The American-educated Dr. Sun—said he believed the American should be appointed supreme military adviser. The government must be prepared to grant him full poweers, he said.

Dr. Sun said he personally believes that China must be prepared to make any reasonable concession to obtain major American military assistance and he will recommend this policy to his cabinet.

He emphasized his cabinet has not yet been organized and that national policies would be formulated only after discussion by the government as a whole. But, he said, it is reasonable to assume that his personal views would have considerable weight in all major decisions.

AEC Asks Dismissal Of Suit by Union

District Court was asked yesterday to dismiss a suit seeking to compel recognition of a CIO electrical workers union as bargaining agent in the field of atomic energy production.

The suit was filed by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union. The action to dismiss was taken by the Atomic Energy Commission and the General Electric Co.

The controversy grows out of AEC's order forbidding the electric company to bargain with the union in the Schenectady, N. Y., plants. Various union officials had refused to take non-Communist oaths or to cooperate with loyalty investigations, it was said.

In seekin_ dismissal on legal grounds, the AEC stated:

"Any continued slowdown or interruption of this supporting work in the Schenectedy area would have serious effects on the common defense and security.

Such action, it was said, "at the present juncture of world affairs" would be too dangerous a risk to run.

Also, it was pointed out that in Schenectady, work is going on to develop the highly important "breeder-type reactor.

"A successful breeder-type reactor would more than replenish the fissionable fuel consumed in operations by converting nonfissionable uranium 238 into new fissionable material," the papers said.

Slated to Hang

5 Dead Now; Man Denies Hex Charge

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Jake Bird, 46-year-old Negro condemned to death for murder, puffed on a fat cigar and smiled slyly today when asked about his double-whammy hex that already is supposed to have claimed five lives.

"I didn't have nothing to do with no hex," Jake said. "That stuff about my hexes is bad. Even the Supreme Court is getting to believe those things—that's why they denied my appeal."

But he never lost his sly smile as he spoke.

It was little less than a year ago that Jake heard Judge E. D. Hodge sentence him to be hanged January 16, 1948, for the ax murder of Mrs. Bertha Kludt and her 17-year-old daughter.

"Wait and see," Jake told Detective Lieut. Sherman Lyons at the time. "You policemen and judges will be settin' and waitin' at the pearly gates a long time before I roll up."

Since then five men connected with the trial have died unexpectedly of heart attacks. The fifth died yesterday.

End of Dock Strike Is Voted In East; Work Call Today

side, the AFL Sailors' Union of the Pacific, demanding a new contract, was not moving any ships to load.

Ryan announced the end of his union's East Coast strike the moment sufficient returns were in to show the 65,000 Atlantic longshoremen had voted to accept a compromise agreement for a 13-cents-an-hour raise.

Ryan made his announcement the moment enough returns were in to show the 65,000 striking East Coast longshoremen had voted to accept a compromise agreement for a 13-cents-an-hour raise.

Acceptance of the terms ended a walkout started 18 days ago when they voted to reject a previous compromise on a 10-cent raise.

The stoppage added up to more than a million man-days on strike, besides thousands of railway, trucking and other workers laid off by the paralysis of business.

It was a paralysis that gripped New York harbor — the world's largest seaport — and the coast from Maine to Virginia.

The strike immobilized the world's mightiest liners, and blocked mails and trade.

"The men will be back on the piers tomorrow morning for anyone who asks them to work," Ryan said.

On the West Coast, 27,000 dock workers in the CIO union headed by Harry Bridges were taking part in the voting but their balloting will not be completed until Sunday.

The only announced opposition to the new Atlantic coast pact came from a group of Brooklyn longshoremen who staged a mass meeting of protest yesterday and called another meeting for tonight.

Ryan, told of the second meeting scheduled, described the group as "disrupters" and "insurgents" and said that anyone attending the meeting was "not loyal to the longshoremen's association."

87 Days on West Coast

The shipping shutdown has lasted 87 days on the Pacific Coast, one of the longest maritime tieups in history, and 18 days in the East.

More than 500 ships have been tied up and estimated losses have been huge.

Pacific Coast shipowners place the cost of the tieup there at about 344 million dollars. At the Atlantic ports, 30 million dollars worth of Marshall Plan goods and millions of dollars worth of commercial cargo are jammed up.

Thousands of employes of steamship lines, railroads, trucking firms and cargo companies have been laid off in the strikes.

A return to work on the East Coast also will end the snarl in transatlantic passenger travel, which has caused many liners to be diverted to Halifax and others to cancel voyages entirely.

The America, queen of the United States passenger fleet, is booked to sail for Europe next Wednesday. The Queen Elizabeth, world's largest liner, is scheduled to sail from Southampton for New York Sunday. The shipping companies had announced the sailings were contingent upon settlement of the strike.

Under the East Coast settlement worked out with the help of Federal mediators, the dock workers will get a 13-cent boost in basic pay of $1.75 an hour and a 19½-cent increase in the night and overtime rate of $2.62½.

The agreement rejected by the longshoremen two weeks ago called for a 10-cent hike in the basic rate.

The new contract being voted on by West Coast dock workers provides for a 15-cent increase in the $1.67 basic hourly rate.

Both settlements also carry other benefits.

There still were some stumbling blocks to complete peace in the Pacific ports.

The AFL Sailors Union of the Pacific announced that the employers would have to meet their terms. They are demanding protection of certain cargo-working rights held by the SUP on coastwise and Alaska ships, and pay boosts comparable to those won by the cooks' and firemen's unions.

The West Coast operators have reached agreements with the CIO marine engineers as well as the longshoremen. They still had to work out settlements with the radio operators, firemen, and cooks and stewards.

Mott School Edges Cook on 'Quizdown,' Is Awarded 19-Volume Encyclopedia Set

A narrow lead of 175 points established in the first half carried Mott School to victory over Cook School yesterday on "Quizdown."

Mott, at Fourth and W sts. nw., and Cook, P and First sts. nw., tied in the second half with the maximum 600 points each in the weekly quiz show sponsored by The Washington Post and broadcast over Station WTOP from 10 to 10:30 a. m. Saturdays.

Final scores were: Cook, 1000; Mott, 1175.

Yesterday's show originated at Garnet Patterson Junior High School, 10th and U sts. nw., and was transcribed because of the Thanksgiving weekend holiday in the schools.

On the basis of 100 points for each question perfectly answered, and each member of the six-man teams being asked two questions, Mott just missed a perfect score of 1200 points.

Stumbling block to the perfect score was the question, "Why is the sun important to us?"

Missed It by a Shadow

Roscoe Lewis III, 9, 6-A grade, of 1225 Jackson st. ne., couldn't quite put it into words. Roscoe, nicknamed "Butch" and owner of two turtles, Snipper and Sniper, said "the sun is important because we couldn't live without it. Nothing would grow without it. It gives us vitamin B-1."

The proper answer should have been that the sun is important because we receive heat and light from it, but the judges gave Roscoe 75 points for his answer.

Jeanne Wheeler, 8, 4-A grade, of 149 W st. nw., was the first member of the Mott sextet to go before the microphone.

Jeanne, who has a mother cat with the rather unique name of "Tommie," and three kittens, correctly answered "Midas" when asked by Quizmaster Vern Hansen the name of "the king who loved gold more than anything else."

Answers in One Word

First before the microphone for Cook was Eleanor Bryant, 9, 4-B grade, of 39 K st. ne. Eleanor, wearing white ribbons in her pigtails, was right on the beam when she said "Hiawatha" was "the name of the Indian boy about whom Henry Wadsworth Longfellow wrote a poem."

Some unusual nicknames were discovered by Quizmaster Hansen in both teams. Ten-year-old Barbara Reason of 1247 Girard st. ne., a 5-A grader at Mott, confessed that she was called "Bones" because "I am so skinny." June Johnson, 9, also a 5-A grader at Mott, admitted to the rhymey name of "Junie- Prunie."

On the Cook side, John Risher, 10, 5-A grade, of 54 M st. nw., divulged that his grandmother calls him "Teapot," while his 6-A grade teammate, Annice Robinson, 11, of 1707 1st st. nw., said she had outgrown "Wootsie Cuddle."

Also doing their best for Cook were: Benjamin Riley, 9, 4-A grade, of 432 N. st. nw.; Mildred Francis, 10, 5-A, of 241 O st. nw., and Donna Anderson, 11, 6-A, of 42 Hanover pl. nw.

Both Schools Get Radios

Completing Mott's lineup were Alvin Douglass, jr., 8, 4-A, of 1018 Hamilton st. ne., and Alva Allen, 10, 6-A, of 2229 M st. ne.

As victor, Mott was awarded a 19-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia, while Cook received a Rand McNally International Edition Atlas. Both schools received an Emerson table model radio.

Ball point pens were awarded to members of the winning team, and automatic pencils to the vanquished.

Judges on the show were the following three teachers: Walter M. Morris, Douglass-Simmons School; Mrs. Edna B. Gary, Slater School, and Mrs. Katherine P. Carr, Bundy School.

Quizdown is produced under the direction of Mrs. Hazel Kenyon Markel, WTOP director of public service and education, and produced by Larry Beckerman. Programs originating in the public schools are produced in cooperation with Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent, and coordinated through the radio committee of the District Public Schools, of which Clyde Huber is chairman.

Last of 1600 Boards 'Queen' to Sail Today

Southampton, England, Nov. 27 (AP).—The last of 1600 passengers tonight boarded the liner Queen Elizabeth, which is expected to sail for New York Sunday after an 11-day delay caused by a dock strike in the United States.

Departure of the ship at 8:15 a. m. (3:15 a. m. EST) had been made contingent on settlement of the strike at New York and other United States ports. The Cunard White Star Line had promised the crew they would not be asked to buck the dock tieup.

Arlington Tops Virginia List With 1192 Traffic Accidents

Arlington County, traversed by several main-line highways, had 1192 traffic accidents for the fiscal year that ended June 30, the highest of any county in the Old Dominion.

The State Division of Motor Vehicles also listed Alexandria among the top 10 cities in number of accidents. The breakdown by cities was:

Richmond, 4147; Norfolk, 2984; Roanoke, 848; Alexandria, 750; Portsmouth, 688; Newport News, 557; Lynchburg, 514; Charlottesville, 318; Danville, 314, and Petersburg, 308.

The lowest accident total was Williamsburg's 34.

The total number of accidents reported for the period was 30,847.

The report showed 605 persons were killed in traffic accidents in the year, while the number of injured persons was 14,610.

The cost of accidents for the period was set at $11,893,835. This figure included both personal and property damage. In December of last year, traffic accidents cost Virginia motorists $1,217,250.

Fluvanna County had the low total of 21 accidents.

Va. Liquor Stores Take 90 Million

Richmond, Va., Nov. 27 (AP).—Virginia's 103 State liquor stores did an over-the-counter business of more than 90 million dollars in the past fiscal year, a report by State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett showed today.

On this business, up more than six million dollars over the previous year, the State realized a net profit of $17,718,577, a gain of $1,215,800 over the 1947-47 period.

Abingdon's store No. 201 led the parade with net sales of $2,376,337 for a store profit of $499,455.

Montgomery Charter Rule Nears Reality

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

Montgomery County's bitterest political issue, the charter, will become fact instead of fancy on Thursday.

At 12:01 a. m. on that day, the "home-rule" document which has been supported with evangelical zeal and fought by every known device, will become law.

But instead of declaring a truce, both sides are now girding for new hostilities.

Battle lines are being drawn for a second legal skirmish on legality of the document, and county citizens who adopted the charter last election day will not know for several weeks the outcome of this phase of the dispute.

Meanwhile, observers are predicting, there will be a potentially explosive transitory period in changing over from the old to the new.

Only Framework Provided

Basis for the belief that a difficult few months lie ahead for the new county government is the fact that the charter, as adopted, provides only a framework for government and does not spell out clearly in minute detail every aspect of how the new machinery will work.

Charter opponents have seized upon the document's brevity to raise questions which cannot be answered, it has been declared.

But there is no dispute over the fact that the charter will become the law of the county on Thursday. Transitory provisions specify that the five county commissioners will immediately become "councilmen" and run the county until the first elected charter council takes office.

As the charter is set up, the first elected councilmen would assume office on January 10 after being voted in at a special election on January 6.

Lawsuit Is Filed

On Friday, however, four of the five commissioners filed a suit attacking legality of the election. Whether they will be given the court injunction they seek against the special election may not be known for several weeks.

Meanwhile, the commissioners will serve as members of an interim council. If successful in their suit, they will continue in office until 1950.

Students of the charter question are predicting there will be even more legal snarls over the charter, possibly in the near future.

At least one county commissioner, who declines use of his name, believes the interim council will possess full powers granted by the charter to the elected council. The remaining commissioners and the board's legal adviser do not agree with him.

Sweeping Powers

The charter gives sweeping powers to county heads to hire a county manager, set up new departments, enact all local legislation previously enacted for the county by the General Assembly and issue millions of dollars in bonds.

Conflicting opinions are held by many, including legal minds on the same side of the fence. James J. Hayden, an attorney and one of five charter drafters, told reporters recently that the interim council would have the "home-rule" legislative authority.

A colleague disagrees, however. He is Frederic P. Lee, leading charter attorney, who believes the commissioners at no time, even if they should remain in office, would possess the extra lawmaking power.

He also expresses the view that the legislative power is transferred from the General Assembly to an elected charter council (not the interim council) and, hence, the State law-making body is forbidden from enacting local legislation for Montgomery. If the commissioners win their suit, he says, no one could enact local laws for the county for the next two years.

Posts to Be Abolished

General agreement exists that when the charter becomes effective Thursday, the jobs of legal adviser to the county commissioners, clerk to the county commissioners and police commissioner are immediately abolished.

Remaining in office until an elected council takes over will be the present county supervisor, the civil service commissioner, and all other county department heads and employes, it is generally agreed.

The charter provides for establishment of departments of public finance, public works, an office of full-time county attorney, and hiring of a 12,000-a-year county manager.

Most observers believe all of the above are specificially exempted from powers to be enjoyed by the county commissioners serving as an interim council.

Seven-Member Council

The first elected charter council will consist of seven members, two elected on an "at-large" basis, and one councilman for each of the five commissioner districts.

Despite the present uncertainty, charter leaders are going ahead with preparation of a slate of seven council candidates who will receive backing of the charter committee in the election. The slate has not been made public. Neither major political party will indorse a slate.

There are only two avowed candidates thus far: Mrs. Alma T. Opal, Takoma Park housewife, and Romeo W. Horad of Silver Spring, a leader of the county's Negro community.

Allen H. Gardner, chairman of the charter committee's nominating committee, said yesterday that a further requirement has been added to those already announced for council nominees. The requirement involves the "ability to work together harmoniously and maintain the good will of the people as a whole." Other tests Gardner said, are "outstanding demonstrated ability, unquestioned integrity and wide acquaintance with Montgomery County affairs.

Montgomery Yuletide Fete List Expands

Jolly old Kris Kringle will get a good workout in Montgomery County, Md., running from one pre-Chhristmas festivity to another.

Bethesda merchants opened a Christmas Lane Friday with day-long festivities, which included free movies and gifts for children. Santa Claus turned on the lights and took over his post at the Santa Claus House on the Hot Shoppe grounds at Wisconsin ave and East-West highway.

Silver Spring's Holiday Lane will be lighted Friday at 7:30 p. m. from the District Line to Colesville pike on Georgia ave. Two lanes of Christmas trees will be formed in the section from the District Line to the underpass and from there to Colesville pike. The trees will be in the center strip.

Special lighting and decorations have been provided for the Silver Spring Shopping Center, centering about a 20-foot Christmas tree. Santa will be in the Holiday House at the Shopping Center daily to greet the children.

The official opening ceremony will be held Friday at 7:30 p. m. at Jesup Blair Community Center Grounds, Georgia ave. and the District Line. Plans have not been completed, but Julius Diamond, chairman of the $10,000 celebration program, said that a treat for the children will be included.

A 30-foot lighted evergreen on the courthouse lawn will be the focal point for the Christmas Lane celebration in Rockville, the county seat. The entrance to the courthouse will be decorated and illuminated and the lane will extend from the block east of the courthouse to the postoffice on the Rockville Pike and from Montgomery ave. to Fayette st. on Commerce lane. The lights will be turned on December 1.

Prizes will be distributed by the merchants December 22, when Santa Claus will attend the celebration on the courthouse lawn. Community singing will be led by Charles D. Giauque and the Layman's Choir.

Plans for Kensington will be discussed at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the Kensington Firehouse. Orin Wian, supervisor of training at the Potomac Electric Power Co., will discuss Christmas lighting at the meeting. The chamber last year inaugurated a home lighting contest, which probably will be held again this year.

Professors Will Study Va. Industries

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 27 (Spl.)—A study of Virginia's industries will be made in 1949 by two University of Virginia faculty members under sponsorship of the Institute for Research in the Social Sciences.

Associate Profs. Frank S. Kaulback and Thomas W. Douglas will examine labor-management relations, tax liabilities in proportion to industrial costs, legislation, transportation rates, routes and services, and other factors that may attract industry to Virginia.

Their research is one of several studies to be made next year by members of the university faculty, all projects set up by the institute. a total of $16,553 has been granted by the IRSS for the projects.

The studies also include work in economics, history, Government, and other fields.

Petrillo to Head Inaugural Concert

James C. Petrillo, boss of the American Federation of Musicians, yesterday was taken up on his offer to add an harmonious note to the inauguration in January.

Melvin C. Hildreth, general Inauguration Committee chairman, said he has appointed Petrillo music chairman of the National Participation Committee, and that the union will sponsor the concert to be given on the eve of the inaugural in the National Guard Armory.

Petrillo wired President Truman the day after election offering to help "make your inauguration a day of harmony in music, as it will most certainly be in our Nation's history."

The Inaugural Committee has received about 15,000 applications for parade seats and more than enough to promise a sellout of $2 bleacher seats. Hildreth had said that "at least 5000" of the low-priced seats will be put on sale.

The municipal architect's office is working overtime to complete specifications for the presidential reviewing stand to be erected in front of the White House. The plans are to be submitted for President Truman's approval Monday.

Stripped down from prewar ornamental motifs, the plans were prepared after the President insisted on simplicity.

Plans also are under way to provide transportation and seating arrangements for disabled veterans at the parade.

The arrangements are being made by Harlan Wood, chairman of the inauguration veterans' committee. Col. Waldron E. Leonard, director of the Veterans' Service Center in Post Square, yesterday suggested that the seats could best be placed in front of the center, so the disabled veterans could have "ringside seats."

Leonard estimated that 500 seats could be constructed over the center, enough space to care for all amputee and paraplegic cases in the area.

Marylander to Fly Abroad Sunday On DP Mission

Baltimore, Nov. 27 (AP).—Frank P. Parish, Taneytown (Md.) dairyman, will fly to Germany Sunday from New York to set up his "Maryland DP Plan" for screening displaced persons for immigration to this country.

Parish, an adviser for the United Ukranian American Relief Committee, Inc., explained his plan as a system whereby the individual DP would be fitted for a specific job or position in the United States.

When possible, Parish said, a picture of the farm or business where the DP would be placed would be furnished the screening agency overseas. The "Maryland DP Plan" was worked out by some 125 Carroll County farmers.

D. C. Hotels Already Gathering Rich Harvest for Inauguration

cellations of reservations than was expected after Mr. Truman's unexpected victory at the polls over Governor Dewey.

But there were some cancellations, notably those made by the Republican National Committee and Republican members of Congress.

The Republican National Committee had reserved space at a number of hotels in town and cancelled it without comment after the election.

The Democratic National Committee, in almost every case, evened the hotel balance sheets by taking the rooms given up by the Republican National Committee.

Several hotels said they had accepted block reservations from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad which will run numerous special trains into Washington the week of the inauguration.

Some hotel managers admitted that they and other members of the Hotel Association of Washington met recently to work out a general agreement on rates and policy to govern during inauguration week.

However a spokesman for the association said he knew nothing of such a meeting and declared it was up to each individual hotel to determine its prices and policy.

Here is the hotel-by-hotel survey:

LAFAYETTE—150 rooms; everything reserved; rates double and 4-day stay required; all reservations must be backed by cash deposits by December 1; may be some openings after that.

MARTINIQUE—90 rooms and booked 95 per cent; no increase in rates but guests must stay 3 to 4 days.

New Lens Reduces Cancer Test Time

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Special lenses are supplementing X-ray photography at Johns Hopkins University Hospital, Baltimore, to safely detect stomach cancer.

The system was devised by Johns Hopkins scientists with a special Schmidt-lens camera obtained for the United States Public Health Services in war-overrun Denmark, they said. The project is financed by PHS funds.

The lens makes the discovery of stomach cancers possible with a minimal amount of X-ray radiation. It is continuing as a 5-year pilot program toward eventual use in mass screening tests of adults over 40, it was said.

Early Detection Important

Stomach cancers, physicians agree, seldom are recognized by their symptoms before they have reached the incurable stage. If the tumors are detected early, their fatal course can be stopped by surgery, up to surgical removal of the entire stomach.

The problem, according to Dr. John F. Roach, associate professor of radiology at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, was to find a safer and less costly means of X-raying the stomach then current photofluoroscopy.

The Schmidt-lens camera, he said, offers the solution through its maximum light-gathering capacity.

The camera has already disclosed photographically eleven authenticated and three suspected cases of stomach cancer out of 1601 screening examinations of adults routinely processed through the hospital's general dispensary.

One in 900 persons over 40 is believed to have undetected stomach cancer.

The special camera used at the hospital to screen patients operates on the same lens principles as the telescopic eye at Palomar, Calif., but employs a 14-inch mirror lens instead of the 200-inch one used by the astronomers.

Use of the Schmidt-lens camera instead of the ordinary X-ray camera, Dr. Roach said, permits physicians to X-ray the abdomen at only slightly more X-ray exposure than used for routine chest X-rays. This, he said, is well within safety limits not only for the patient, but more importantly, for the radiologists conducting the examinations.

With Schmidt-lens camera tests cutting X-ray exposure time to one-twelfth normal photofluoroscopy time, a radiologist can safely examine many patients, day after day, without hazard, the Johns Hopkins scientists said.

The screening test takes from 15 to 20 minutes. Patients are asked to swallow a potion of flavored barium, an opaque powder mixed with water, which photographs in X-ray the stomach contours. Three X-rays are taken, and then the patients swallows a second more concentrated dosage, for three more X-rays.

As far as the patient is concerned, that's all there is to it. The radioologist, however, must be trained to detect deformities of contour that might indicate cancer's growth.

One of the greatest advantages the technique offers for mass screening programs for stomach cancers, its sponsors said, is that it causes the patients no discomfort.

The Johns Hopkins project is being carried on by Dr. Roach; Dr. Robert D. Sloan, instructor in radiology, and Dr. Russell H. Morgan, professor of radiology and director of the school's department of radiology.

IF STOMACH BALKS DUE TO GAS AND BLOAT

Help Get Food Digested to Relieve Yourself of This Nervous Distress

Do you feel all puffed-up and miserable after every meal, taste sour, bitter food? If so, here is how you may get blessed relief in helping your stomach do the job—it should be doing—in the digestion of its food.

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

AMA Session Expected to Draw 3500

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 27 (Spl.).—More than 3500 physicians are expected to convene next week to attend the second interim session of the American Medical Association.

The sessions will open Tuesday at the Municipal Auditorium here, and continue through Friday.

Interim sessions, convened midway between annual general sessions of the AMA, were instituted last year primarily for general practitioners who serve as family physicians rather than specialists in specific branches of medicine.

Special feature of the interim session is the awarding of a gold medal to the outstanding general practitioner selected by the AMA for exceptional service to his community.

Six Major Activities Planned

Six major activities will occupy the physicians during their four-day stay in St. Louis. They include:

1. Scientific sessions, where lectures and scientific papers devoted to topics of general interest to the general practitioner will be delivered.

2. Scientific exhibits, of drug firms, instrument manufacturers and local, State and national health organizations.

3. Technical exhibits, exclusively for the physicians assembled.

4. Sessions of AMA's House of Delegates, where the policies of the medical profession are drafted.

5. Television broadcasts, arranged under sponsorship of the St. Louis School of Medicine and Washington University School of Medicine, here.

6. Medical motion pictures, shown daily to physicians attending.

House of Delegates to Meet

Doctors attending the interim session will have a choice of 21 clinical presentations each morning and afternoon, in addition to 12 general lectures scheduled throughout the session. Demonstrations with patients will also be given.

The AMA House of Delegates will meet Tuesday and Wednesday, under Speaker F. F. Borzell of Philadelphia. Likely to come up for consideration will be sickness insurance programs, spurred on by President Truman's 10-year health program which proposes national compulsory health insurance.

'Blue Baby' Boy, 13, to Get Examination at Johns Hopkins

By Don Olesen
Post Reporter

Mountain Falls, Va., Nov. 26.—Claude Sine, 13-year-old "blue baby," is facing his doubtful future calmly.

On Monday, young Claude, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Sine, will be admitted to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for tests to see whether a delicate heart operation can save him from an early death.

But today, the tall, slim, brown-eyed youngster smiled and quietly said he "wanted to go." And if the operation can help, his neighbors in this isolated mountain community are ready to back him financially.

Claude was born with a heart malformation. It meant that his body did not get enough oxygen from the blood. Most children born with the heart ailment do not live to adulthood.

To understand just why the game 13-year-old can take his future so well, you have to understand some of his past.

For Claude, his parents, his five brothers and sisters, the boy's heart trouble has been a continuing thing, like bills due and taxes to pay. Like other problems, the Sines accepted it.

In a way Claude Sine has been living in a sort of vacuum since he was 4. It was then that "he began getting awful sick spells and nose-bleeds," Mrs. Sine recalls.

She fingered the towel she'd put around her head to hide a cold finger wave. "We were living in Darnestown, Md., then. A doctor told us he was a "blue baby."

The Sines were in the warm "front room" of their neat, small frame house. Through a window you could see the Shenandoah Ranges rising to the west. Claude stood shyly around the corner of a door while his mother spoke.

"I knew then he wasn't like other children. We had to keep him from playing with the other children—he took sick so often.

"He just got through a part of the first grade, then we had to take him out of school. He can't write but a few words, but he can copy nice from a letter. He don't know how to read much."

Isolated from life himself, Claude lives in a community nearly as isolated. Mountain Falls lies 15 miles from Winchester, Va.—10 miles from the nearest major highway. The sparsely settled mountain community is 5 miles from the nearest telephone, and its children go 36 miles to school in Gore, Va.

In his shy, friendly way—and with his unsure future always before him—Claude has adjusted to the community around him. Unable to play himself, he likes to umpire baseball games.

He goes to the nearby Mountain View Methodist Church, where he proudly admits he has a "perfect attendance record."

But the high spot in Claude's life is the local 4-H Club, meeting in the Friendly Grove Community House two miles away. His father, a gaunt, friendly farmer, tobacco-brown from the sun, says the club members "can't have a meeting without him."

If you prod the boy, he'll admit his biggest interest in life in "stock"—cattle, and "especially horses." His father says he often "knows when our cow is sick before we do."

The community of Mountain Falls, where people largely "raise their living" by farming, is ready to back Claude with what resources it has. A neighbor, Mrs. Gertrude Cooper, will organize a bake sale and "money shower" for the boy if the operation is decided upon.

Other neighbors take him to and from Winchester when the delicate boy has to visit the doctor—the Sines' truck is "too rough." "Folks bring him fruit, candy and ice cream," Mrs. Sine says.

On Monday, or as soon after that as possible, Johns Hopkins will determine whether the surgical operation, originated by Drs. Alfred Blalock and Helen B. Taussig, will save Claude.

Some "blue baby" cases cannot be operated upon. But 85 per cent of the roughly 800 cases the hospital has treated with the special technique during the past four years have improved.

"If they can operate," Mrs. Sine said today, "I feel like Claude will be a new boy." Standing beside her, Claude nodded.

Boy Accused in Fatal Shooting of Brother, 9

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 27 (AP).—Donald Hayes, 14, of near Smithsburg, today faced a charge of manslaughter in what police called the "accidental" shooting of his 9-year-old brother, Carol, last Saturday.

Carol was found dead with a rifle bullet through his head about 200 yards from his home after he and his brother and a cousin went on a hunting trip. Police surmised that Donald's gun went off accidentally and killed his brother.

D. C. Doctor Writes About Infertile Man

Clinical history and complete physical examination of the husband is of primary importance in seeking the cause of childless marriages.

Dr. Ivy A. Pelzman of the Shoreham Hotel, stresses this in an article in the current issue of Medical Annals of the District of Columbia, in which he declares infertility in the male to be the causative factor in one third of childless unions.

Although causation of impaired fertility cannot be found in the majority of cases, a certain number of borderline patients with subfertility are improved and pregnancies are accomplished, Dr. Pelzman wrote.

Modern techniques, despite frequent discouragements, have resulted in pregnancies in a "sizable number of instances." Often vitamins, glandular treatments, constitutional therapy and operative intervention have proven successful on sterility, it was stated.

On the other hand, Dr. Pelzman wrote: "At the present time, it can be definitely stated that there is no hormone which can be regarded as a reliable specific for spermatic deficiency."

Meat Supply Drop Forecast for 1949

Chicago, Nov. 28 (AP).—Less meat next year despite the current record corn crop was forecast today by H. M. Conway, market analyst for the National Live Stock Producers' Association.

"Everything points," said Conway in his monthly report, "to accumulating feed supplies rather than producing livestock products."

Conway said, "Corn support prices discourage live stock production and feeding and, to further restrict meat supplies, nothing is more potent than the threat of price controls and rationing." The net result for 1949 will be, he added, "the average consumer cannot be assured a per capita meat supply equal to this year."

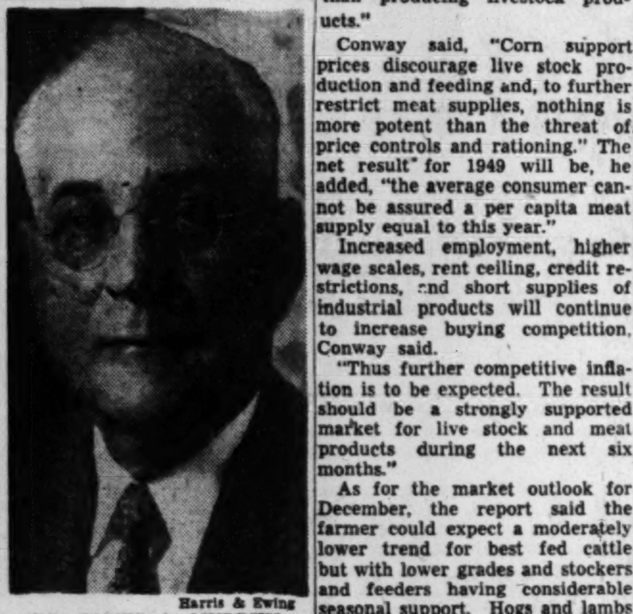
Increased employment, higher wage scales, rent ceiling, credit restrictions, and short supplies of industrial products will continue to increase buying competition, Conway said.

"Thus further competitive inflation is to be expected. The result should be a strongly supported market for live stock and meat products during the next six months."

As for the market outlook for December, the report said the farmer could expect a moderately lower trend for best fed cattle but with lower grades and stockers and feeders having considerable seasonal support. Hogs and lambs will be generally steady to substantially stronger.

Dr. J. A. Murphy

D. C. School Health Head To Retire



Harris & Ewing

DR. JAMES A. MURPHY

Time now for leisure

Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, who has been in charge of the health of District School children since 1916 as director of the Health Department's Bureau of School Medical Inspection, will retire Tuesday.

Dr. Murphy, who is 70, has headed the bureau since its establishment 32 years ago, watching his staff expand from 12 to 30 medical inspectors, plus 3 pyhsiotherapists, and half a dozen trained clinic aides.

Among the duties of his staff are investigating all handicapped children in the District, and making recommendations to the Board of Education on their proper placement.

Clinics Established

Under Dr. Murphy, the bureau has established four dental clinics (1918), an eye clinic (1914), a pediculosis (lice) clinic (1942), and a ringworm clinic (1944), the last to cope with a serious epidemic of the disease.

While as many as 10 per cent of the enrollment in some schools was affected with ringworm four years ago, less than 1 per cent now suffers from this disease.

A point of particular pride with Dr. Murphy is the bureau's audiological or hearing clinic which he feels has done "pioneer" work in evaluation and placement of children with hearing loss. This year alone, the clinic has uncovered about 30 cases of deafness among pre-school children whose learning processes would have been seriously retarded had their handicap gone unnoticed, according to Dr. Murphy.

A native Washingtonian, Dr. Murphy was graduated from Central High School here in 1899, and later from the Normal School for Teachers, and the George Washington Medical School.

Interned at Garfield

After an interneship at Garfield Hospital, and three years of practice in the District, he joined the United States Indian Service in 1908 as its first chief medical supervisor. For the next eight years he traveled to nearly every Indian reservation coping with tuberculosis and trachoma, and establishing the first dental clinic for Indians.

In 1916 he returned to the District as Director of the Bureau of School Medical Inspection for the Health Department, and has remained in that job since, except for brief service in the first World War.

Health Officer Dr. George C. Ruhland, commenting on the director's retirement, said: "We will miss Dr. Murphy. He is a man in whom professional skill has been blended with a warm sympathy for his fellowman and a fine sense of humor. In his long service to the District . . . Dr. Murphy has gained our lasting respect."

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools for the District, called Dr. Murphy's career with the schools "a good picture of the growth of the medical services to the children."

"He will have the well-earned satisfaction of leaving a service broadened and strengthened by his efforts," the superintendent said.

Dr. Murphy lives with his wife, the former Olivia Reaney whom he married in 1908, at 75 Observatory cir. nw.

Dean Gives Bond For Man Selling Dogs to Hospital

Baltimore, Nov. 26 (AP).—The dean of Johns Hopkins Medical School put up his home yesterday to cover the bond of a man charged with cruelty to animals. The animals, 20 dogs and 60 cats, were being brought to the medical school for experimental purposes.

The accused, John S. Tuck, 31, of Hershey, Pa., was arrested on a complaint by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

He was released after the dean, Dr. Alan M. Chesney, put up his house as assurance of his later appearance.

Tuck said he purchased the animals at Hershey and brought them to Baltimore in a truck to sell to the Hopkins and University Hospitals.

120-Acre Harvest

Legless Man Doubles Corn Crop Average

By the United Press

The Veterans' Administration last night told the story of a legless war veteran who recently harvested a 120-acre corn crop twice as rich as the estimated national average.

The veteran is Ralph G. Neppel, 25, of Carroll, Iowa. Operating his own tractor, and doing his own plowing and disking, Neppel produced a crop of about 100 bushels an acre. The average for the Nation is estimated at 41.7.

His only complaint, the veterans' agency reported, is that he wears out his artificial legs too fast. He lost both legs above the knee in December, 1944, in the explosion of a German shell at Birgel, Germany.

Neppel got the Medal of Honor for his valor on that occasion.

Neppel's farm totals 240 acres, of which he put half in corn.

Farmers' Protests Forecast Battle Over Price Supports

By The Associated Press

"Grass roots" protests against possible lower Government price supports on major crops in 1950 may lead the Truman Administration to ask the new Congress to change existing farm programs.

Farmers' criticism is directed principally at price support provisions of a long-range farm act passed by the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress, and signed by President Truman. Those provisions would reduce greatly price supports on cotton, wheat, corn and some other crops from present levels.

Objections Registered

Objections by farmers to the new program are flowing into the Agriculture Department. Concern also has been expressed by some members of Congress, particularly from the cotton South. Some uneasiness about the new law was evident at a recent convention of the National Grange, at Portland, Me.

The matter is high on the program of the convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation, to be held at Atlantic City next month.

Officials close to Secretary of Agriculture Brannan said the Administration has an "open mind" on farmer complaints, and that it welcomes suggestions for possible amendments to the law.

The Administration, these sources said, will depend heavily on views expressed by delegates at a Nation-wide conference of Government farm officials to be held at St. Louis December 6-9. It will be made up largely of State farmer committeemen who help administer the department's far-flung farm programs.

Dissatisfaction of the cotton South with the new farm law has been expressed by Senator Thomas (D., Okla.), and Representative Cooley (D., N. C.), who are expected to become chairmen of the agriculture committees in the Senate and House.

They have announced that they will demand a revision of the so-called "flexible" price support provision of the new law, under which support prices of major crops would be determined by the supply.

Meeting to Solve Base Point Problem Soon Is Proposed

By the United Press

Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.) yesterday asked the Federal Trade Commission chairman to sit down with his subcommittee and "work out a solution" to end "confusion" over a recent commission ruling.

Capehart, whose trade policies subcommittee is studying a commission order outlawing so-called "basing-point" pricing systems, made the request in a letter to FTC Chairman Robert E. Freer. The subcommittee will resume hearings Monday.

The commission's ruling, upheld by the Supreme Court, outlawed the basing-point pricing system used by the cement industry. In effect, it forbids the industry to absorb freight rates in selling their product for the same price all over the country.

Many businessmen have contended the ruling would require all industries to sell their goods at FOB mill prices, with consumers paying the freight. They have told the subcommittee this would disrupt the economy of many areas.

Capehart said evidence before the subcommittee indicates the ruling is "troubling businessmen and impeding business expansion."

He wrote Freer that the subcommittee wants "the official view of the commission at public hearings." These views, he said, "should certainly be given by its chairman."

So far, the Indiana Republican said, the only testimony defending the ruling has come from "theoretical witnesses such as economists and Trade Commission experts." He said, "The committee would welcome businessmen who could give testimony showing the arguments in favor of FOB pricing."

Capehart said he had suggested twice before that the FTC send an official spokesman to testify. But the only FTC representatives to appear so far have said they were unable to speak for the commission, Capehart complained.

Hospital Votes to Buy Property for New Unit

Baltimore, Nov. 27 (AP).—The University of Maryland took its first step yesterday to add a $1,500,000 psychiatric unit to the university hospital.

Its board of regents voted to buy the property of the English Lutheran Church, in the same block as the hospital, for $200,000, less an allowance of $4250 for an organ, which the church plans to remove.

Possibility of Rate Increase For Electricity Is Foreseen

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—The electric power industry today saw a possibility of increases in rates, which have been on the decline since shortly after the First World War.

Edison Electric Institute, trade organization of the Nation's privately owned power companies, took its first official published recognition of a possible rate increase in an "information booklet."

The institute said the price of electricity for residential use has declined to a point 11 per cent below the 1935-39 base used by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in its consumer price index. And while the electric rates have been declining, the institute adds, the overall cost of living average has increased 61 per cent.

"Post-war conditions have brought the cost of all elements entering into the production and delivery of a kilowatthour of electricity to heights far exceeding any previously reached," the booklet said.

"It is unlikely that this inflationary pressure will halt or ever necessitate a reversal—small compared with other price increases—of the past trend in the price of electricity."

Ballot Accusation Denied by Frisbie

A denial that Arlington election ballots were "improperly" counted November 2 has been filed in the county's Circuit Court by Alfred E. Frisbie, successful candidate for reelection to the Arlington County Board.

Frisbie, who won reelection by a 129-vote margin over Independent Lee Potter, said yesterday he had filed a formal answer to a suit instituted November 17 by 20 county residents, who called for a recount of votes after citing alleged "errors" in the tabulation of ballots.

Frisbie said his answer denied all allegations made by the petitioners, who are represented in the suit by Attorneys Edgar Pumphrey, chairman of the local Republican committee, and Malcolm D. Miller, chairman of the Better Government League.

A date for a hearing of the recount petition and Frisbie's answer probably will be set during the December term of the court, officials said.

The petition asking a recount attributed some errors to the fact that precinct workers were overtaxed after working long hours with inadequate help.

Among specific errors, it claimed that a ballot at Ashton Heights Precinct, marked for Potter, was voided after it was found that one corner was "slightly torn"; that in Columbia Precinct an "extra shift" of election officials which joined the regular workers after the polls closed had "no known Republicans in it"; that in Park Lane Precinct ballots were taken to voters in automobiles outside the voting places, and that in Virginia Highlands Precinct, an election judge was observed by a watcher to read off "two Potter votes for Frisbie."

Alexandria Gets New Water Source

The Alexandria Water Co. yesterday announced purchase of the dam and water rights of the Occoquan Co. and the Occoquan Hydro-electric Co. as a new water source for the nearby Virginia area.

Company officials, declining to disclose the purchase price, said the new property eventually would provide an additional daily yield of about 20 million gallons of water to the utility's existing resources. Acquisition of the property was described as part of a planned program to meet future water needs in Alexandria and its rapidly growing environs.

Existing resources, officials said, yield from seven to eight million gallons a day, of which about six and one-half million gallons is the present minimum need.

The two newly acquired companies, formerly owned by separate corporations, are both situated on the lower reaches of Occoquan Creek, about 18 miles south of Alexandria.

According to Howard C. Richards, manager of the Alexandria utility, steps already have been taken to provide for supply, purification, pumping and transmission facilities necessary to introduce the new supply into the firm's Alexandria mains. Some contracts already have been awarded, Richards said, and actual installation of transmission mains is expected to begin about March 1, 1949.

To provide service to new areas, some of which still depend on wells, Richards said, a separate firm to be known as the Virginia Water Co. has been formed. It will purchase water from the Alexandria company and in turn distribute it to county residents.

Final organization of the new company has not been completed, according to Richards, although it already is chartered by the State Corporation Commission. Its representatives are planning to meet in the near future with officials of near-by municipal corporate bodies to determine water requirements in sections of Fairfax County it intends to serve.

Atomic Collision Is Photographed

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP).—A special camera sent 70,000 feet aloft in a balloon cluster has photographed a multi-collision of atomic particles.

The photograph, taken by University of Chicago scientists, shows a high energy cosmic ray particle striking the core of an atom in the air. The collision created a meson which in turn was absorbed by another atomic core. The second atomic core then exploded.

Marcel Schein, professor of physics and member of the university's Institute for Nuclear Studies, said he believed the photograph was the first ever taken of a cosmic ray particle causing a secondary reaction.

Corcoran Gallery Plans 'Cavalcade' Of Art for Sesqui

Corcoran Gallery of Art hopes to line up "the most comprehensive exhibition of American historical paintings ever arranged" for the sesquicentennial celebration here in 1950.

The exhibition will cover "the tremendous sweep of American history from the moment the shores of America were sighted down to the present," according to Edward Boykin, director of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission.

Hermann W. Williams, jr., director of the gallery, hopes to include at least 300 paintings in the exhibition. The gallery also plans to publish a book reproducing the "pictorial cavalcade."

The paintings from private collections and public galleries in this country and abroad, will include works by American and foreign artists, and will represent every State.

Factional Dispute Stalls AVC Meeting

Cleveland, Nov. 27 (AP).—The American Veterans Committee's third national convention bogged down today in a factional fight which forced the 1500 delegates into another unscheduled night session.

A conflict between the administration's independent progressive group and the progressives crowded aside all other business, except a speech by Murray D. Lincoln, president of the Cooperative League of the U. S. A.

Resolutions were debated and put to vote to lift the suspension of 13 New York City chapters, return the charter withdrawn from the Ernie Pyle Chapter of New York, and restore to membership Richard Crohn and Attorney Morris Pottish of New York. Tabulation of the vote was expected to be completed late tonight.

Last night delegates, by a close vote, refused to seat representatives of the 13 suspended chapters, and the Ernie Pyle Chapter, or to admit Pottish as a delegate.

The dispute first reached a showdown stage following a meeting last September of the New York metropolitan area council. The council, with Pottish presiding, seated Crohn as a delegate after Crohn had been suspended by the national officers for lending AVC's name to partisan politics by appearing at a Wallace-for-President rally.

Iowa Youths' Steers Sweep Junior Show

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP).—Two Iowa farm youths proudly swept two of the top honors today at the International Livestock Exposition.

Bob Schmidt, 18, a 4-H Club members of Delmar, won the top award in the Junior Grand Championship Steer competition when his 1125-pound Aberdeen Angus calf, Black Boy, was acclaimed best of the junior show.

Glenn Mommsen, 20, of Miles, a neighbor of Schmidt's, took the second highest award, Reserve Grand Champion, with a 975-pound Aberdeen Angus, Peanuts.

The steer cost Schmidt $125. He bought it in October, 1947, and fattened it into a champion. Mommsen, also a 4-H Club member, has shown animals at the International three times previously.

Other runnersup in the final competition were Herman W. Alber, jr., of Dixon, Ill., showing the champion Shorthorn steer; Leo Kerlick, Bangor, Okla., reserve champion Shorthorn; James Campbell, Garber, Okla., champion Hereford, and Harland Stewart, also of Garber, reserve champion Hereford.

Claude Millwee, the 19-year-old Fort Cobb (Okla.) youth whose Shorthorn steer, Big Boy, was acclaimed grand champion of the entire exposition last year, failed to reach the junior finals today.

Israel Aid Fund Pledged By Hadassah

Junior Hadassah pledged $201,300 for aid to Israel yesterday in the closing sessions of a three-day convention at the Statler Hotel.

Most of the fund will be directed to the Israeli children's village, Meier Shfeyah, near Haifa. The remainder will be given to other rehabilitation and educational services for young Jewish refugees.

The delegates numbering some 1000, passed a resolution asking the President and State Department to "work out a real American policy in regard to Israel; not to follow the British line in the United Nations in insistence on the Bernadotte plan, but to remain faithful to the larger objectives of the partition resolution."

Miss Zelda Funk of Brooklyn, N. Y., was reelected national president of Junior Hadassah for her third term. Miss Ralene Levy of Staten Island, N. Y., and Miss Sarah Neiman of Brooklyn were reelected vice presidents.

New officers chosen yesterday included Miss Pearl Greenberg of Brooklyn, and Miss Rhea Owrutsky of Philadelphia, vice presidents; Miss Doris Greenberg of Kansas City, Mo., secretary, and Miss Edna Turk of Brooklyn, treasurer.

At 11 a. m. today, the delegates will visit the Israeli mission at 2210 Massachusetts ave. nw., in observance of the first anniversary of the U. N. resolution to partition Palestine, November 29, 1947.

They will be received by Uriel Heyd, assistant to Eliahu Epstein, special representative to the United States of the Israeli government.

Port Tobacco Meeting

The third quarterly meeting of the Society for the Restoration of Port Tobacco, Md., will be held at 8 p. m. Wednesday at the Hawthorne Country Club, near La Plata. Planning committee reports are to be presented.

Chicagoan Steps On Man's Toes; Is Shot Fatally

Chicago, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Joseph Grzeda, 27, accidentally stepped on another man's toes today, but Grzeda's apologies were not accepted. He was shot and killed a few minutes later.

Grzeda was in a sandwich shop when he stepped on the toes of another customer. The customer and his companion followed Grzeda out of the shop and into an alley, where Grzeda was shot and killed.

A police squad found Charles Tanthorey, 26, standing over the body with a gun in his hand. Raymond Fassett, 40, Tanthorey's brother-in-law, was nearby. Both were arrested.

The Federal Diary
by Jerry Kluttz

1950 Budget Slashes Are Reported Taking Up Funds for Salary Hikes

The President is reported to have made slashes in the 1950 budgets of three more Federal departments, Commerce, Justice, and Labor. Earlier, he ordered a score of independent agencies to tighten their belts.

Even though the proposed budgets are marked "top secret," it's known that the big cut took place in the requests for funds to pay the recent $330 pay raise to about 900,000 classified employes. And slashes also were made in the personnel, budget, payroll, accounting, and purchasing offices, in both dollars and employes.

The Commerce Department is said to have been ordered to absorb just about all of the cost of the $330 pay raise—a policy that could force it to lay off a few employes before next June 30.

The Justice Department, it's reported, will be required to soak up about 75 per cent of the cost of the pay boost, which could mean that it, too, will be forced to either lay off or not to fill jobs as they become vacant.

The Labor Department, it's rumored, fared better than either Commerce or Justice. The President, through the Budget Bureau, is said to have okayed funds for it to meet most of the pay raise cost, and in addition, to hire several hundred more employes. However, the department definitely didn't get all of the money it requested.

After all, the department had been kicked and stripped of most of its functions. A new cut would have just about put it out of business. The President publicly promised during the campaign to rebuild the department, and it will take money to do it.

The word at Commerce, Justice and Labor is the same—that we'll have one of the tightest budgets in years.

Incidentally, as I reported here Friday, most of the agencies will get additional funds to meet the pay raise cost for the remainder of this year. That's because the cost already is committed. The reductions are in the 1950 budget which becomes effective next July 1.

Even if an agency gets the same amount of money in 1950 as it has for this year (minus possible supplementals), it will be forced to cut off from 7 to 10 per cent of its employes if it must absorb the pay raise cost. In dollars, the $330 raise added about 10 per cent to the personnel cost of the average agency. To soak up that cost simply means fewer people.

Without exception, every agency that has gone before the Budget Bureau review board to justify its 1950 budget has been asked why it can't absorb the pay raise cost.

NEW PAY RAISE? This new economy drive raises a much bigger issue for the Federal worker—whether the Administration will spearhead another general pay raise for him.

It's the educated guess of several insiders that the President definitely will not ask Congress to enact another pay raise bill for employes, even though he described the July raise as inadequate. If he planned to raise salaries, they insist, he wouldn't be so tough on allowing funds to pay the cost of the $330 increase.

In general, it's believed that the President will ask Congress to pay higher salaries to Federal executives who haven't had any salary boosts and for a few other Government officials. One official told me that pay raises for the military people had White House priority over any new increase for classified and postal workers.

It's known at the White House that the Hoover Commission has in mind an entirely new system for fixing Federal salaries—a system revealed here several days ago. It would be no surprise to me if the President threw his support behind the Hoover plans.

Cure for Job Description Blues

If you've job description blues,
Want to cure it in a day;
Don't let the usual remedies
Lure you from the easy way.
Save your aspirin and whisky
For some other, darker time.
Lay aside those pills, they're risky,
Use the age-old safer line.

If your chief's a woman, sir,
Pat her on the back and purr,
My, but you look swell today,
Then slip the job sheet back to her.

Now, let me see, you say at once,
You look so smart today.
It makes me feel just like a dunce,
You write it out, what do you say?
And so the flattered lady cites
A ton of duties new to you.
You're fascinated as she writes
So many things you never do.

Girls, bring your supervisor posies,
Run her errands, dilly, dally, shirk.
Ply her with cokes and roses,
Never mind the silly work.
You travel faster in this way
Than any that you ever saw.
Perish the thought, someone may say.
Some say there ought to be a law.

Rheumatism Congress To Get $15,000 Grant

Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele of the Public Health Service announced yesterday that he had approved a grant of $15,000 to help finance the International Congress of Rheumatic Diseases in New York from May 30 to June 3, 1949.

The Congress is sponsored by the International League against Rheumatism. It is expected to bring together the world's leading authorities on rheumatic diseases, including arthritis.

Shoppers Again Jam Stores for Yule Goods

Traffic Is Reported Much Lighter Than During Friday's Complete Tie-up

Energetic shoppers continued to pack Washington's downtown stores yesterday, but police reported traffic was "much lighter" than on Friday when record crowds jammed the area.

Pedestrians surged across F st. intersections in lines six or eight deep, and most stores reported buying volume was equal to that on Friday. But a cab took five minutes to make the trip from 6th to 15th st. along F st. yesterday, compared to about 20 minutes for the same ride Friday.

E. C. Giddings, Capital Transit Co. vice president, reported downtown bus and streetcar lines were delayed 5 to 10 minutes from 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. yesterday, whereas delays on Friday ran as high as 30 minutes.

A total of 42 extra streetcars plus as many more buses were added to normally light Saturday schedules, Giddings said.

Police were stationed at six extra downtown crossings, usually manned only during the Christmas rush, in expectation of another traffic tangle. But so far as traffic went it turned out to be 'just an average Saturday, after all," according to Lieut. Edward H. Sennott of the Traffic Division.

There were no complete traffic tie-ups, though there were Friday, Sennott said, and only half a dozen extra men were on duty. Friday's unexpected congestion forced police to send 19 extra men downtown.

Emergency No Parking signs on the south side of F st. in the 1200 block considerably speeded traffic there, according to police.

The fringe parking lot at 4th and Constitution ave. nw. took care of about 400 shoppers' cars, while on Friday the lot accommodated 800 cars and was full most of the day according to its owner, B. K. Segal.

Four Persons Face Shoplifting Charges

Four persons were charged yesterday in Municipal Court with shoplifting in department stores here crowded with Christmas shoppers.

Willie A. Stevens, 58, no fixed address, was given $25 fine for stealing a billfold valued at $2.40 from the Hecht Co.

Mary Lee Knox alias Mary Knox Smith, 31, of 1404 Swann st. nw., was charged with putting on a $69.95 coat in the Hecht Co. and trying to walk out with it. Her case was continued until December 21.

Alva K. Randall, 38, of 1240 6th st. nw., was charged with stealing four pairs of gloves worth $24 from Sears-Roebuck. The case was continued until December 2.

John T. Jones, 36, of 1013 8th st. ne., was charged with stealing $2.50 in sweaters from Lansburgh's. The continuance date is December 1.

2 Serious

Oil Stove Explodes, 4 Burned

Four persons were injured, two seriously, when an oil stove exploded last night at 1320 13th st. nw. One man jumped to safety from a second-story window.

Burning oil which showered three downstairs rooms seriously burned James Byrd, 40, and Paul Davis, 56, on the face and shoulders. They were treated at Emergency Hospital and later transferred to Gallinger.

Miss Lottie Moore, 40, and her brother, Edward Moore, 45, suffered cuts and bruises when they tried to escape from the burning building. They were treated at Emergency and released. Wesley Alsbery, 60, who jumped from a second-story window, was not injured.

Moore ran from the house and was not located for almost an hour. He was found in a neighbor's home and was taken to the hospital after firemen had left.

Cause of the explosion was not immediately determined.

Praying Woman Robbed of $55 and Railroad Ticket

Miss Catherine P. Susic, 25, a Veterans Administration clerk who lives in Kansas Hall at Arlington Farms, entered St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G sts. nw., at 5 p. m. yesterday to pray.

While she knelt in prayer somebody stole her handbag, which contained $55 in bills and a round-trip railroad ticket to Chicago.

Miss Susic came to Washington from Des Moines, Iowa, last September. She's been in Des Moines for every Christmas—until now. She had figured her money down to the last penny and purchased the ticket to Chicago, which is part of the way to Des Moines.

She told police she would be satisfied even if the thief kept the money but returned the railroad ticket.

Every Day Is Christmas in 'Santa Heim'

IN TOY TOWN—The old town hall of Savage, Md., has been turned into a toy shop—a delight to any youngster. And the community itself is becoming a toyland under Harry (Santa) Heim, manufacturer of Christmas decorations. Mrs. Mary E. Lang demonstrates the toys

Maryland Town Begins Transformation Into Toyland

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Savage, Md., Nov. 27.—Santa Claus is coming to town—Santa Heim town—in twentieth century style next month.

Right now, Santa Heim Town is the secluded village of Savage, midway between Washington and Baltimore, a mile off the Washington blvd.

By Christmas, however, the town's new owner, Harry Heim, one of the country's largest manufacturers of Christmas tree decorations, hopes to transform the picturesque community into a veritable fairyland of toys to be known as Santa Heim—Santa's home.

Already the town is humming with pre-holiday activity. Heim's plant has 400 workers turning out 65 million Christmas tree globes, estimated at two thirds of the Nation's needs this year. It is the income from these that will finance Santa Heim, the 15-year dream of Harry Heim.

28,000 Colored Lights

This week workmen were bustling about the town of 1400 population stringing up 28,000 colored electric lights that will ring the town's streets. Others were busily renovating antiquated, run-down houses into bright, cheerful homes decorated in a Christmas motif.

In the community hall, officials of the town's three churches were busily making sales from a stock of 2000 different toys to youngsters drawn from about the countryside. The profits go to the churches, Heim said. Just outside, eight "real, live" reindeer were being cooed to, whistled at and yelled at by youngsters of various ages.

In one corner of the large plant, where the Savage Manufacturing Co., one of the country's oldest cotton duck plants, previously functioned, a workman was spraying trees with bright color paints for distribution around the town.

Heim's office, in a corner of the community hall, was a beehive of activity as ambitious plans for purchase of lifesize, motor-driven animals and the giant animal-shaped balloons used in New York City Thanksgiving Day parades were completed.

'Only the Beginning'

Plans for redecorating the town's tiny postoffice and getting it in the holiday spirit with giant candy canes along the walls and for erection of nursery rhyme cutout figures such as "Little Boy Blue" and verses on billboards were also being made.

But these preparations are "only the beginning," according to 64-year-old Heim. By Christmas, he hopes a petition by 500 of the town's adults to the Postoffice Department for renaming the town "Santa Heim" is approved and the town is officially put on the map.

However, he is already receiving anxious letters from the younger set. One received yesterday declaimed in unevenly printed letters:

"I would like a dide doll with clothes to fit her. A bassennett. Also a carriage.

"I am nine years old and am a good girl sometimes."

It was signed Judy Stevens, 1815 North 14th st., Arlington.

Another from Wayne Michael, 300 Tennessee ave. ne., Washington, D. C., disclosed, "I am a little boy in the 4-A grade. I want you to bring me a Texan Gun and Holster" among other things, but then the thoughtful correspondent added, "Please don't forget my little brother three years old and he wants a car to ride in."

Feels Like Santa Claus

Heim commented, between chuckles, as he opened the letters, that he felt like Santa Claus. He said the letters will be answered with an invitation to visit the novel town and a glass trinket inclosed for the parents of the youngster.

Heim, however, is not a man who plans to play Santa Claus. His dream has a solid core of commercial practicality. Although admission to the town and its year-round exhibits will be free, he is hoping to interest toy manufacturers in setting up plants on his land along a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad spur leading into the town.

In addition, he has plans for a resort hostelry to house persons attracted to the town. The planned community includes proposals for a community hospital, an artificial lake ending in a high waterfall, a park along the Little Patuxent River, a permanent exhibit of real and motorized animals, a miniature farm complete with pigs, cows and horses and a toy train that will carry children around to see the sights.

Heim plans to bring special trains of Christmas tree globe buyers into the town in the spring for a showing of his products. He also expects to open up subdivisions of new houses for sale to employes of his firm and the other plants he hopes to attract to the village.

A native Baltimorean, Heim has been making Christmas tree balls for 15 years. Last August, after the Savage Manufacturing Co., sole industry of the town, announced it was closing, Heim purchased the plant and most of the homes and land in the vicinity. Now he plans to spend from 4 to 5 million dollars in making it a Nation's drawing card.

The village will be formally opened with an all-day ceremony December 11, plans for which are now being made.

Tray of Rings Valued At $2000 Is Stolen

It was a busy shopping day in the Leeds Jewelry Co., 725 7th st. nw., yesterday, so busy, in fact, that somebody walked off unnoticed with a tray of diamond rings valued at $2000.

The theft was reported to police by Wineva Coleman, manager of the store. She said the tray of men's rings was lifted from a show window. The loss was not discovered until after closing.

Sick Youngsters to Suffer If Chest Drive Falls Short

Twenty-two sick and undernourished youngsters, now in the care of the Children's Country Home, 18th and Bunker Hill rd. ne., are going to feel it if the Community Chest campaign fails to reach its $4,566,790 goal.

The home, which cares for convalescent children at fees limited to their families' ability to pay, is more than 75 per cent Chest-supported. If the institution's Chest allotment is cut this year, Miss Elizabeth Van Wagner, its superintendent, says it's bound to mean fewer children can be cared for.

Food and clothing budgets have been reduced to a minimum for the past few years, Miss Van Wagner says, and last year graduate nurses were replaced by trained—but lower paid—nonregistered nurses.

"I just don't know how we'll cut any more," the superintendent said yesterday. "If we take fewer nurses, we'll have to take fewer children."

The Children's Country Home is only one of 104 Red Feather agencies which will suffer if the Chest fails to reach its goal. So far the campaign record is 73.22 per cent of the needed amount turned in.

"There can be no question of the great need for the full amount of the goal," Chauncey G. Parker, general campaign chairman said yesterday. "There can be little question of the ability of thousands of working people to share with our neighbors."

Your contribution can be mailed direct to Chest headquarters, 1101 M st. nw.

New Ruling On 'Indigent' Cases Sought By Hospitals

Present Definition Allows Use of Only a Portion Of Funds Provided

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The District Commissioners are tossing around a hot potato while officials of nine Washington hospitals watch their financial structures crumble.

The hot potato is: What is an indigent?

Since last July 1, on instructions sent them by Walter Fowler, District budget officer, the nine hospitals, which are under District contract for indigent care, have been going on the theory that anybody who can pay even a dollar toward his hospital expenses isn't an indigent.

They have assumed, on Fowler's instructions, that a man has to make less than the bare minimum allowed for indigent payment at Gallinger to qualify for the $9 daily rate. And he must have less than $500 in assets other than furniture. He also must be an emergency case, and a District resident.

Ruling Is Criticized

On this basis, the hospitals have, during a five month period, been able to set up only $115,000 worth of credit against the District government for their care of indigents.

But Congress has appropriated $735,000 for District indigents during the current fiscal year.

Some hospital officials fear that, going by the Fowler directive, they won't be able to use up even half the $735,000 by year's end. If they don't, budget hungry District officials could tell Congress that some of the $735,000 ought to go elsewhere in the District.

Daniel W. Donoghue, an attorney and a member of the Hospital Council, National Capital Area, said yesterday that Fowler's instructions have "prevented the hospitals from benefiting to the extent intended by Congress, and placed a burden on needy patients the act was intended to aid."

O'Donoghue said he intended to discuss the whole situation with Commissioner Guy Mason shortly.

No Hint of Decision

Meanwhile, the District Commissioners have given no indication as to when the long-awaited indigent definition will be forthcoming.

They have before them a proposal from District Health Officer George Ruhland to apply a scale in use since 1946 at Gallinger Hospital, broadening the scale because of the decline in the purchasing value of the dollar.

Fowler claims the Gallinger indigent scale actually is being used to pay the bills of some semi-indigent patients. He believes it would be against the intent of the 1949 Appropriations Act to apply the scale to the contract hospitals.

The scale was applied up to the end of the last fiscal year, to three hospitals then under District contract, because the "indigent" term was not in the Appropriation Act.

The Gallinger scale, as now applied, provides that a person with one dependent earning a gross monthly income of from $100 to $135 may qualify as an indigent. Dr. Ruhland has proposed that the scale be upped to from $100 to $200. On the highest minimum, the present scale is a person with 10 dependents, earning between $230 and $330 a month. Dr. Ruhland has proposed that this be upped to a range of $300 to $520 per month.

Present "Indigent" Ruling

Commissioner Guy Mason late last week told reporters that the District Government cannot pay the hospital bills of "semi-indigent" patients without congressional authorization.

Under present rulings, a person who is able to pay even $1 toward his daily hospital expenses is not entitled to Government aid at any of the nine contract hospitals.

At the present time, the local hospitals are dickering for a change in their arrangement with the Hospital Service Agency for payment of the hospital costs of semi-indigent cases. The Hospital Council of the National Capital Area has recommended local hospitals end their HSA contracts and undertake to make their own collections from the semi-indigent.

W. and L. Stamp Expected to Bear Robertson Design

By The Associated Press

The New Washington and Lee University stamp will probably be of a design suggested by Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.).

The Postoffice Department last week announced that it would issue on April 12 a 3-cent stamp commemorating the 200th anniversary of the Virginia school.

Robertson, in urging such a stamp, suggested to Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson that it "could well bear the likeness" of General Washington and General Lee on either side of "a panel showing the white doric columns of the administrative building."

A department official said such a design "would very likely be adopted." Washington and Lee will be the first school ever honored by the issuance of a special stamp.

Legality of School Aide Appointment To Be Discussed

State Superintendent of Public Instruction G. Tyler Miller will confer with Arlington school heads Monday concerning the legality of the School Board's appointment of an associate superintendent of schools.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p. m. in the school offices in the courthouse.

Dr. Edward J. Braun, consultant to the board since last January, was appointed associate superintendent at the board's November 10 meeting over the strong objections of Superintendent Fletcher Kemp.

County Treasurer John Locke Green, also protesting, has said he would not sign vouchers for the 70-room construction phase of the School Board's building program since it was drawn by Dr. Braun with apparently illegal powers. He also has refused to honor any pay checks made out to Dr. Braun.

Green said he based his stand on a ruling by Commonwealth's Attorney T. Denman Rucker that the new post is illegal, as it divides the duties of the superintendent.

Boost Urged For Widows of World War I

"Labor is asking for its fourth round—how about a second round for World War widows, dependents and other war pensioners?"

That was the highlight of a talk last night before Widows of World War I by George Ijams, national rehabilitation director, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The group's two-day national convention sessions, in Odd Fellows Temple, 419 7th st. nw., concluded with installation of officers.

Ijams, a former Veterans Administration executive, told about 50 delegates that a new uniform pension act due for considerable support in the Eighty-first Congress would make it easier for widows of all wars to establish claims to pension benefits and should get the WWWI an increase in present pensions of $42 monthly where the husband-veteran died of nonservice-connected disability.

Ijams said veterans and dependants last year collected $107,404,000 through efforts of the VFW. He offered his organization's assistance to any World War I widow in establishing pension claims.

The convention elected Mrs. Teresa Rosen of Boston, president, succeeding Mrs. Clara Searcy 1110 Virginia ave. sw. Mrs. Enger S. Hendricks, St. Petersburg, Fla., was elected first vice president; Mrs. May H. Spurlock, 400 Pennsylvania ave. se., second vice president; Mrs. Katherine Tracy, Boston, treasurer; Mrs. Eleanor Macomber, Edston, secretary; Mrs. Searcy, chaplain; Mrs. Myrtle Corbin, Alexandria, historian; Mrs. Winefred Powell, 1330 Holbrook st. ne., sergeant-at-arms.

12½ Million Surplus Seen For Virginia

Richmond, Va., Nov. 27 (AP).—Revised estimates of Virginia's general fund revenues for the current biennium now point to a surplus as of June 30, 1950, amounting to $12,500,000.

This, it was learned, from a reliable source today, would be over and above the conditional as well as unconditional appropriations made by the 1948 General Assembly.

The new surplus estimate contrasts with the figure of $7518 used by officials as the expected 1950 general fund surplus at the time the 1948 General Assembly adjourned last March.

State Budget Director J. H. Bradford declined to comment on the reports of the new estimate. State Comptroller H. G. Gilmer could not be reached. Governor Tuck was away from Richmond for the weekend.

One factor in the revised forecasts was the $5,315,000 "extra" surplus achieved as of June 30, 1948. At this date, end of the old biennium, the general fund surplus was $25,625,556, or nearly $5,315,000 more than had been predicted.

Another factor was the trend in State revenues, which have continued to rise. The new estimates of general fund revenues for the year ending June 30, 1949, look for a total of about $82,523,765, or an increase of some $13,806,295 over the $68,817,470 predicted last March. For 1950, the new figure is about $90,216,000, and the old is $74,765,890, an increase of about $15,450,110.

These increases, plus the "extra" 1948 surplus, amount to some $34,561,246. If all the conditional appropriations were deducted from this sum, there would be left about $12,425,853.

Request to Prepare Capital For War Defense Expected

ceiving a 30-hour basic training, the Police Reserve Corps is designed as the nucleus of an auxiliary police force far better trained and equipped than Washington's 5000 volunteer auxiliary policemen of World War II.

2-Year Training Job

Officially, Chief Barrett has said the 200 reserve policemen will help regular police handle big crowds at such events as the inauguration of President Truman next January 20. Actually, police officials admit it takes about two years to train a policeman, and there is doubt that new reserves would be of much help by that time.

Barrett has said it has not been decided what arms and equipment will be issued to the reserve police, but one question on the application form reads: "If you are appointed a member of the Police Reserve Corps, do you agree to purchase the prescribed uniform, arms and equipment?"

Among subjects to be taught auxiliary policemen under the program of the Office of Civil Defense Planning are communications, transportation, evacuation, radiological defense, chemical defense, unexpected bomb reconnaissance and mutual aid.

The civil defense report further states:

"Both regular and auxiliary police should be trained in the following subjects: Civil defense organization and functions of civil defense services; relationship between Federal, State and local governments; relationship between civil police and the armed forces; air raid precautions; police duties in air raid alarms; protection against high explosives, incendiary bombs, chemical attack and radiological attack; protection of vital installations; police evacuation procedures and control; looting prevention; blackout and light control enforcement; panic prevention and control; regulation and control of highway traffic operating under controlled dispatch and priorities; grounded aircraft procedures and unexploded bomb reconnaissance.

Additional Duties

"In addition, some of the courses in regular police duties which should be given to auxiliary police are: Organization of the department, general police duties and responsibilities, discipline, conduct, appearance and courtesy, powers and duties of auxiliary police, first aid, traffic regulation and control, patrol methods, preservation of evidence, detention, search, arrest procedures, report writing, notetaking, interviews and interrogation, use and care of firearms, police communications, records and reports, public relations, court procedure, law of arrest, law of evidence, elements of minor offenses and elements of major offenses. Other specific subjects may be included to apply in local situations."

Formation of the Police Reserve

Formation of the Police Reserve Corps was approved officially by the District Commissioners last Tuesday. By yesterday, more than 500 requests for application forms had been received at police headquarters.

The corps will be entirely separate and distinct from any other unit or group, such as the city's 1700 special private policemen who serve as watchmen or guards at banks, theaters, public buildings, stores, utility plants, etc.

It will be separate from the civil disturbance unit, made up of regular policemen especially trained to handle riots although the head of the civilian volunteers will be the same man who trains the riot squad, Inspector Lloyd E. Kelly.

Chief Murphy Not to Form Auxiliary Fire Force Now

work if he is not to be used in that work. Murphy said that during World War II, Washington had an auxiliary fire force of 900 all trained men. However, more than half the men had gone into the service within two years, and by the war's end, there were only about 100 auxiliary firemen left of the original corps.

Murphy said that if an emergency came, "What we would need would be equipement, and that's very expensive. I see no purpose in training men and not having the equipement for them to man. As I understand it, the police do not need much equipement."

The training period, described by Murphy as "intensive", takes about four months, he said.

Chief Murphy was one of 25 fire chiefs consulted when the Office of Civil Defense Planning report was prepared. He said all chiefs agreed that equipment should come first in the event of war. The chiefs also agreed that fire departments should concentrate on strengthening their regular departments.

Chief Murphy served as chief air raid warden for the District during the early stages of World War II. In May, 1945, he asked to be relieved of these duties to devote full time to his regular job as drillmaster of the Fire Department Training School. He was appointed chief engineer of the Fire Department on March 1, 1946.

3 Confess Killing Man Who Refused Truancy Help

Vanderbilt, Mich. Nov. 27 (U.P.).—State police announced today that three boys confessed they shot and killed a 66-year-old woodsman because he refused to help them skip classes.

State Trooper Glen Tanner and Otsego County Prosecutor Paul Kenny said the boys admitted shooting Arthur King while he was cutting wood near here.

They said they asked him to fell a tree across a power line leading to Vanderbilt because they believed a power failure would result in classes being dismissed.

Kenny said they also told him they took $5 from a nearby house to buy the rifle they used and admitted setting fire to the same house later.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Indexes Point to Inflation Lull

Economics took the place of politics when President Truman returned to Washington. And in New York the stock market promptly declined to the lowest level since the election.

As soon as Truman named Edwin G. Nourse to head a top-level committee to prepare anti-inflation legislation, Wall Street assumed the worst. Nourse, as chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, helped formulate the special-session legislative proposals for materials allocation, higher taxes on corporations and standby price control and rationing—all distasteful to business and all turned down by the Eightieth Congress. Therefore, his appointment symbolized more of the same—but with greater chance of success in a Democratic Congress.

Livingston

Nourse does not look upon himself as a policymaker or administrator. He considers himself an adviser—a mobilizer of economic facts and figures. He will not appear before congressional committees to explain the President's ideas, objectives and policies. The role of political advocate is reserved for administrators.

The President, Nourse, and the members of the Cabinet intend to avoid a fiasco akin to that of November, 1947, when the President's anti-inflation proposals were laid low, not by Senator Taft but by the President's own team, which comprised Secretary of the Treasury Snyder and two former Secretaries—Harriman of Commerce and Anderson of Agriculture. They failed dismally to make out a good case for hastily improvised legislation. As newspapermen wrote at the time, "They fumbled."

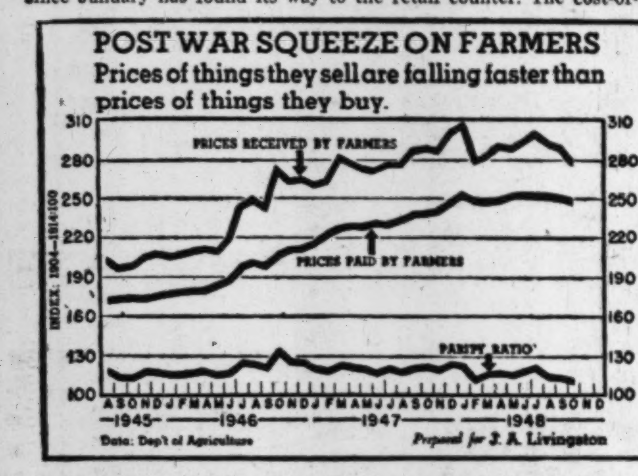
Getting Set for Big Test

Nourse hopes to have the President's team "up" for the big test in January when the Eighty-first Congress convenes. He will hold sessions, at which economic problems and legislative proposals will be given a going over. If there are unresolved differences, the President—in a full-dress meeting and knowing all points of view beforehand—will be able to make final decisions. In this way, even if a Cabinet member isn't in full accord with a policy, he'll know its pros and cons and why it was adopted.

Naming the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers to this job is evidence of political imagination and savvy—even brilliance. If it sets a precedent, if future Presidents and future Cabinets are to be regularly briefed on the economic outlook, then their handling of massive affairs—such as the budget, taxes, public works and recommendations for legislation—will be more sophisticated.

Inflation Lull

Offhand assumptions that Nourse's appointment means a repeat program are premature. At the moment, crucial economic indicators point to an inflation lull. At last the 10 per cent decline in farm prices since January has found its way to the retail counter. The cost-of-living index dropped from 174.5 in September to 173.6 in October. Food was entirely responsible for the drop. Meat, poultry and fish prices were down 3.5 per cent, dairy products, 2.7 per cent.



This eases the housewife's job of making ends meet. It will influence fourth-round wage demands. Yet it is a price readjustment and not necessarily a signal of a major decline. Things the farmer sells are dropping. Things he buys (which haven't risen so much) are still rising (see chart). But farm income, because of large crop and livestock marketings, is running only 3 per cent below a year ago. The farmer is still well off.

Christmas will provide the key to what Truman asks Congress to do. If stores do a big business, if consumers spend as freely as last year, then the Administration may not hesitate to seek controls. But if, as in recent weeks, dollar volume falls below a year ago—the Administration may go easy.

Consumers now feel the pinch of postwar improvidence. Installment debt, at $7,7000,000,000—or 20 per cent higher than the peak in 1941—has caught up with them. Each month an enlarging proportion of disposable income goes toward payments on past purchases of automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines, furniture, etc. Here is an indication (in millions—000,000 omitted):

	Estimated Repayments on Installment Debt	Monthly Disposable Income	Installment Repayments as % of income
Sept., 1946	$500	$13,400	3.7%
Sept., 1947	800	14,600	5.5
Sept., 1948	1000	16,100	6.2

Though consumers paid off about a billion dollars in old debt in September, still other consumers plowed $1,300,000,000 into installment purchases. So an increasing amount and proportion of income are "spoken for." To be sure, new installment buying continues to lift total retail sales. But the installment purchases are generally in durable goods, while the squeeze—due to repayments—affects soft goods. Mortgaged income can't go into clothes or shoes. Which is something for merchants, particularly department store executives, to think about.

Schools to See Riggs Bank's Americana

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Riggs National Bank has completed arrangements to place its historical collection at the disposal of Dr. H. M. Corning, superintendent of Washington schools, to be circulated among students.

The Americana is expected to have great interest for history students since the Riggs collection contains original letters and checks of Abraham Lincoln, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, Brigam Young, Winfield Scott, Francis Scott Key and many other famous Americans.

Before being released for school use, the unique display linked with a series of advertisements has been sent to Hollywood, Fla., for a convention of the Financial Public Relations Association from November 29 to December 2.

Attending the session are Hulbert T. Bisselle, senior vice president and advertising officer of Riggs; Roland T. Carr, assistant vice president who dug up the material, and John F. Hardie, account executive of the Lewis Edwin Ryan Advertising Agency which prepared the advertisements.

The series of ads built around famous men and women depositors attracted nationwide attention during the past two years. After the first of the year, Riggs plans to bring out a second group of historical advertisements, President Robert V. Fleming revealed yesterday.

RETAIL TRADE: Washington department store sales in the week ended November 20 were 3 per cent less than in the preceding week and 7 per cent less than in the corresponding period of 1947, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. Sales in the Richmond district were 8 per cent more than in the preceding week and 8 per cent less than in the corresponding period a year ago.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: William F. Sigmund, partner in the Washington advertising agency of Henry J. Kaufman & Associates, has been named chairman of the regional convention of the National Advertising Agency Network to be held in Williamsburg, Va., for three days, starting December 3 . . . Robert E. Harper, president of the local forge of American Public Relations Association, will address Association of American Executives at a luncheon Tuesday in the Sheraton Hotel . . . Roscoe Seybold has been appointed assistant to the president of Westinghouse Electric Corp . . . Hayden B. Kline has been elevated to president of Industrial Rayon Corp., succeeding Hiram S. Rivitz who has been named board chairman.

ODD LOTS: W. A. Gray, display manager of Lansburg's was one of 66 prize winners in a recent window display contest of the National Pressure Cooker Co. . . The Prudential Insurance Co. will open a course in effective letter writing in Baltimore Monday which will be attended by 13 employes from its Washington office . . . Charles W. Kalloch and John N. MacGowan have been named assistants to the vice president of American Export Lines, Inc.

DIVIDENDS: Publicly-reported cash dividends in October were 11 per cent more than in the same 1947 month, a tabulation by the Commerce Department shows. They totaled $474,700,000 last month. Mining corporation di dividends for the August-September-October period this year were up 40 per cent; railroads nearly 25 per cent. The only decline, 13 per cent, occurred in the 'miscellaneous' group which is made up largely of motion picture and transportation corporations other than railroads.

MEMORY EXPERT: Robert H. Nutt, will demonstrate how to remember names, faces and facts before the Washington Chapter of the American Savings & Loan Institute at 8 p. m. Wednesday in the auditorium of the Washington Gas Light Co.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP).—The grain market ended on a firm note today after some shakiness during early dealings. Prices were down more than a cent in wheat and corn at one time, but when the selling pressure let up the market rebounded quickly.

Today's action was almost the exact reverse of yesterday's when prices had opened higher and ended lower. The late rally today was in part believed to come from short covering on the part of traders who did not want to maintain a short position over the weekend.

Wheat closed ¾ to 1¾ higher, corn was ⅝ to 1 cent higher, oats were ¼ to ½ higher, rye was ¼ higher, soybeans were 1¼ to 3½ higher, and lard was 8 cents lower to 3 cents 100 pounds higher.

The initial sell-off followed news that 2000 Brooklyn longshoremen had voted to reject an agreement reached to settle the maritime strike. This action raised the possibility the entire union membership might reject the proposal, putting the situation back where it was three weeks ago.

Some of the late buying in wheat was traced to houses with Southwestern connections. Rain and snow fell in that area overnight and during the morning, which traders said would tend to hold down farm marketings of wheat. The Midwest was clear today, but rain with traces of snow were expected in many areas tomorrow.

Rye held firm, although it was reported that a steamer from Port William, Canada, was unloading 195,000 bushels of that grain here.

The Kansas City office of the Commodity Credit Corporation continued to bid for cash corn. This grain was wanted for export via the Gulf of Mexico.

Possibility that the shipping strike might continue had more influence on the cash corn market than on futures. Prices in the spot trade slumped ½ to 2 cents.

Cross Currents Mark Quiet Stock Trading

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—The stock market's attempt to block the post-election decline went up in smoke this week.

About $1,700,000,000 was lopped off the market value of all stocks listed on the exchange. Losses since the Democratic election sweep have piled up to around seven billion dollars.

On Friday and again in today's short session, the market showed signs of stabilizing but the steadiness was due more to absence of aggressive selling than to any pronounced pick-up in buying.

Tax selling, today and during the week, helped keep the market on the defensive. Brokerage quarters estimated that this type of pressure may keep up for several weeks more.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed at 63.4, unchanged for the second day in a row. It was the lowest point reached since March 19 and compared with the low for the year of 60.3.

Fractional declines were enough to put numerous issues at new lows for the year or more during the day. Touching bottom for 1948 at one time were Chrysler, Chesapeake & Ohio, Glenn Martin, Timken Roller Bearing, Austin Nichols, and American Steel Foundries.

Business news was good and bad—the good was ignored and the bad emphasized.

The three-week decline in department store sales was another matter. The financial district worried over that information like a dog worrying over a bone, not quite sure what to do with it but afraid to leave it alone. Concern over the retail picture was heightened by news that Hearn Department Stores cut its dividend.

Home-Heating Oil Supply Ample, Standard Co. Says

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Enough oil is in sight to heat comfortably the Nation's four million homes with automatic oil burners, an industry source said today.

The Lamp, publication of Standard Oil Co. (N. J.), said in its current issue that a survey showed the industry has sharply increased supplies with which to meet a total demand, including exports, for 246 million barrels of disillate products.

Here's why the home heating prospect is favorable, according to the Lamp:

There is more heating oil than ever before in the industry's storage tanks; more home owners this year have filled their own tanks during summer months; refineries are producing heating oil in record volume and can step it up even higher, and transport facilities should be equal to any demands.

The survey cautions that local and temporary interruptions in heat are always possible, if severe weather halts deliveries or a power failure occurs.

Buyers Report Output Drop, Price Leveling

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Falling production and a continued leveling off in prices were reported today in a survey by the National Association of Purchasing Agents.

The survey said: 'The election had very little effect on November industrial business. The trends established in September and October continued, and reports show production high with back orders declining.

"The consensus of purchasing executives is that production will fall off during December, and possibly January, and back orders will decline further.

"A combination of factors is reported responsible. Many industries that are normally subject to seasonal variations in activity, but which have continued 12-month capacity operations since the war, are now finding the return of seasonal fluctuations influencig sales ad production schedules.

The uncertainty of Government policies is a limiting factor on programs, for management must be in a position to make quick revisions, if necessary. Luxury lines, wearing apparel and capital equipment seem most affected at this time.

"Long-range plans involving construction, capital equipment expenditures and sales promotional campaigns appear to be hesitant, awaiting clarification of the rules under which industry is to operate."

Except for nonferrous metals, said the report, "the price situation shows a continuing leveling off, with a stronger trend to decline.

"Fabricated items are developing keen competition. Overstocked shelf goods are being offered at reductions. While current markets are spotty pricewise, there is a strong tendency toward softening."

Banker Cites Inflation Factor In GI Loans

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP).—A. G. Brown, New York banker, said today that bankers should consider inflationary angles when considering making GI loans.

Brown, director of the Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association, urged constructive loans that will not contribute to inflation.

In an address to a meeting of the National Association of County Agricultural Agents he also advocated that banks develop more local farm programs in their communities.

Brown urged cooperation between bankers and Federal, State, and private forestry agencies. Forestry programs, he said, are an important part of soil conservation work.

Panhandle Line To Pay Dividend

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 27 (AP).—The way was cleared today for Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Co. to pay stockholders a dividend of 810,000 shares of capital stock of Hugoton Production Co.

Federal District Judge Paul Leahy handed down an opinion denying the Federal Power Commission an injunction against payment of the stock.

The temporary restraining order obtained by the FPC will continue in force until December 1. This is the date which had been set for a hearing on the temporary order.

Judge Leahy instructed Panhandle Eastern attorneys to take the necessary steps to dissolve the temporary order.

S. A. Morrow of Chicago, was apponted advertising manager. He succeds J. F. Gardeau.

Jordan Piano To Reopen in 'Skyscraper'

Jordan Pano Co. will reopen for business Monday in its new nine-story and basement building at 13th and G sts. nw., it was announced yesterday.

The company was established in 1913 and its growth has paralleled that of the city. With the opening of its "skinny skyscraper," the Jordan Piano Co. will be one of the largest exclusive music stores in America.

Its new building, with narrow frontage on G st., is an eye-catching attraction with its tall and ultra-modern appearance. The structure occupies the site of the company's old building, long a downtown landmark which during the war was used as a servicemen's center.

The building will be devoted entirely to the music business, with the piano department occupying five of the nine floors.

Reserve Board Notes Sales Drop

Department store sales during the week ended November 20 ran below a year ago for the third consecutive week, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

The unusual continued downtrend extended over the entire Nation, the report indicaed.

Continuance of the department store sales dip was taken in official quarters as a further indication of mounting consumer resistance to current prices, although that was not considered the only or necessarily even the chief cause of the dip.

Other factors regarded as influential included unseasonable weather in many parts of the country, and the possibility that the American public is returning to its tradition of waiting late to do the Christmas shopping.

Funds Needed To Launch Heart Studies

The Nation's medical schools, hospitals and heart organizations apparently need only money to start them off on a concerted attack on heart diseases.

Requests for funds totaling $37,000,000 have already been received by the $500,000 National Heart Institute, of Public Health Service, it was revealed yesterday by its director, Dr. Cassius J. Van Slyke of Bethesda, Md.

The fund applications are in contrast to this year's total of $1,800,000 allocated from the general grant research budget of PHS for use on projects concerning heart research.

Initial consideration of the requests will be formally taken up by the recently-formed National Advisory Heart Council of the Institute, at its next, and second, executive session, December 10-11. Because of the limited appropriation authorizing establishment of National Heart Institute, only "token" fund grants will be made at the coming session, Dr. Van Slyke said.

Dr. Van Slyke told of the institute's plans, and its status in an interview on the progress of the new member to the National Institutes of Health at Bethesda.

By 1951, when the 40-million-dollar national clinical research center and hospital is completed at Bethesda, he said, the National Heart Institute will be in position to use about one third of the research facilities and nearly 200 beds of the 500-bed center.

Under this program, he said, many of the Nation's leading heart specialists will gather there for research, consultations and bedside care of selected patients whose heart ailments are under special study.

Congress authorized creation of the institute, last June 15.

Additional funds, Dr. Van Slyke said, will be sought through budget requests as a new division in the budgetary set-up of United States Public Health Service, administered by the Federal Security Agency. The institute budget, moreover, will absorb those heart grants now being made from general funds allotted USPHS.

Funds sought will be used to finance those activities already designated as within the scope of the National Heart Institute by the congressional act, the director declared. He listed these as:

1. To support research in outside institutions by research grants-in-aid.

2. To aid construction of new research facilities for investigations into heart ailments.

3. To award research fellowships to develop competence in basic research in the cardio-vascular field.

4. To award traineeships to promote competence of physicians in diagnosis, treatment and prevention of heart disease.

5. To establish a central office on heart information. This office would service both profession and lay groups, and serve as a center for dissemination of information on preventive measures available to prolong life and ease pains of heart sufferers. It would also include statistical records on research.

6. To give grants to medical institutes to promote coordination and improvement of cardio-vascular training, both for undergraduates and post-graduate students.

Funds Will Be Sought To Fight Heart Disease

The Washington Heart Association campaign committee will meet at noon Monday at the Statler Hotel to organize a drive for funds to fight heart disease in Greater Washington, John H. Wilkins, jr., general chairman, announced yesterday.

Following the organization meeting, Wilkins said, preparations for the drive "will get under way in earnest." The campaign will be held early in 1949.

Newsboy's Purchase Launches Annual Christmas Seal Drive

The Washington Post

FIRST BUYER—Eddie Williams, 8, of 3620 29th st. nw., buys TB Yule seals from Mrs. Maurice Switzer of Chevy Chase, Md., in Benjamin Franklin Postoffice

Eight-year-old Eddie Williams, backed by seven of his newsboy buddies, yesterday started the booth sale of 1948 Christmas Seals.

About 11 a. m., Eddie, who lives at 3620 39th st. nw., stepped up to the Christmas Seal booth in the lobby of the Benjamin Franklin Postoffice and bought a dollar's worth from Mrs. Maurine Switzer, 404 Highland dr., Chevy Chase, a volunteer booth worker.

That's one payoff. But the real one is that Eddie and his pals all deliver the monthly McLean Garden News, which is edited by Mrs. Switzer.

And when the boys deliver the December 6 issue, they will knock on each of 2400 doors—instead of putting the paper in the mailboxes and personally remind the residents that Christmas Seal contributions are needed. Then they'll hand over the papers, each of which will have a Christmas Seal on the front page.

The 1948 seal bears the picture of a little boy waiting before the fireplace for Santa's visit. The District Tuberculosis Association hopes to raise $200,000 this year in its 42d annual Christmas Seal sale.

Beginning Monday morning, more than 100 volunteers will staff 69 Christmas Seal booths in stores, theaters, postoffices, banks and other downtown Washington locations.

5000 Expected Here Monday For Restaurant Convention

More than 5000 restaurant owners and officials and their guests from 31 Eastern and Southern States will gather here Monday for a four-day convention and exposition at the Hotel Statler.

The regional convention, which has as its theme, "America's Heritage—Hospitality and Good Food," is sponsored by the National and Washington Restaurant Associations.

During the four-day gathering, visitors will be kept busy. They will view an exhibit of the latest in restaurant equipment, will listen to speakers on many subjects, will observe cooking demonstrations in the Statler's banquet kitchen and will dine, dance and tour Washington.

The exhibits will be opened at 6:30 p. m. Monday. There will be a cooking demonstration on gas equipment in the banquet kitchen from 7 to 9 p. m. The program notes: "Food will be served."

Evening Session

At 8:30 p. m., in the Federal Room, speakers will be J. W. Marriott, president of the National Restaurant Association and president of Hot Shoppes, Inc., and Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church and chaplain of the United States Senate.

An informal dance at the Statler has been planned Monday night.

Tuesday morning the delegates will hear August H. Dressel, president of the Washington Restaurant Association and the Old Williamsburg Restaurant, and George L. Wenzel, prominent food-cost consultant, in the first of three talks on controlling operating costs.

There will be an electric cooking demonstration in the Statler banquet kitchen at 11:30 a. m., and at noon a luncheon and style show for women at the Shoreham Hotel.

Tuesday afternoon speakers will be Emerson P. Schmidt, director of the economic research department, United States Chamber of Commerce, and Dr. Orpha Mae Thomas, assistant professor of institution management at Teachers College, Columbia University.

Tuesday at 8 p. m., after a cooking demonstration, there will be talks by Alexander F. Jones, assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post, and the second address by Wenzel.

This will be followed by a uniform style show.

Wenzel will speak again Wednesday morning, and Admiral George R. LeSauvage of the Government affairs committee of the National Restaurant Association will address a special luncheon in the Pan-American Room.

Speakers at the Wednesday afternoon education program will include Walter Snyder, executive secretary of the National Sanitation Foundation; Glen Gundell, advertising promotion manager of the Saturday Evening Post, and M. A. Khoury of Armour & Co. and the Columbia Hotel Supply Co.

Thursday will be devoted to sightseeing in and around Washington. Convention climax will be a banquet in the Presidential and Congressional Rooms of the Statler at 8 p. m.

Five other conventions are scheduled for this week here, the first being that of the Eastern Association of University and College Business Officers, meeting today through Tuesday at the Mayflower Hotel.

About 200 delegates from some 40 States are expected for the fifteenth annual National Conference on State Labor Legislation, to be held Tuesday through Thursday in the Departmental Auditorium. Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, sponsor, will open the conference.

Other groups scheduled to meet are:

American Council of Commercial Laboratories, Wednesday through Saturday, Mayflower Hotel.

National Institute of Municipal Law Officers, Thursday through Saturday, Mayflower Hotel.

Transfusions Aid Burned Boy In Fighting Chance for Life

They took plucky Michael Rector, 4, off the critical list at Casualty Hospital yesterday. His condition has sufficiently improved to warrant a "serious" tag.

One reason the boy is winning his fight for life—a little more than two weeks ago he suffered third-degree burns over 70 per cent of his body—is the blood he has been receiving. So far he's had eight transfusions.

Dr. Joseph Rogers Young, the boy's physician, makes no bones about what the transfusions have done. "There is no question that this child would not be alive today," he says, "were it not for the blood he has received."

Michael, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Rector, 613 Elliott st. ne., ran home on November 12 with his clothing afire. He and two other youngsters had been playing with matches in a garage, he told his parents.

The blood that the youngster has been getting is only a small part of the amount the Red Cross regional blood center has distributed recently.

Supplied by volunteer donors, a total of 526 pints was distributed last week. District hospitals received 307 pints, and 219 pints were sent to institutions in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

The blood was distributed as follows:

Casualty Hospital, 3; Children's, 22; Columbia, 29; Doctors, 18; Emergency, 44; Freedmen's, 20; Gallinger, 1; Garfield, 6; Georgetown University Hospital, 50; George Washington University Hospital, 57; Homeopathic, 5; Mount Alto, 9; Providence, 14; Sibley, 19; U. S. Soldier's Home Hospital, 2; St. Elizabeths, 8.

Maryland—Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, 1; Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, 9; Warren Hospital, Laurel, 1; Leland Memorial, Riverdale, 5; Prince Georges, Cheverly, 15; St. Marys, Leonardtown, 1, and Johns Hopkins Baltimore, 15.

In Virginia, blood went to Alexandria Hospital, 27; Arlington, 21; Circle Terrace in Alexandria, 1; Mary Washington, Fredericksburg, 24; Loudoun, Leesburg, 1; Physicians Hospital, Warrenton, 4; Winchester Hospital, Winchester, 41.

West Virginia—Newton D. Baker General Hospital, Martinsburg, 38; City Hospital, Martinsburg, 10; King's Daughter, Martinsburg, 3; Charles Town General Hospital, Charles Town, 6.

U. S. Representatives Are Received by Pope

Castel Gandolfo, Nov. 27 (AP).—Pope Pius received members of the United States House Armed Services Committee today.

The group, which has been studying the Berlin airlift, includes Representatives Short (R., Mo.), chairman; Bates (R., Mass.), Shafer (R., Mich.), Bishop (R., Ill.), Rivers (D., S. C.), Price (D., Ill.). Representative Bryson (D., S. C.) of the House Judiciary Committee, also was present.

Gale Delays Plane

Haifa, Israel, Nov. 27 (UP).—The Air Force plane on which Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., was scheduled to arrive here today ran into a gale over the Mediterranean and was forced to return to Athens, Greece.

Crusade in Europe: Eisenhower's Own Story

Remagen Moved Up VE Calculations by Months

By Dwight D. Eisenhower

This is a condensed serialization of Dwight D. Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe.". It contains highlights of the book published by Doubleday & Co. Copyright by Doubleday & Co., Inc.

XXII

ALL DURING the Battle of the Bulge we continued to plan for the final offensive blows which, once started, we intended to maintain incessantly until the final defeat of Germany. Operations were planned in three general phases, beginning with a series of attacks along the front to destroy the German armies west of the Rhine. The next phase would comprise the crossing of that river and establishment of major bridgeheads. Thereafter we would initiate the final advances that we were sure would carry us into the heart of Germany and destroy her remaining power to resist.

In early January, 1945, with the approval of the Combined Chiefs of Staff, I sent Air Chief Marshal Tedder to Moscow to make necessary arrangements for coordination. He was authorized to give the Russian military authorities full information concerning our plans for the late winter and spring, and was to obtain similar information concerning Russian projects.

We already knew that the Russians were contemplating an early westward attack from their positions around Warsaw, on the Vistula. We understood that the Russians had effected concentrations for an offensive by the first of the year, but because of conditions of terrain and, more particularly, because of thick blankets of fog and cloud that interfered with air operations, they were holding up the attack until conditions should be more favorable.

Air Chief Marshal Tedder and his associates arrived in Moscow just after this attack began. The Generalissimo and the Russian military authorities received them with the utmost cordiality and there was a full and accurate exchange of information concerning future plans.

The Generalissimo informed our mission that even if the attacks then in progress should fail to reach their designated objectives, the Russians would keep up a series of continuous operations that would, at the very least, prevent the Germans from reinforcing the western front by withdrawing forces from the Russian zone.

Brooke Concedes Error

WHEN I completed my final plan in January, 1945, my friend Field Marshal Brooke informally but very earnestly presented serious objections. His questions were directed against what he called the planned dispersion of our forces.

He maintained that we would never have enough strength to mount more than one full-blooded attack across the Rhine. Consequently, he said, in order to assure ourselves of the strength to sustain such an attack we should, as the situation then stood, pass to the defensive on all other parts of the line.

I laboriously explained to Field Marshal Brooke that, far from dispersing effort, I was conducting the campaign so that when we were ready to initiate the final invasion of Germany on the other side of the Rhine we could bring such a concerted and tremendous power against him that his collapse would quickly follow.

With the Allies firmly across the Rhine on all fronts, why did Eisenhower decide against a thrust to Berlin, despite Churchill's insistence? (See Monday's installment.)

Eisenhower had trouble with De Gaulle again over the French capture, under American orders, of what major German city? (See next Tuesday's installment.)

When the first surrender nibble came from Himmler, what iron-clad rule did Eisenhower fix for the piecemeal and general capitulation of the German forces? (See Wednesday's installment.)

With what top Russian commander did Eisenhower cement a postwar friendship which at the time seemed to him to augur close international relations with the Soviet? (See Thursday's installments.)

When Eisenhower met President Truman and Secretary Byrnes at Antwerp on their way to Potsdam, what did he advise them about Soviet participation in the Pacific war? (See Friday's installment.)

What does Eisenhower consider the "first and most enduring" lesson of the the Mediterranean and European campaigns? (See Saturday's installment.)

I did not wholly convince him. He said: "I wish that the Twelfth Army Group were deployed north of the Ruhr and the British forces were in the center," implying that my plans were drawn up on nationalistic considerations.

To this I retorted: "I am certainly no more anxious to put Americans into the thick of the battle and get them killed than I am to see the British take the losses. I have strengthened Montgomery's army group by a full American army, since in no other way can I provide the strength north of the Ruhr that I deem essential for the rapid execution of my plans. I have not devised any plan on the basis of what individual or what nation gets the glory, for I must tell you in my opinion there is no glory in battle worth the blood it costs."

Field Marshal Brooke's arguments in the matter were founded in conviction. There was no petty basis for his great concern. This was proved by the fact that only a few weeks later, when the destruction of the German armies west of the Rhine had been accomplished and he stood with me on the banks of the river to witness the crossing by the Ninth Army and the Twenty-first Army Group, he turned to me and said: "Thank God, Ike, you stuck by your plan. You were completely right and I am sorry if my fear of dispersed effort added to your burdens. The German is now licked. It is merely a question of when he chooses to quit. Thank God you stuck by your guns."

Canadians Bogged Down

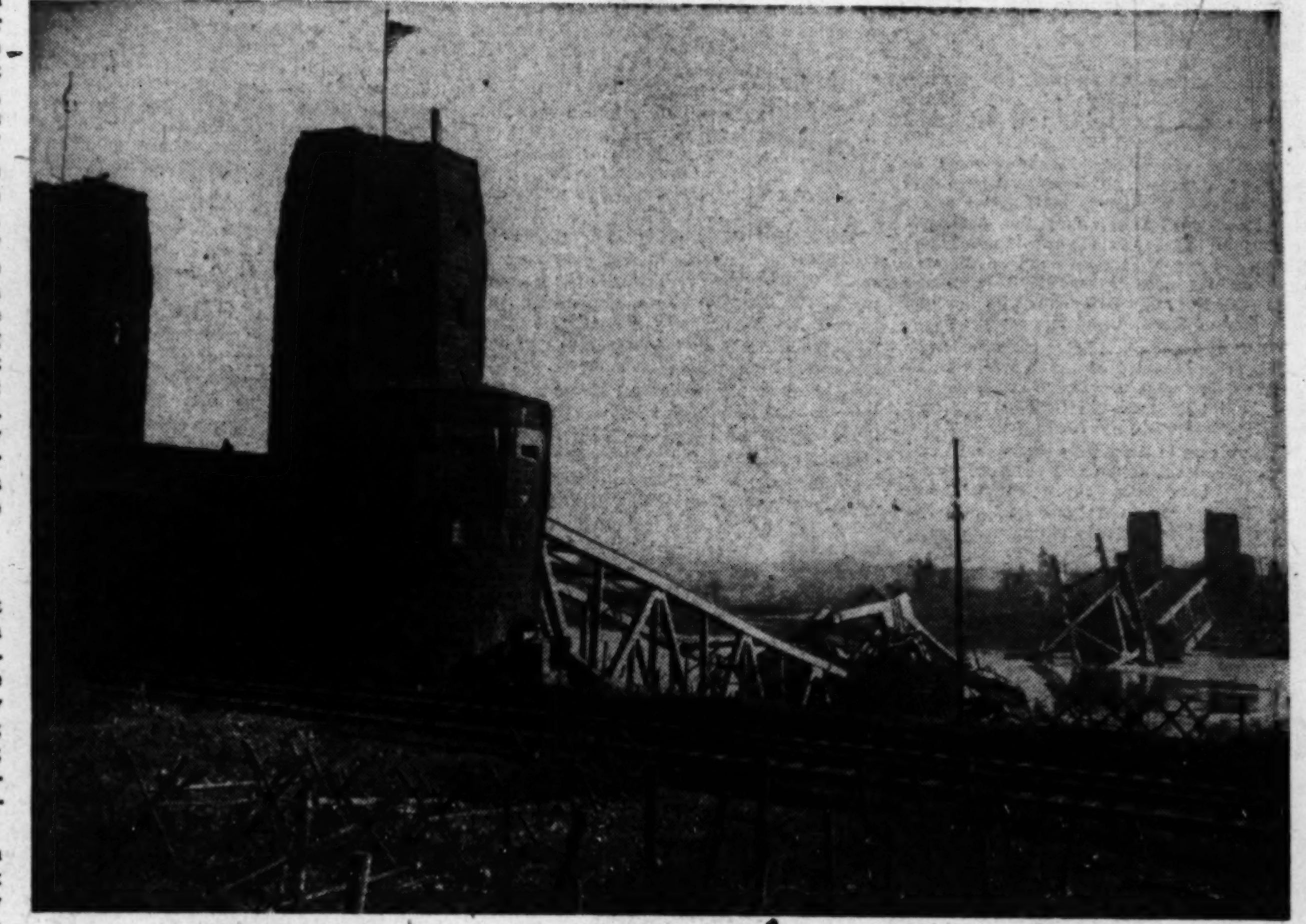
THE operational schedule for the first phase of our strategic plan—destruction of the enemy strength west of the Rhine—contemplated three major assaults. The first would be by the Twenty-first Army Group at the northern flank of our lines; the second, by Bradley's group in the center; and the third, a converging attack by Bradley and Devers to eliminate the enemy garrison in the Saar Basin.

In the planned campaign against German forces confronting our units, the first attack was to be carried out by the Canadian Army of the Twenty-first Army Group, and the United States Ninth Army, temporarily attached to Montgomery. The Canadians were to attack south and southeast across the Maas River, while Simpson's Ninth Army would cross the Roer to advance northeastward.

The Canadian army jumped off February 8. It made satisfactory initial gains, but the troops quickly found themselves involved in a quagmire of flooded and muddy ground and pitted against heavy resistance. Progress was slow and costly and opposition became stiffer as the Germans began moving their forces from the Roer into the path of the Canadian advance.

I visited General Simpson's Ninth Army during this period and found it keyed up and well prepared for the attack. If Simpson ever made a mistake, it never came to my attention.

After the war I learned that he had for some years suffered from a serious stomach disorder, but this I never would have suspected during hostilities. Alert, intelligent, and professionally capable, he was the type of leader that American soldiers deserve. In view of his brilliant service, it was unfortunate that shortly after the war ill-health forced his retirement before he was promoted to four-star grade, which he had so clearly earned.



The Ludendorff Bridge at Remagen after its collapse. But the Americans established a bridgehead before it buckled

In the days following upon the Canadian attack in the north, the Americans could do little except watch the river and be ready to attack as soon as receding floods permitted the bridging of that obstacle. It was two weeks after General Crerar's Canadians began the attack that this became possible. Simpson set his attack for the morning of the 23rd.

Ike Dons a Helmet

PRECEDED by a violent bombardment, the Ninth Army got off as scheduled and succeeded in crossing the river. Initially the troops encountered great difficulties, particularly because of hostile artillery fire upon their floating bridges and because of destruction in the City of Julich, caused by our aerial and artillery bombardment.

In spite of delays, Simpson's forces made fine progress, partially as a result of the prior transfer of German forces from this front to the Canadian battlefield. In less than a week the Ninth Army captured Munchen-Gladbach. This was the largest German city we had captured in the war up to this time.

While going into the city with Simpson, shortly after its capture, I saw my first jet plane. It was a German fighter, flying very high. Every antiaircraft gun in the area immediately opened intensive fire and within a few seconds fragments of exploded shells were dropping around us. For the only time in the war I put on a steel helmet.

When Simpson began his assault on February 23, it was the signal for Bradley, in the center of our long line, to begin a series of attacks which were brilliantly managed and swiftly conducted. He then had two armies under his operational command, the First on the left, the Third on the right. As a result of the late January and early February fighting along the fronts of these two armies, they had secured good positions from which to make a major assault.

Everything went like clockwork. The VII Corps, on Simpson's right, was quickly able to begin its southward attacks, and from that moment on success attended us everywhere along the front.

While Collins' VII Corps was making these great advances, Hodges launched the III and V Corps southeastward toward the Rhine. The III Corps reached the river at Remagen on March 7. Here it encountered one of those bright opportunities of war which, when quickly and firmly grasped, produce incalculable effect on future opera-

38 Million Asked for D. C. Schools

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

DR. GEORGE D. STRAYER, hired by Congress to analyze District school needs, yesterday recommended a 38-million-dollar school construction program.

The recommendation was contained in a 161-page report, the first of two to be made by Dr. Strayer on the local school system under a $100,000 congressional appropriation.

The construction plan, submitted to Senate and House Appropriation subcommittees, will provide only "minimum current essential schoolhousing needs," Dr. Strayer said.

The retired professor of education from Columbia University Teachers College put it on the line that the District must pay out the 38 million because over the years it has neglected education.

Studying the present District school plant, Dr. Strayer found "overcrowded schools, half-time education of children, obsolescent buildings, fire and panic hazards."

Gymnasiums on List

THE plan, recommending expenditure of $37,901,816, calls for:

1. Immediate reconstruction of 22 new schoolhouses and additions to 8 others at a cost of $30,361,866.

2. Immediate rehabilitation of 45 elementary schools at a cost of $1,282,500.

3. Construction at a future date of additions to six buildings, including four gymnasiums, at a cost of $2,473,150.

4. Spending of $2,334,300 after the other construction is completed for 12 projects, including gymnasiums and assembly halls for 7 schools and 2 new stadiums.

5. A new central administration building costing $1,450,000 to replace the present Franklin Administration Building and to house administrative offices now scattered in 6 old abandoned school buildings and in 15 other buildings still used as schools.

The recommendations and assigned priorities, Dr. Strayer says, are based, first, on the need to take care of overcrowding and part-time classes.

Second, he recommends construction to correct conditions that are a hazard to the lives and health of students.

Third, he takes into consideration "the denial of privileges to which the children and youth of the District are entitled."

Enough Until 1960

DEVOTING a large section of his report to population trends, Dr. Strayer says that the recommended construction will be sufficient to provide for expanding enrollments anticipated up to 1960.

He concludes that "within the next 10 years, net school enrollments will fall within the rough limits of 90,000 to 110,000, with the enrollment approximately equally divided between white and colored."

The Board of Education now reports 93,025 students in school, of whom 53,094 are white and 43,065 Negro.

The report calls for the abandonment of the Negro Cardozo High School and the construction of two Negro high schools—a new Armstrong and the proposed Spingarn.

Recommended is the razing and replacement of the white Hine Junior High School and the Negro Shaw and Terrell Junior High Schools, replacement of the white Amidon, Fairbrother and Greenleaf elementary schools with a consolidated building, and a replacement for the old section of the white Stanton Elementary School.

Dr. Strayer urges a replacement for the Negro Walker and Jones elementary schools and new buildings for the Negro Van Ness, Payne, Stevens, Ambush and Smallwood elementary schools.

As an economy measure, Dr. Strayer recommends razing of the white Brookland Elementary School and transfer of students to other schools, and closing of the white Oyster elementary school and the Negro Reno elementary school.

New Role for Central

THE white Central High School would be used as a graduate-level technical institute under the Strayer proposals, but as alternatives he suggests using the building to house the central administrative offices, removing the necessity for new central headquarters, or continuing present use of the building as a combined junior and senior high school.

A graduate technical school for Negroes would be set up under Dr. Strayer's program at the new Armstrong High School, with the old building used as an occupational junior high school.

The "magnitude" of the construction program facing the District, Dr. Strayer declares, is the result of "a gigantic backlog of accumulating capital outlay needs stemming from the depression decade of the 1930's through the war and postwar years."

Another factor has been the "increase in population and striking changes in the distribution of residential development."

Dr. Strayer hits strongly at the total reliance the District has placed on a pay-as-you-go method of financing new school buildings. The result has been that the District has been unable to keep up with its needs. The District now must borrow from the Federal Government or neglect its children, he declares.

Contributing to the price of providing a satisfactory school plant are construction costs, which have more than doubled since the war. New educational programs requiring additional floor space and facilities are an added factor.

DR. STRAYER says his recommendations will come as no surprise to the District Board of Education, the professional school staff, the District Commissioners or the education committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

A year and a half ago the Board of Education asked the Commissioners to seek a 50-million-dollar loan from Congress for local school construction. The Board of Trade's education committee last May, after preparing for Congress a study of local school buildings, recommended a 44-million-dollar Federal loan.

In reviewing the recommendation, the trade body's municipal finance committee expressed concern over the expenditure of so much money for schools and cut the figure to $10,418,000. The executive committee of the Board of Trade, faced with a conflict between the two recommendations, "compromised" on a $12,559,000 program.

Confronted with the three divergent reports, the two congressional appropriations committees, which had asked for the study, hired Dr. Strayer to conduct an exhaustive survey.

The Strayer report is not far off from the original Board of Education estimate of need a year and a half ago. Congress has authorized capital outlays of more than nine million dollars since that time.

Critical of Timidity

IN GENERAL, Dr. Strayer praises the work of local school officials in planning and operating the physical plant of the schools. In most cases where he directs criticism, it is at the conservatism of the school board in failing to call for additional facilities.

School classrooms, he said, are overcrowded, and he took issue with the standard set by District school officials. While the District computes the capacity of elementary schools on the basis of 36 pupils per class, "sound educational policy" calls for 30, Dr. Strayer said.

He described the District standard for secondary schools of 85 per cent utilization of seats "excessive beyond all reason," and said the standard should be 65 per cent for high schools and 75 per cent for junior high schools.

Dr. Strayer found that in white elementary schools 65.8 per cent of classes have more than 30 students and 6.7 per cent have more than 40 pupils.

In Negro elementary schools 86.2 per cent of classes have more than 30 pupils and 42.1 per cent exceed 40 pupils.

"Modern standards of education and training are rarely achieved under such conditions of heavy overload," the report says.

New Buildings Cramped

DR. STRAYER also found inadequate the size of rooms in new District school buildings. The minimum should be 900 square feet instead of the 704 square feet required in the District, he said.

Fire protection at old Hine Junior High School, 7th and C sts. se., almost seems designed to let burglars in and keep the children from getting out. The fire escape at left leads from the third-floor auditorium, but persistent housebreakers have found it very handy. Right, stairways in this half-century-old section lack fire doors and would act as a flue

"In the elementary schools, modern methods of teaching require more floor space and more equipment than was necessary to the formal program of former decades when seats and children alike were fixed row on row," Dr. Strayer reports.

"Now that movable furniture and movable children are an essential condition of instruction, more floor space is imperative."

On the whole, he found District elementary schools lacking the facilities of auditoriums and gymnasiums, lunchrooms, clinic rooms, offices and storage space.

He found improper safety precautions in older schools, "built with little or no consideration given to what would happen if a serious fire were to break out when a building was filled with children."

Dr. Strayer points to stairwells of nonfire resistant materials emptying into halls or corridors with floors of oil-soaked soft wood and with exits half the width of corridors or stairwells leading to them.

He criticizes sanitation facilities in buildings with toilet rooms in dingy basements.

Windows and Bulbs

MOST classrooms, he said, lack sufficient light, both natural and artificial.

The current recommended practice for schools is to provide 30 footcandles of light under specified conditions, Dr. Strayer said.

"Many of the classrooms that were checked showed an illumination level of less than 15 footcandles, with some as low as 6 to 10 footcandles," he said.

Dr. Strayer, too, was sharply critical of District school sites, terming them inadequate in most cases. A senior high school, he said, should have a minimum site of 20 acres, a junior high school 15 acres and an elementary school 5 acres.

Sixteen junior and senior high schools have sites of less than three acres, and only one approaches the standard, with more than 15 acres.

Only five white schools and two Negro schools meet the elementary standard and the majority of such schools have "sites of such inadequacy that an acceptable recreation program cannot be carried on."

Here Dr. Strayer criticizes the District policy of failing to buy sites in advance of need. By the time the need for a school is imperative, he says, "all available land in an area has been subdivided, streets, sewers and services installed and, in many instances, houses constructed in solid blocks to the exclusion of the possibility of securing an adequate site at a reasonable price."

Can't Be Orderly

CALLING for a new administration building, Dr. Strayer said that the present inadequate housing "is a dramatic challenge not only to the pride but the social conscience of the citizens of the Capital City of the wealthiest, most efficient Nation in the world."

The "age and decrepitude" of the buildings housing school offices, and the fact that they are scattered all over the city, "makes efficient, orderly administration exceedingly

WORLD AFFAIRS

U. S. Inclined to 'Hold Line' and Fix Blame

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

AMERICAN diplomacy appears to have come to a dead stop in its dealings with the Soviet Union. Officials are stumped as to what to do next, and where, how or whether any direct dealings with the Russians will be worth the time and effort needed.

Secretary Marshall admitted as much last week when he gave the press his estimate of the United Nations Assembly after eight weeks in Paris.

He said this year's Assembly had been more useful than the previous one, because now all nations except the Soviet bloc see clearly the real cause of the past year's frustrations.

In other words, the Assembly must be adjudged a success, not because it helped to solve difficult problems, not because it reduced tension between east and west, but because all but six of its members now blame Russia for what has gone wrong. No more tired or discouraging statement has come from General Marshall since he became Secretary of State almost two years ago.

His mood as he came home from Paris was that of the generals of the World War of 1914, who thought they were succeeding if they held a line of blood-soaked trenches from Switzerland to the North Sea.

Generalship in those days showed a dismal lack of the imagination and resourcefulness that might have broken the stalemate. Diplomacy today shows the same lack and the same signs of having bogged down.

Springtime Optimism

TWO years ago, one year ago, the State Department would not have been content just to hold the line and to fix the blame. Six months ago Secretary Marshall told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that "it is a principal objective of our foreign policy to find peaceful solutions to our differences with Soviet Union."

When a Congressman asked him how he would deal with the Soviet abuse of the veto power in the U. N., he answered that there were too many suspicions and fears in the world at the moment. But he added this important statement:

"My own view is, and it is the view of my associates and advisers, that when we have achieved a little more of a feeling of security, when we have achieved particularly a little more economic stability in the world, these suspicions will be moderated.

"Gradually we will work into a back-and-forth adjustment that will lend itself, in general, to a more moderate point of view, and this would be the basis for getting together on some of the issues now under discussion."

The United States has made enormous and unprecedented efforts in the past year to create such a sense of security in the Western world. The Marshall Plan was as daring, and as well thought out, as the wartime landing in Normandy and the brilliant campaign that followed. Economic health and strength are already returning to western Europe. First steps have already been taken to supplement the Marshall Plan by providing American military equipment for western Europe, and by linking the nations on both sides of the Atlantic in a treaty of mutual self defense.

Yet Soviet diplomacy is no more tractable than it was; the economic blood transfusion in western Europe has not produced a sense of security in the west or anything resembling "a more moderate point of view" in the east; the areas of tension remain, and American diplomacy seems content to let them remain, in the hope that a shift in the balance of power, and the passage of time, will remove them.

An Evident Weariness

"WHAT I'm afraid of," said one of Secretary Marshall's advisers not long ago, "is that a kind of lockjaw will set in, so that neither we nor the Russians will be able to give and take on any issue anywhere. If that happens, then it can only end in war in the long run."

Top officials are by no means convinced that war is inevitable, yet there are signs that the dread lockjaw has begun to paralyze initiative and effort on both sides. Policies are being frozen, attitudes have hardened, compromise of any kind has become more difficult, and the mere prospect of negotiation with the Russians has become a horror from which diplomats recoil.

One senses in American diplomacy today, at the start of a new Administration, a great weariness that comes from long months and years of blasted hopes in dealing with the Soviet Union.

For example, the American delegation went to the Paris Assembly resolved to suspend all further efforts to reach agreement on the international control of atomic energy. Two years of work had been frustrated by Soviet stubbornness. It was natural to think that any further talk would be a waste of time, and Brig. Gen. Frederick Osborn, the American delegate on the Atomic Energy Commission, fought strenuously against going any further.

But other countries were not so exasperated and not so willing to admit failure. The smaller nations at the Assembly insisted that the work go on. So, against American wishes, the commission will try to write a draft treaty for setting up an international authority to control atomic energy. The prospect of Soviet agreement are no better than before, but at least the effort will be renewed; and perhaps some fresh and resourceful minds will find some new way to get results.

Resigned to Stalemate

THE Berlin crisis remains deadlocked after two months of what Secretary Marshall last week called a most earnest and intelligent effort by the six so-called neutral members of the Security Council.

One proposal for a settlement was vetoed by the Soviet Union; a new appeal by Assembly President Herbert V. Evatt and Secretary General Trygve Lie was resented by the western delegations. The reports from Paris suggest that both the Russians and Americans are reconciled to seeing the blockade and the airlift go on throughout the winter.

Imagination appears to have come into a dead-end street on this issue and on others as well. Six months have gone by, for example, since the Cominform denounced Marshal Tito and the first crack appeared in the structure of Soviet-dominated Europe. Apart from propaganda, nothing appears to have been done by western diplomacy to widen that crack, except to push ahead with the economic and military strengthening of western Europe.

Nothing has been done to try, at least, to wean the satellites away from their unwilling allegiance to Russia—or, if anything has been done, the public has not been told.

Poland, to take one example, has been trying for two years to get a loan from the World Bank to develop her coal mines. The World Bank is willing; Paul Hoffman, the Economic Cooperation Administrator, has urged the loan because Polish coal would help western Europe. But Undersecretary Lovett and the State Department and the military establishment have each put their foot down.

Their reason is that coal-mining equipment for Poland will add to the war potential of the Soviet Union. Yet Secretary Marshall himself told the House Foreign Affairs Committee last spring: "The more that present differences are talked about and treated exclusively as a military problem, the more they tend to remain so."

Austrian Case Reviewed

IN ONLY one area have there been signs in the last few days of a willingness to try again, in spite of past frustrations and failures.

This is the case of the Austrian treaty, which would end the blighting four-power occupation of Austria and remove the last legal excuse for the Russians to keep troops in eastern Austria, Hungary and Romania.

Long and exhausting negotiations over Austria led nowhere, the last of them in London in the spring. In the months that followed, officials here and in London took the position that they would not even consider a new effort on Austria until the Berlin blockade were lifted.

Now, however, officials in the western capitals are looking over the old documents, wondering what mistakes, if any, they made in past discussions, and considering what concessions they might make on some disputed points if Russia gave way on others.

Nobody knows whether the Soviet position has changed or could be changed without sacrificing the independence of Austria in the process. But the important fact is that the western governments are willing to find out. On this issue, at least, resourcefulness is not yet dead. If the Austrian government should ask the four powers to resume treaty negotiations, the prospects are that the western governments would agree.

American policy toward Russia was described long ago as a combination of patience and firmness. The patience has been wearing thin in recent months; the word "firmness" has too often been confused with "inflexibility"—and they do not mean the same thing.

Perhaps it's the lingering magic of old Vienna, but camaraderie of East and West still persists. Here an MP from Oklahoma, a Viennese policeman and a Russian MP share patrol duty in the Austrian capital

Cow-Milker Teich Purged of Nazism

By Edwin Hartrich

FRANKFURT, Nov. 27.—Consider the case of Erich Teich, 38-year-old cow-milker. What has happened to him is an example of why the Allied attempt to denazify Germany has become a farce, with dangerous political implications for the Western powers in the future.

Erich Teich was never a member of the Nazi Party, wasn't even "interested in politics." He just milked cows on a farm at Freising in Bavaria. In 1941 Teich was drafted into the ordinary police force. Later he was transferred to a police division stationed in occupied Holland. In the closing stages of the war, this division was incorporated into the Waffen SS, Heinrich Himmler's army. Teich was promoted to buck sergeant.

Before the end of the war Sergeant Teich was hauled before an SS court martial and sentenced to two years' imprisonment for political and defeatist remarks.

When the war ended Teich was arrested by the Americans and put into an internment camp. As a sergeant in the Waffen SS, he fell into the automatic arrest category, of those Germans considered the backbone of the Nazi movement. Two years later he was haled before a German court to be "denazified."

The court admitted that Teich had never "been interested in politics . . . that he had been drafted into the Waffen SS through no action of his own . . . that no brutal or abominable activities could be proved against him." But the fact that he was promoted to sergeant was evidence of his "acceptance of Nazi ideology." Consequently, Teich "had contributed considerably to the preservation of Nazi tyranny," the court stated. After two years in prison, Teich was sentenced to one more year in a labor camp, plus forfeiture of 10 per cent of his property.

Can't Be an Editor

THE denazification court further stipulated that he was forever barred from holding public office, including being a lawyer or a notary public. He cannot become a member of a trades union or of any economic or professional organization. He is further barred, for the next five years, from being employed in any position other than common laborer. He cannot become a teacher, preacher, editor, writer or radio commentator. In addition, he was forbidden to own an automobile.

The court, however, did not specify that Teich could no longer milk his cows, a job perhaps more interesting to this Bavarian peasant than any career as editor or even radio commentator.

Cow-milker Teich was considered a Nazi big shot. The law for "the liberation from National Socialism and militarism of March 5, 1946," specified that any members of such organizations as the SS, above certain ranks, like sergeants in the Waffen SS, were automatically included in the top brackets.

In sharp contrast, consider the cases of 12 former Nazi Gauleiters who are still waiting to be denazified in western Germany. Why are other cases being delayed while small fry like Teich get the book thrown at them?

Why was Gunther Reinecke, chief SS judge, acquitted, as was Eduard Jedamzcik, Gestapo chief of East Prussia? Hugo Steinnes, one of Germany's leading industrialists, a supporter of Hitler and a party member, was exonerated recently by a denazification court. SS Gen. Kurt Schmitt was classified as a minor offender; SS Brig. Baron von Schroeder, leading financier of the Nazi Party, got off with a three-month prison sentence.

Those are only a few of thousands of well-known and important adherents and profiteers of the Hitler regime who are now escaping the penalties of the stringent denazification law.

Taking Over Courts

THERE are several reasons for this muddle, which is now so embarrassing that the United States Military Government is attempting to wash its hands of any connection with denazification.

First, there is an important development which is entirely counter to the original objective of the denazification program. Many former Nazi are gaining positions of power in the postwar governments of western Germany.

United States Military Headquarters in Munich recently reported that 60 per cent of the judges and 76 per cent of the public prosecutors in Bavaria are former Nazi Party members. A military government survey in Hesse disclosed that one out of every two top state officials is a former Nazi. In Wurtemburg-Baden, residents of Schwabish-Gmund elected a former Nazi as mayor by a three-to-one majority. He openly campaigned on a pro-Nazi, anti-Semitic platform. This election was invalidated by the military government, but that does not change the local sentiments expressed.

The denazification program, originating with the Americans and turned over with relief to the Germans in March, 1946, was a complex task. It seems now to have been political naivette to imagine that a nation which once gave Hitler 95 per cent majorities, could turn around and be its own prosecutor, judge and defendant.

For example, of Bavaria's six million adults, including two million refugees from Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, 1,500,000 Germans were implicated as Nazis and subject to legal action. Almost 900,000 out of three million adults in Hesse fell into the same category.

Big Shots Have Friends

BY SUCCESSIVE and sweeping revisions of the law, large groups of former Nazis were given legal clearance. But there are about 20,000 former important Nazis who still have to face the courts—and their chances of being exonerated or of escaping with light penalties increase with every passing day.

Little Nazis like Cow-milker Erich Teich were the first to go before the courts because their cases were the easiest to dispose of. The Nazi big shots have an increasing number of friends and smart lawyers who can get one postponement after another.

More dangerous than any other development is the effect that the denazification muddle is having on the 130,000 men who fell into the automatic arrest category. They have long been held in interment camps, brooding over their fate. They were largely Hitler's most faithful supporters. But they see the high-ranking Nazis escaping with acquittals or small fines while they pay stiffer prices for their loyalty to the Fuehrer.

There is a real danger that these men may be attracted to communism and Russia, which has not made a similar policy mistake concerning denazification. The basic Communist approach in eastern Germany has been, "Come home to us. All will be forgiven if you repent of your sins and give us your future allegiance."

Teich was released on appeal April 16 after serving eight months of his one-year sentence, plus two years behind barbed wire, before being politically purified in the theoretically democratic postwar Germany.

Germans have a cynical and more apt description of this sort of thing. "Denazification means renazification. We wanted to close our books on Hitler and forget about him, but apparently you won't permit us to do that."

Swiss Financing New Refugee Asylum

BERN, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Swiss government, with one eye on the muddled international situation, is making discreet preparations to care for a new wave of refugees.

Under a plan approved by the Federal Council, the government would contribute half the cost of caring for refugees, with private welfare organizations paying the rest. There are still 7000 political refugees in Switzerland as a result of the last war.

The council pointed out that quite a large number of foreigners had entered Switzerland since the war on legitimate errands and found when they wanted to go home that political events had made return inadvisable or impossible.

"The uncertain political situation in the world could bring almost any day a great increase in the number of refugees seeking asylum in Switzerland," the council said. "There can be no doubt that the Swiss people are ready again to accept refugees as long as the possibilities and the means of assistance of our own country permit it."

However, it was found that individual cantons or towns sometimes are reluctant to accept refugees because of the heavy financial burden.

"A policy of asylum," the council said, which can be influenced by financial considerations can lead to no result worthy of our traditions. Ways and means therefore must be found so that the decision over the acceptance of a refugee will not be influenced by financial considerations."

For this reason, the council proposed that the government assume an important part of the financial burden. The proposal will be submitted to parliament for approval.

How Champagne Helped Bridge Rhine

tions. The assaulting Americans found the Ludendorff Bridge over the Rhine was still standing at Remagen.

A Surprise Package

THE GERMANS had, of course, made elaborate advance preparations to destroy the Rhine bridges. The Ludendorff Bridge was no exception. However, so rapid was the advance of the American troops and so great was the confusion created among the defenders, that indecision and doubt overtook the detachment responsible for detonation of the charges under the bridge.

I was at dinner in my Reims headquarters with the corps and division commanders of the American airborne forces when Bradley's call came through. When he reported that we had a permanent bridge across the Rhine I could scarcely believe my ears. He and I had frequently discussed such a development as a remote possibility, but never as a well-founded hope.

I fairly shouted into the telephone: "How much have you got in that vicinity that you can throw across the river?"

He said, "I have more than four divisions, but I called you to make sure that pushing them over would not interfere with your plans."

I replied, "Well, Brad, we expected to have that many divisions tied up around Cologne and now those are free. Go ahead and shove over at least five divisions instantly, and anything else that is necessary to make certain of our hold."

His answer came over the phone with a distinct tone of glee: "That's exactly what I wanted to do, but the question had been raised here about conflict with your plans, and I wanted to check with you."

That was one of my happy moments of the war. Broad success in war is usually foreseen by days or weeks, with the result that when it actully arrives, staffs have discounted it and are immersed in plans for the future.

This was completely unforeseen. We were across the Rhine, on a permanent bridge; the traditional defensive barrier to the heart of Germany was pierced. The final defeat of the enemy, which we had long calculated would be accomplished in the spring and summer campaigning of 1945, was suddenly now, in our minds, just around the corner.

The Champagne Bridge

AFTER General Collins and his VII Corps crossed the Rhine, he was, of course, concerned with getting his floating bridges established as quickly as possible. He called in his corps engineer, Col. Mason J. Young, and said: "Young, I believe you can put a bridge across this river in 12 hours. What kind of a prize do you want me to give you for doing it in less time than that?"

Young reflected a second and then said, "I don't want anything, but if you can promise a couple of cases of champagne to my men we shall certainly try to win them." "All right," said Collins, "I'll get the champagne if you get me a bridge in less than 12 hours."

In 10 hours and 11 minutes the 330-yard bridge was completed and the first load crossed the river. Collins gladly paid off. I heard that even this creditable record was later broken.

The stunning victories by the First and Third Armies completed the second step in the planned destruction of the German forces west of the Rhine. There now remained only the great hostile garrison in the Saar Basin. These troops were situated in a huge triangle that had its base along the Rhine, with the two sides meeting in a point 75 miles to the west.

Bradley was poised to strike at the nose of the triangular salient and at its northern base; Devers was ready to crush in its southern side.

The attack began March 15. The southern and western attacks met stiff opposition in the enemy's strong defenses but made good progress, so much so that the entire German attention seemed centered on these two great attacks. This made the assault of the XII Corps, across the lower Moselle, very effective.

The corps began crossing the river March 14 and during the entire operation never met heavy and organized resistance. This may have been because the Germans expected the corps to push northward down the Rhine, to join the forces east of the river in the Remagen bridgehead.

20 Divisions Knocked Out

PATTON did not even pause when his forces reached the Rhine, but threw Maj. Gen. Stafford Irwin's Fifth Division across the river without formal preparation of any kind. Irwin's losses were negligible and on March 23 his division was well established in this second Allied bridgehead.

Mopping up in the Saar was speedily accomplished, and by March 25 all organized resistance west of the Rhine had ended.

During the month-long campaign our captures of German prisoners averaged 10,000 per day. This meant that the equivalent of 20 full divisions had been subtracted from the German army, entirely aside from normal casualties in killed and wounded. The enemy suffered great losses in equipment and supplies, and in important areas of manufacture and sources of raw materials.

Operation Varsity, the most successful airborne operation of the war, dropped Allied forces across the northern Rhine, and this was followed quickly by additional crossings all the way up the river to Phillippsburg. Hitler's last natural line of defense was breached.

General Eisenhower watched Field Marshal Montgomery's crossing, with Operation Varsity, from an old church tower. He marched up to the river with infantry assault troops with whom he talked about how nervous a man can feel before a great attack. All the while he was planning the next great drives to overrun Germany. All this is described in the twenty-third installment of "Crusade in Europe," which will be published tomorrow.

Flying Hopes to Lick Weather by '52

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

SAFER and more dependable air transportation is on the way.

At long last, Government, science and industry have blueprinted and launched a coordinated program to whip aviation's chief enemy—bad weather.

The plan contemplates replacing our present airways system and navigation methods with new all-weather procedures within five years. Within another decade it aims at completely automatic flight—independent of the elements.

The "transition" or five-year program employs methods and equipment already developed or assured. According to Civil Aeronautics Administrator D. W. Rentzel, it'll cost the Federal Government about 350 million dollars and the airlines and private fliers from 125 to 150 millions to install. But an all-weather air navigation and landing system is so vital to national defense and the air transport industry that all concerned consider this cheap.

Delays due to weather not only are an inconvenience to the traveler; they hit the airlines and airports hard financially. Unreliability of their schedules cost the carriers 40 million dollars in 1946. That is almost double the 1947 net loss suffered by the airlines.

The Nation's civil airports—worth six billion dollars—are closed by weather about 15 per cent of the time. Expenses continue during these periods without any return. Full use of airports would add another billion dollars to airport values.

And the airlines are subsidized and major airports are owned outright by Federal, State or municipal governments. All-weather flying, say the experts, would make air transport subsidies unnecessary.

A Defense Thoroughfare

BUT the vital need for the new system rests on more pressing grounds. In time of war or emergency, large numbers of military planes—bombers, fighters, troop-laden transports—would have to be moved swiftly. Our present congested airways and airports could not handle such a movement in bad weather.

The transition program includes these major elements:

(1) Replacement of our present, outmoded low-frequency radio range and communication systems by a new static-free VHF system which in effect provides an entirely new airways network. Properly equipped airplanes will always know where they are and no longer can get lost over the United States. They can head straight for their destination in all weather without following roundabout airlanes, flying "cross country" but still "on the beam."

(2) Installation of a reliable system for landing airplanes in near zero-zero weather at all major airports. The system involves (1) an automatic let-down procedure, "riding a beam" while being monitored by radar; (2) ground traffic control of airports and their approaches by radar; (3) actual landing of the plane by the pilot, aided by a new system of ground lighting.

Major feature of the new airways network is the omnidirectional radio range. Four hundred of these VHF installations now are going in throughout the United States, augmented by 140 Air Force and Navy stations here and overseas. All are expected to be in operation by next summer.

Unlike the present four-course radio ranges, which hold pilots to the airways in all except good weather, planes can ride omnirange beams in any direction, to or from a station. No longer will airmen have to wear earphones continuously, listening to the monotonous "dah dit" and frequent squawks of static. They'll merely watch a dial, making sure its needle is centered. Static-free voice transmission, plus weather data and other instructions, will confirm the instrument reading.

All danger of a pilot "confusing his quadrant" is eliminated by the new system—a present source of worry and accidents.

Uses 2-Way Radar

TWO other developments now almost ready for production and installation are "DME"—distance-measuring equipment—and the course-line computer. They are closely tied in with the omnirange.

DME requires both transmitting and receiving radar sets on the plane and at the omnirange station. A small transmitter on the airplane send a pulse to the ground station, where it is received and an answer transmitted back to the plane. The length of time elapsed registers in terms of miles distant from the station on an instrument on the cockpit dashboard. Thus the pilot always knows not only the direction he is from a fixed point, but also his distance from it. He can't get lost.

The Falls Church, Va., omni-range, similar to the one in the lower left-hand corner of the diagram

By varying the delay between receiving the signal at the ground station and sending the reply—measured in millionths of a second—it is possible to keep such information from enemy planes. Friendly planes would know the code setting for their receiving sets; the enemy would not.

The course-line computer, when installed on a plane, enables it to fly a straight course between any two points even though not heading to or from an omnirange. The pilot tunes in on a nearby range, presets certain data, such as his course and speed, and the computer solves his navigational problem for him. It automatically does the trigonometry involved. All he has to do is keep the needle centered on the before-mentioned dial on his panel.

Permits Parallel Courses

THIS combination of omnirange, DME and computer will have great military advantages. It will permit temporary, parallel airways to be set up in congested areas when mass movements of planes are required in an emergency, and will completely remove the present, dangerous, airways bottleneck.

Furthermore, the omnirange will be a great asset in any future beachhead operations. During the war three separated stations had to be installed many miles apart for loran and similar systems of navigation. The omni requires only one site.

The transition all-weather flying program relies heavily on radar. Surveillance radars will be installed at airports and ultimately at intermediate CAA stations to check the course and approach of aircraft. They will be in communication with them by means of the new VHF radio.

Such radar installations will double in brass as part of the Nation's aircraft warning network—a project which defense chiefs declare is essential.

Precision radar sets—GCA—will control traffic over an airport in bad weather, and will have a role in actually bringing planes down through the soup. Experiments now under way at the CAA station at Indianapolis promise to eliminate the "ground clutter" from radar scopes—reflections from metal buildings, etc.—which now greatly complicate the work of operators.

Set Down by Hand

THE instrument letdowns of airplanes in bad weather will be by the ILS now installed at major airports. GCA will monitor them down, and bring in planes not equipped for ILS. When airline planes install the proper equipment and pilots are sold on the system, the letdown will be "no hands," by linking the plane's automatic pilot to the ILS beams.

Actual landings probably will continue to be manual, though planes can and do land entirely blind.

A new system of "slope line" approach lights, reported last week in The Washington Post, rounds out the all-weather transition system. It aids the pilot in making the actual landing from the few hundred feet of visibility which normally is present in bad weather.

The transition program rules out two elements which received much attention during its development. One is some means of either dispelling fog or actually seeing through it. No practical solution was found. The other was some sort of a radar warning device aboard planes to give advance notice that they were close to a mountain, tower or another airplane in thick soup.

Howard Hughes' much publicized warning gadget, supported by the CAB, was found wanting after test. This and other similar developments gave a warning but did not tell the pilot what to do in the few seconds he had left to avoid a collision in the clouds.

Advice From a Robot

THE interim program, expected to be in operation by 1952-54, if funds are forthcoming, should do much for American aviation—military and civil. Beyond that is the ultimate program agreed upon by all primarily concerned—Government, the airlines, manufacturers, research men, private pilots, etc. To be completed in the mid-1960s, it may cost another billion dolars.

Prepared by the Radio Technical Commission for Aeronautics—which includes representatives of the military, civil air agencies, industry, etc.—it is based on known principles which must be harnessed to applied science. Some practical men of aviation still are skeptical that the plan is practical. It involves:

A fully automatic ground and air system to keep track of the presence, speed, course and intentions of every plane in the air. This information would be televised and recorded both in the tower and the cockpit of each plane as needed.

Automatic equipment to give instructions to each plane from the ground as to whether he is following his flight plan—that is, when he is on course and entering the proper air space. It would warn the pilot when the air space block ahead was occupied and would tell him what to do, recording such instructions and compliance automatically on a board in the tower.

Televise the readings of a plane's instruments to the ground, check them and give any necessary corrections.

Provide a private radio telephone between each plane and the ground at all times.

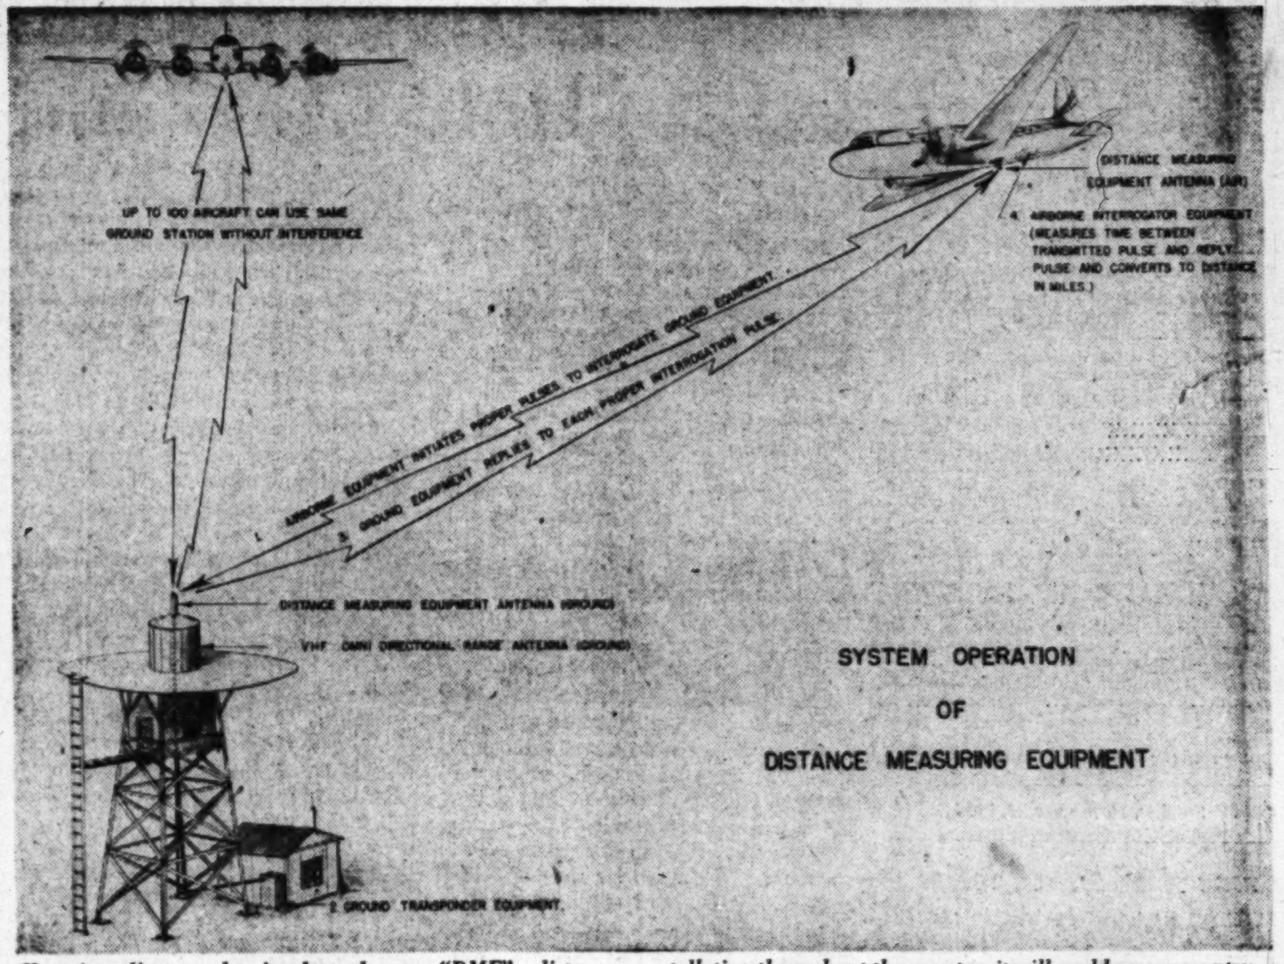
Automatically channel planes approaching an airport in order down the final glide path for a landing and give similar control while taxiing on the ground.

It's In the Works

IT SOUNDS "Buck Rogerish," but the experts say it is possible and practicable.

"The procedures and plans for bringing it about are already established," says CAA Administrator Rentzel, "and the program is now under way. The men and women of CAA are dedicated to the accomplishment of this ultimate program—a program which we believe will be the greatest development in aviation since the invention of the airplane itself.

"Without such a program, civil air commerce cannot reach its true level of importance. The personal airplane cannot become a part of everyone's daily life—and, most important, we cannot provide the complete air defense of our Nation as dictated by the war of the future."



Here is a diagram showing how the new "DME"—distance measuring equipment—works. Now being perfected for installation throughout the country, it will enable cross-country pilots to "stay on the beam" regardless of their position

Montevideo Offers Capital a Haven

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Nov. 27 (AP).—A new South American haven for refugee money from any place in the world has been created in Uruguay under a recently passed investment law.

Foreign investment capital is free to come into Uruguay and go to work, and a like freedom is extended for withdrawal of funds for reinvestment elsewhere. There is a small tax, but barriers existing in so many other countries against the movement of foreign capital are missing.

The law was enacted three months ago with opponents contending it posed a threat to the independence of local industry and with its sponsors maintaining it would attract investment capital.

So far, the anticipated flood of investment money is not in sight. The fact that no great international interests have come to Montevideo is interpreted by some as due to the recent depreciation of Uruguayan currency in terms of dollars. Others, however, discount that factor and say several investment companies are ready to come to Uruguay.

They believe the peso fluctuation has been related to the dollar shortage rather than to a feeling that Uruguay offers less security than countries of more conservative economic policies.

Rayburn Won't Have to Try Speaker's Chair for Size

By Rowland Evans, Jr.
Associated Press Staff Writer

WHEN Sam Rayburn mounts the House Speaker's stand January 3, he won't need a guide to slip him into the seat Republican Joe Martin has kept warm the past two years.

Rayburn gaveled the House in the Seventy-seventh, Seventy-eighth and Seventy-ninth Congresses. He deserves to resume the role of Speaker in the Eighty-first, say the men who ran the Democratic campaign fight, because no member of Congress labored more conscientiously for the cause than the brown-eyed Texan.

He took the stump in nine States, from Oklahoma to Pennsylvania, concentrating in marginal areas where Democratic candidates were having toughest sledding.

His Columbia, S. C., speech on a Southwide radio hook-up was described by a Democratic bigwig as "the single most important speech in the South in cooling down passions" and bringing out the Democratic vote.

Sam Taliaferro Rayburn was born January 6, 1882, the eighth in a family of 11 children. He took a degree from East Texas Normal College on the strength of a $25 endowment from his family (all they could afford to give him), countless odd jobs and a bright mind.

He then took law at the University of Texas, passed his bar exams and went back home to Bonham, where he hung out his shingle.

Speaker in His 20s

HE SAYS he is a "lawyer by trade," but it would seem more accurate to substitute "legislator" for lawyer. Rayburn has been writing laws since he was 24, when he won election to the Texas House.

He was reelected in 1908, and in 1911, in his third term, he took over the Speakership, the youngest man ever elected to that job in Texas.

But he wanted the big time, and in 1912 he convinced Texas' Fourth Congressional District that it should send him to Washington.

He took his seat on the majority side of the aisle the same day Woodrow Wilson took his first presidential oath. He was only 31, but already was skilled in the legislative art.

He has been returned to Congress ever since, but not always just for the asking. Of his 19 bids for reelection, he was unopposed only "four or five times" in the all-important primary, says a congressional aide. In 1920 he barely eked out enough votes for nomination.

Meantime he established himself as an extremely able and loyal party man. When the Democrats took over Congress in 1931 Rayburn, who had been ranking minority member of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, became its chairman. The move put him in a strategic position to springboard much of President Roosevelt's New Deal legislation to the floor of the House.

This included the Federal Communications Act, the Securities Exchange Commission Act, the Rayburn-Wheeler Holding Company Act and the Rural Electrification Act.

Succeeded Bankhead

IN 1937 he was elected Majority Leader. From 1930 on his name had figured prominently in party caucuses whenever a new Speaker was elected. When Speaker William Bankhead died in September, 1940, Rayburn was unanimously elected. He was reelected Speaker in 1941, 1943 and 1945 and became Minority Leader when the Democrats lost the 1946 congressional election.

The deaths of Rayburn's three predecessors in office within a six-year span show the tremendous burden the Speaker must assume. But it's a job the 5-feet 10-inch 170 pound Rayburn says he is physically well equipped to handle. He says he weighs no more now than the day in 1913 when he first came to Congress.

He is a bachelor ("I've always been willing," he once told a group of Army nurses) and all but bald as an egg. Once at a Washington party an admiring matron said to a mutual friend: "What a nice head of hide he has."

Sam Rayburn gavels the House to order after his election as Speaker of the Seventy-eighth Congress in 1943

Rayburn does not make a habit of parties. He spends most of his evenings in his apartment on Q st.

During his last tour as Speaker he rarely entered debate on the House floor. His custom was to leave the chair as soon as he could, appoint a Democrat to handle the routine and hurry down to his small office on the first floor of the Capitol, where his important business was conducted.

But he did take the floor in September, 1941, for a calm plea to the House to extend the Selective Service Act of 1940. It passed by a majority of one.

Rayburn says that in legislation, like everything else, a "little applied Christianity" goes a long way. Most ordinary legislation, he thinks, is a question of regulating the minority—"the pistol-toting minority."

In the new Congress, Rayburn will be working with a majority of 91 Democrats, which would seem comfortable enough. But Rayburn has said the ideal majority is 50-60; that larger majorities than that tend to become unwieldy.

Keep this in mind against the time you make our your Federal income tax return next March:

If you reach age 65 any time this year—even on December 31—you're allowed an extra $600 exemption in tax on 1948 income. If your wife (or husband) reaches 65 this year, you get another $600 extra exemption for her.

This is in addition to the regular $600 exemption granted taxpayer and spouse.

Air Force Is 'Lying Down' on the Job

By James J. Strebig
Associated Press Aviation Reporter

DAYTON, OHIO, Nov. 27.—Air Force pilots soon may lie down on the job.

They've been sitting at their work since the Government bought its first airplane in 1909. And sometimes they've gotten mighty tired of it. Pilots actually have abandoned planes in flight because of the agony of uncomfortable seats on long missions.

Fast jet warplanes, with their slim silhouettes, call for cockpit changes. The aeromedical laboratory of the Air Material Command at Wright Field has come up with an answer—the prone position bed for pilots.

One aim is to eliminate the drag-producing cockpit canopy. The other is to help the pilot withstand the great forces exerted in high-speed turns without blacking out.

After extensive tests, a prone position pilot bed has been installed in the nose of a B-17 Flying Fortress. An observer sits beside the test subject and a safety pilot in the regular cockpit.

Further testing is planned in the forward part of a TF-80 Shooting Star, a two-place jet trainer. The rear seat would be occupied by a safety pilot.

The biggest problems in a prone position cockpit are comfort, visibility and control. The latest bed design appears to answer all three.

Eighteen persons, including 10 pilots, each spent eight consecutive hours on the bed without serious discomfort. Two men later made 12-hour tests.

In general, the bed consists of a nylon net suspended over a frame curved to approximate the contour of the pilot's body. From knees to shoulder, the angle is roughly 30 degrees. From knees to ankle, the leg is elevated about 30 degrees the other way.

Body weight, except head and arms, is distributed over the nylon net. The net can carry about 30,000 pounds, the equivalent of 150 "Gs" on a 200-pound pilot.

One "G" is the weight of a person or object at rest. The centrifugal force of turns is measured in terms of "G". The prone bed has been tested up to 16 "Gs," substantially more than normally is experienced even in combat aircraft.

The pilot's head weight is carried on two chin pads of foam rubber covered with chamois leather. His arms rest on foam rubber pads in two metal pans, at the ends of which are pistol grips and levers for flight and power controls. The arm rests themselves are the major flight controls and move sidewise, up and down, forward and backward.

The pilot's feet rest against pedals to operate either brakes or rudder. The three-direction movement of the arm rests would permit foot control of rudders to be eliminated. This step is favored by some scientists.

Prone position is new only in its modern application. The Wright brothers made their first flights lying on their stomachs.

The study of prone position was revived in the middle 1930s by the Germans. The British Royal Air Force, the United States Navy and eventually the Air Force ran prone position tests. Pilots rejected the idea in all cases because of discomfort.

Arms And The Victim

While Superintendent Barrett and the Commissioners are bulling ahead with their plan to arm a corps of civilian police, the drive is lagging for funds to aid the victim of irresponsible use of a police weapon. Last July, Dorothy Kilmer was shot as two policemen off duty were fooling with a revolver. Ten thousand dollars is estimated to be the sum necessary for treatment to help her walk again. As of this writing, less than half that amount has been donated to the campaign on her behalf sparkplugged by Bill Gold in this newspaper.

Major Barrett himself vetoed the most practical way to aid Miss Kilmer, which was to seek damages from Congress. The Commissioners meekly agreed with him, on the ground that it would set a "precedent." Yet they can find money to half-train and fully arm a reserve corps whose need has never been demonstrated. We earnestly hope that the Kilmer case is not a preview of what will happen under the new corps, but we confess that the growing military tendency of the Police Department does not make us too sanguine. Not only are the civilians to be armed, but pictures also are published of the riot squad, which looks like the SS Corps in full battle regalia preparing, perhaps, for an invasion from Mars. Provide for the needs of legitimate community protection, yes—but before passing the guns around so freely, why not pay for the last victim?

The Fourth Round

Delegates to the CIO convention have passed a resolution to the effect that the CIO's continual objective is to "build a high-consumption-level economy wherein wage earners' real income is continually increasing." If this statement means, as is generally assumed, that demands for fourth-round wage increases are to be pushed, another twist to the inflationary spiral is in prospect. For, despite labor's contention that wage increases can be absorbed by industry without an increase in prices, the fact is that higher labor costs have in the past, and undoubtedly will hereafter, result in raising the prices of produced goods, if industry is to continue operating at the high levels required to insure virtually full employment of the labor force.

The infitaionary spiral resulting from sustained pressure for higher wages cannot continue forever. If it is not brought to an end by voluntary action, the inexorable pressure of economic forces will ultimately put a stop to inflation by harsher means—that is, through an industrial recession that will result in unemployment and complete loss of income for great numbers of workers. Such predictions have been heard ever since the postwar wage-price spiral began, and so far nothing has happened. Consequently the voices of warning go unheeded, as was the case back in the twenties when the country embarked on a speculative spree that ended in a dire collapse.

Yet there is accumulating evidence that the pressure of unsatisfied demands for goods supported by a high level of consumer incomes—a pressure that is the basis of our present prosperity—is weakening. The shortages that created sellers' markets for many goods are vanishing, while here and there workers are being laid off. The Federal Reserve Board notes, too, that recent declines in wholesale prices and in farm incomes, likewise the result of lower prices, point to a relaxation of inflationary forces. This trend is all to the good, provided it results in much-needed adjustments in the present unbalanced price structure that do not involve sudden, sharp declines in general business activity. At the same time it reenforces the warning that another price boom, however brought about, would create serious difficulties for industries that can no longer rely on consumers to take price increases in their stride.

The best hope for maintenance of a high level of industrial activity, on which depends the well being of wage-earners, farmers and business groups, lies in a stable price structure. If organized labor were to take the lead in a movement to bring about price stability by pursuing a policy of voluntary restraint as regards wage demands, it would be serving its own interests much more effectively than by trying to keep abreast of inflation and in the effort giving impetus to further increases in prices and in living costs.

Secularism

There will be little dissent from the attack on the growing secularism of society which came last week from the pens of the Roman Catholic bishops of the United States. We are a religious people. Religion is the mainstay of our social order. This country, all countries, need religion. But there are several meanings of the word secularism, and in one particular meaning that the bishops had in mind, namely, secular education at schools maintained at public cost, secularism is part of the warp and woof of our American society. This is not to say that school education should not be informed by religious feeling. On the contrary; but the introduction of a competing sectarianism would have and, in the released-time programs, is having divisive and therefore evil consequences. In some of the forms they take, moreover, these programs are a violation of our Constitution.

Under the First Amendment the United States spelled out the separation of church and state which the makers of the Constitution had taken for granted. There was to be no established church. And if this did not mean an exclusion of sectarian religious teachers from the public school system, then the separation was incomprehensible. By the same token, to our way of thinking, there was implied a ban on proselytizing against a particular creed, and we feel that the New York school authorities were on sound ground in refusing to admit to schools a publication containing offensive attacks on Catholic dogma. A prohibition against sectarian religious instruction in schools has lately been affirmed by the Supreme Court, and the bishops take exception to the rulings, calling them "novel and omniously extensive interpretations" of the First Amendment.

In support of their case they cite Jefferson, who "as the rector of the State University of Virginia . . . proposed a system of cooperation between the various religious groups and the university which goes far beyond anything under consideration in the case in hand." It is curious to see Jefferson quoted in this connotation. In his lifetime the clergy denounced him for ungodliness. Jefferson's regulations for the University of Virginia stated that "the students of the university will be free and expected to attend religious worship at the establishment of their respective sects, in the morning and in time to meet their school in the university at its stated hour." In other words, religious exercise was to be outside and not inside college. Jefferson's interest in the religious education of the students outside college hours was typical of eighteenth century times. It is, alas, less so nowadays, though it is expressed, for example, by schoolteachers who act as Sunday-school teachers. But a commingling of sectarian and secular education would simply open school doors to that kind of sectarian disputation which, as Jefferson knew better than most, had introduced deep fissures in the society of the Old World. He did not want to see them corrode our peace and disturb our unity. He believed—and this is the spirit of the First Amendment—that the civil power ought to be not only neutral and impartial as between different forms of faith; it should not take cognizance of these matters.

The plain and unhappy fact is that sectarian squabbling has disfigured many of the public schools which have adopted released-time programs. It was a dangerous innovation, and one that the Catholic Church originally opposed. Indeed, in some States Catholic parents succeeded in eliminating the reading of the King James version of the Bible from the public schools. Their argument was based on a strict observance of the wall of separation of church and state in public schools. For our part we deplore any school bans on nonsectarian religious exercises that communities of different faiths can agree upon. But we see, contrary to the view of the Catholic bishops, a violation of the American tradition wherever, as Theodore Roosevelt said, "a given creed is aided by the state," no matter whether all creeds are impartially aided. And this would be the case and a union of church and state partly accomplished if the public schools lent their hospitality to religious instruction by denominational practitioners.

Shrinking Exports

During the first nine months of this year United States exports were 19 per cent lower than during the same period of 1947. On the other hand imports rose 24 per cent. The resultant narrowing of the export-import trade gap is a healthy development. For, as Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., Acting Assistant Secretary of Commerce says, a solution of the dollar-shortage problem abroad will be largely dependent on the capacity of other nations to market their goods here.

After allowance for interim price changes Mr. Blaisdell estimates that the import volume—as distinguished from value—was about 21 per cent above the prewar level for the first eight months of the year. Encouraging as this gain is, it is relatively small, as he says, in view of the great expansion in the volume of our industrial production since the prewar years. This country is, for that reason, in a position to import a much larger volume of goods than it did before the war "without significant domestic dislocation." That is good news not only for American industries, fearful that increased imports will result in competitive inroads on their domestic territory. It is even better news from the viewpoint of American exporters who are, or should be, well aware that the maintenance of export trade at present high levels is in the long run impossible unless foreign countries can ship us the goods required to pay for exports.

Even with the aid of ECA shipments, our export trade has been slipping, although it is probable that in the months immediately ahead exports will again turn upward as ECA shipments proceed. These exports will if wisely used, build up productive capacity in areas that have been unable to expand their export trade because of shortages of goods and capital equipment. As recovery proceeds with our help, American imports from ECA countries should increase steadily, assuming, of course, that we are prepared to buy. Mr. Blaisdell believes that "it is not unreasonable to assume that total imports can reach a 10-billion to 11-billion dollar level at current prices by 1952." And he concludes that an even higher import level would be to our interest. If his hopes are realized, it means that thereafter we can continue to maintain exports at high levels without having to provide foreign countries with funds to pay for our goods. Instead they will be paying for them by shipping to the United States products that are either in short supply here or not produced at all.

Naturally these forecasts assume that present high levels of production will continue here and that the obstacles to increased production abroad will be overcome by the time the foreign-aid program expires.

Goodby, Tipperary

A month and a half ago in London representatives of the British Commonwealth of Nations decided, among other things, to drop the word "British", from the name of that loose confederation of sovereign states. Judging by the speed and unanimity with which all commonwealth capitals have greeted the final and formal exit of Eire, they must also have agreed on this item in the "liquidation" of the former possessions of the British Crown. Further talks among commonwealth delegations in Paris have probably contributed to the smoothness of the operation.

The status of Eire as a "sovereign and independent" state, still giving slight lip service to the paramountcy of the Crown in its external affairs, has been one of the anomalies of international affairs since 1937. Eire, with its own constitution, Parliament, foreign legations and all the other paraphernalia of independence, has not considered itself a part of the commonwealth since that year. Yet its diplomats have been accredited by the King of England and foreign representatives at Dublin have been accredited to the King. The impending passage of the External Relations Act by the Dail Eireann will sever this last remaining tie.

Yet if Eire's position has been a curious half-in, half-out mixture over the past decade, it now becomes no less unusual. For the commonwealth nations have all avowed that Eire's move will make no real difference in trade and citizenship relations. Imperial preference and dual citizenship rights on a reciprocal basis will continue as they have before. Ireland has thus shifted entirely out of the family and still stayed in it, an accomplishment of no mean size.

Mr. Churchill, who has a consistent record of opposing any loosening of imperial or commonwealth ties, took pains in the parliamentary debate to disavow responsibility for or approval of the Irish change. Specifically, he declared it could set no precedent for other nations to get out of the commonwealth. But Mr. Churchill was probably shouting against the wind—and probably he knew it. India, which was all set to depart from the commonwealth a month ago, has held up action since the October conference in London. We have no inside information about the intentions of the Delhi government, but it looks to us as if the Irish move does set a precedent. If India should elect to follow it, there is nothing Mr. Churchill could do even were he in power. India is doubtless no less jealous of its newly acquired independence than Eire. Since the change is nominal rather than substantial, the departure of India from the commonwealth, while still retaining all the advantages of membership, would appear to involve no greater weakening of the bonds of mutual interest than in the case of Eire.

Sugar Coating

The British Labor government's bill to nationalize the iron and steel industry is now well on its way toward eventual passage. It was approved last week on its second reading in the House of Commons by the overwhelming vote of 373 to 211. The government exerted its full disciplinary pressure and succeeded in mustering all but 20 of its maximum voting strength of 393 members. Only sickness or absence from the country was accepted by party whips as a valid excuse for not being present and voting.

Almost at the same time the government lifted from the shoulder of British industry a considerable number of austerity controls. Those on the manufacture of some 70 different products were bodily thrown out. Form filler-outers in 4500 British firms will get the first benefit. No longer will they have to complete and file 700,000 forms for licenses and permits every year. The result, according to the British announcement, "will speed Britain's drive for bigger output and industrial efficiency."

Of the latter there would seem to be no doubt. This should be a very considerable lightening of the load of administrative red tape that is the inescapable accompaniment of any control mechanism. The curious thing is that it comes so close to the vigorous move in the opposite direction on iron and steel. Inconsistency is not always a vice of the first order, of course, and perhaps the Laborites figured to sugarcoat the pill of steel nationalization for the benefit of industrial executives.

"Man To Man"

My thanks to you. It would seem to me that in your "Man to Man" editorial of November 21 you admitted, as you did not seem to be willing to do during the campaign, that my views on the candidates and the issues had had some news value. You even say graciously that "Mr. Ickes rendered doughty and effective service to Mr. Truman in the recent campaign . . ."

And then you proceed to tell me that my slip shows. Someone more careful of his own appearance would first have stopped to free his ankles of the entangling underwear that was making him trip. You had discovered, apparently by reading your gracious and enterprising contemporary, the Washington Evening Star, that I had not expected President Truman to win on November 2 and had said so in a column that was printed by the Panama Star and Herald when it had no right to do so. The answer to that is that I never had expressed a belief that President Truman would win. In this respect I was one of the flabbergasted and overwhelming majority of editors and commentators, including yourself.

The difference between us was that, although I felt certain that Governor Dewey would win, I opposed him for all I was worth because of the principles that I made the basis for my support of President Truman. On the contrary, you believed implicitly that Governor Dewey would win and you did all that you could to effect that result even to the suppression of news. Even after the election, in your first comment on the affair, you continued to suppress. Either that, or you appraised without assessing all of the facts.

Yes, Mr. Editor, we are in the same boat and if I should blush for the showing of a bit of my slip, which I do not, you should be equally embarrassed by your entangling underwear. After taking a new look at yourself you might write another editorial comparing page two of your country edition of November 3 with your final edition of the same date. I refer, of course, to the saccharin article by Mr. Sam Stavisky on "President-Elect" Thomas E. Dewey and the different tune that your harassed editors had to play after enough election returns had come in to satisfy them that they must bury page two and consign it to quicklime.

Royalty Justified

May I, as an Englishman, resident for a period in your country, and an admirer of America and all she is doing to save the world from self-destruction, be permitted to make some comment upon the correspondence which appeared on November 20 in your paper concerning the birth of our royal prince?

The depths of Mr. Heller's ignorance in these matters makes it obvious that he cannot even have visited England. I can assure Mr. Heller that the overwhelming majority of British people are so satisfied with the colossal return they get for their money invested in their royal family that they would gladly pay many times the outlay, which is insignificant, against the burdens they are carrying for no similar dividend.

Since Mr. Heller has mentioned our undernourished and underprivileged children and our schools, may I give the following facts: The British do not spend dollars sustaining their royal family except in so far as they have to be fed like any other British citizens. Exactly the same volume and quality of food is available to every family in England (including the royal family) and is sold at a price which the poorest in the land can pay. Perhaps Mr. Heller will reflect whether this is the case in his land of no privilege. By not sparing the money spent on the royal family, the food in the country cannot be improved.

As regards schools, Mr. Heller is, of course, on his weakest ground, for he may as well know that the greatest anxiety of English people who bring their children to America is the inadequacy and inferior standard of American schools, in which, so your paper informs me, some teachers are paid worse than garbage collectors.

Honest Dealer

I have followed with interest and a certain amount of satisfaction your reporting on the car dealer investigation in the Washington area.

I myself am employed by one of the larger and comparatively newer automobile dealers in the Washington area. The president of our company has religiously followed his placement list, delivering cars in their proper sequence as the order was placed. He has not demanded trades and when there were trades he has given a fair and equitable trade in price on them; he has not forced accessories and the word "tip" would be anathema to him.

All this he has done with an eye to the future when it will again be a buyer's market, probably in the face of ridicule from other dealers who were in the "gravy" market. It is unfortunate that the herd is inevitably judged by the bad bulls.

Our Own People

Two hundred ninety thousand donors giving to deserving people and services through the Community Chest is no argument against collective financing and coordinated planning. Certainly we are interested in the social welfare of our own people. The problem seems to be one of bringing the donor and the recipient face to face and putting the medium of how we give in the background. More empsasis on the people who receive and less on the Chest in all probability will help.

I have been associated with the Boys Club of Washington in various capacities for 27 years and I know well the chaotic condition relative to charitable campaigns before the creation of the Chest plan which was jointly created by the agencies and the people of our city in 1929. Naturally the Chest and the agencies are not perfect, but what is? I hope we can together work out a solution to the problems, truthfully answer the questions and adequately meet the needs of our own people.

Auto Waiting Lists

Before the Oldsmobile division of General Motors becomes too indignant over "unfavorable publicity" caused by a recent congressional investigation, GM's spokesman should explain why its dealers have not been required to make public their new car waiting lists during the past several years.

I believe there is a Biblical reference concerning stories which is relative to GM's recent action cancelling an agreement with a local agency.

American Policy Toward Korea

I am at a loss to understand the condemnation I received from Emmanuel S. Larsen, director of the Far Eastern Information Service, in his letter of November 23.

Mr. Larsen unjustifiably asserts that my "major points of attack are almost identical with the official line of the Communist puppet government in the Soviet occupation zone of Korea." On the contrary, the Communists in Korea regard me as a worse antagonist than they regard any extreme reactionaries. It has been my contention that the only sure way to cope with the Communist tide is to provide an economically and politically healthy society with the democratic means at hand.

Mr. Larsen's defense of the status quo amounts to his advocating a continuation of American mistakes and inaction—a course which will give the Communists ammunition for the cold war in Korea. It is apparent that he is speaking the official language of President Rhee. He contends that the elections conducted May 10 were free, were blessed by the United Nations, and resulted in an overwhelming victory for Dr. Rhee.

The "overwhelming victory" amounted to 54 sure Assembly seats for Rhee's party, out of a total of 200. Twenty-nine seats went to another Rightist, but nevertheless rival, party. The Rightist Dai Dong Youth Corps captured 13 seats. But 88 seats were taken by independent candidates, 11 by splinter parties, and 5 by other youth groups. Assuming that a segment of the independents were actually followers of Rhee, and that the rival Hankook Democratic Party would give its support, Rhee's majority is still slim.

The United Nations Temporary Commission on Korea, in a very recent report to the General Assembly, indicated that it was not satisfied that the elections and the creation of the Korean Republic were a final solution to Korea's problem, in view of the fact that the nine million people of north Korea were prevented by Soviet occupation authorities from taking part in the vote.

Any student of Korean affairs knows that Rhee's government has been criticized severely by the National Assembly and by the press ever since its inception. Suppression of the press, to which Rhee has resorted, will not bring harmony.

In the recent revolt, the spark was apparently set off by a Communist group within the Korean constabulary. But if the people had not been dissatisfied, the uprising would not have spread. Prime Minister Lee Bum Suk, after his visit to the scene of the disturbances, reported that some Rightists also had taken part in the rioting. It was he, not I, who tried to shift all the blame to the American Military Government by charging them with careless selection of personnel for the Korean constabulary organization.

For the benefit of the United States as well as Korea, again I should like to urge that American policy be adequately implemented, so that communism in Korea will die naturally.

Europe's Inflation

By Andre Visson

Ill-Distributed Wealth

A PERSON returning last year from western Europe to the United States thought gratefully: "This is the blessed land of plenty." This year an American visitor to continental Europe—I emphasize "continental" because England is another story—returns home with a different thought: "This is the blessed land of a much fairer distribution of wealth."

Last year people in continental Europe who were able to enjoy a prewar living standard appeared to be the exception. You felt almost ashamed to be one of them. This year there are crowds of them. The display of luxury goods in French, Italian, to say nothing of Swiss or Belgian shop windows, is really amazing.

And this is also true of the prewar elaborate display of rich food in the best French, Italian and Belgian restaurants. These luxury goods and fabulous meals are not dispensed under the counter. There are no more black-market restaurants. All one needs is a well-filled pocketbook. But woe to the people who live on fixed salaries or annuities! For them the living conditions have considerable worsened since last summer.

In the mad race between wages and prices which has been going on since the end of the war in western Europe—especially in France—the prices have far outdistanced the wages. The price index has reached 25 times that of the prewar index. The wage index is only around 10. These two figures, 25 and 10, tell the gruesome story of the French people who have to live on fixed salaries. And it is a very gruesome story indeed.

THERE ARE government clerks who, after 20 years' of service, have to live on 10,000 or 12,000 francs a month. This means $30 to $40 a month at the legal rate, or $22 to $27 at what is politically called "parallel market rates."

To be sure, the purchasing value of the United States dollar in France is greater than in the States. It is perhaps twice as great. But even if it were double that, 45 or even 60 dollars a month will not carry one very far. The cheaper goods generally cost about as much as in the United States and sometimes even more. It is in the better shops and in more expensive restaurants that one discovers the expanded value of the dollar.

With the exception of Great Britain and perhaps the Scandinavian countries and Switzerland, western Europe has again become what it always was—the rich man's paradise and the poor man's workhouse. But in countries like France and Italy which have succumbed, in varying degree, to the easy but very costly inflationary way of life, people on fixed salaries are infinitely worse off than they were in prewar years or even a year ago.

To be sure, business people also complain about inflation. It is impossible to maintain a budget. All estimates and calculations are continually being upset. One is mighty happy in France if one can establish an approximate budget for even two or three months. But this continuing rise in both prices and wages does not prevent the expansion of business.

Since the end of the war, western Europe has been living in a seller's market. Early last spring there were signs that the seller's market was nearing its end. Stocks were growing. Many domestic needs seemed to be covered. The buyer not only in the lower but in the middle income bracket was developing an increasing resistance to the high prices.

BUT THE new inflationary trend in France—where the rate of the dollar on the parallel market went up from 300 to 475 francs, corresponding to a similar rise in the price of gold which is now sold freely on the legal market—blocked the minor and perhaps salutary recession under way in France. The American rearmament program, increasing the demand for steel—one of the key commodities—was another important factor in blocking the impending recession in Western Europe.

Many European goods may be too expensive for Europe's domestic markets. But since the United States, busy at rearming itself and western Europe too, has less goods for the international market, western European manufacturers and tradesmen have gained a respite and can stop worrying, for a time at least, about the impending drop in their exports.

And as long as they are making plenty of money they are determined to spend it, buying all the luxury goods that were so scarce two or three years ago, and are filling the expensive hotels and restaurants which have all reopened their doors.

Very wealthy people in western Europe—and they are more numerous than is realized—have an incredible amount of money to spend. Many people, although not wealthy, now have frequent opportunities to make easy money and are tempted to spend it just as easily, because "it does not pay to save," they say, since prices are being pushed ever higher by inflation.

It is only the fixed salary people who really feel the pinch of inflation. And to make their plight even worse, they also feel the pinch of taxation, since they are the only people in continental Europe who pay taxes to the last penny.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Wheat Farmer Reaps GOP Bobble

By Drew Pearson

THE blast against the British by Undersecretary of Agriculture Albert J. Loveland had more to it than meets the eye.

What Loveland was driving at was not so much Britain's wheat and cotton agreements with Canada, Australia, et al, but her backstage efforts to beat down the price of American wheat in a proposed new international wheat agreement. He was also trying to atone for the bungling of the Eightieth Congress.

Unfortunately for the American farmer, the late lamented GOP Congress refused to ratify the wheat agreement at a time when Britain and other nations agreed to a top price of $2 a bushel for wheat during the next five years. Since then wheat has dropped and the British have been privately plumping for a $1.50 maximum in any new international compact.

Loveland's blast was calculated to soften them up for bargaining at a higher level. United States spokesmen at the 57-nation Food and Agricultural Organization have been putting out feelers for a maximum price of $1.75 a bushel for world wheat during the next five years. This is 25 cents above the British proposal but 25 cents under the $2 which United States farmers were offered last summer but which the Republican Congress rejected.

The mechanics of drafting and ratifying another wheat agreement by participating nations would require six to eight months, but Loveland and his boss, Agriculture Secretary Charles Brannan, are hoping to get a preliminary commitment from the FAO, so as to get the ball rolling.

If the proposed agreement falls through, the alternative is something nobody wants—a return to rigid acreage controls. For if we can't sell our surpluses abroad we will have to limit production at home.

Merry-Go-Round

JOHN NICHOLAS BROWN of Providence, R. I., whose forebears founded Brown University, has been suggested as Secretary of the Navy, but has turned down the idea. . . . Representative John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, who will again be the House majority leader, won $1875 betting on President Truman . . . Of the $16,000 raised by Massachusetts Democrats for Truman's campaign expenses, McCormack personally raised $14,500 . . . Excluding New York City races, no Democrat who openly accepted the support of Henry Wallace was elected to a House seat, while every Democrat who openly repudiated Wallace was elected . . . Two commissioners will soon resign from the Atomic Energy Commission—William Waymack of the Des Moines Register, and Prof. Robert F. Bacher of Cornell.

No 'Peanuts' for China

GEN. AL WEDEMEYER, Chief of Army War Plans, held a significant secret session with the Joint Chiefs of Staff the other day on the much-kicked-around question of what the United States can do about China.

Wedemeyer, a former Nebraska farm boy, who had a great record as a war strategist, was first sent to China largely because Winston Churchill wanted him out of the European theater, where the American general was too persistent in opposing the long and grueling campaign through the allegedly "soft underbelly of the Axis."

So, suddenly Wedemeyer found himself appointed aide to Lord Mountbatten in India and China, despite the fact that all his training had been in Germany.

Because of this quirk of fate, Wedemeyer has now become the Army's chief expert on China, and as such he is vigorously opposed by his old chief, General Marshall.

Reporting to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Wedemeyer predicted that the Chinese Communists could capture Suchow, Nanking and even Shanghai, pretty much when they wanted to.

Wedemeyer believes the Communists are deliberately holding off until economic conditions in China become even worse. Then they can move in almost at will. Despite this, however, Wedemeyer still believes China can be saved by pulling Chiang Kai-shek's battered armies south and defending a new capital at Canton.

He has also proposed a five-billion-dollar aid program for China—two billion for Chinese military aid and three billion for civilian goods to stop inflation.

No one who knows Secretary Marshall, however, thinks the Wedemeyer plan has the slightest chance of approval. Marshall thinks pouring aid into China is like throwing peanuts at an elephant in the zoo.

Helping Small Business

NOT ALL congressional committees perform under the floodlights or exhaust all their steam tooting their own horns. A few plod along quietly, efficiently—saving their breath and tending to business. In fact, the best committees often attract the least attention.

That is why everyone has heard of the House Un-American Activities Committee and Senator Ferguson's super-sleuthing subcommittee; while few have taken much notice of the Senate Small Business Committee, which has a sharper bite though not such a noisy bark.

For two years the Senate Small Business Committee has been slinging stones at the industrial goliaths—chiefly steel, oil and newsprint. It has also broken up various schemes to squeeze out small businesses.

It was the first to expose the gray market in steel and to demand that the steel industry supply the little manufacturers.

It also saved hundreds of small petroleum dealers from going out of business when the major oil companies tried to dry up the source of supply for the independent dealers. The committee also demanded that large newspapers, which controlled most of the newsprint, share it with the smaller papers.

The Senate Small Business Committee got an amendment inserted into the Selective Service Act giving small business a part in the defense procurement program; also called ECA officials on the carpet and brought out that small business had been omitted from the vast European procurement program.

The man who has been taking the bows for all this is the committee chairman, Nebraska's blustery Senator Kenneth Wherry. And he deserves some of the credit, for it has meant a definite right-about-face for him. But the man who did the spade work and sold the idea to Wherry was the committee's chief counsel, quiet, mild George Meredith. He is the man who pulls the wires backstage.

Location Helps Clinic

Dignity for Drunks

By Don Ross

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 27.—Thirty alcoholics—ranging from unemployed dishwashers to the wife of a $15,000-a-year New York magazine executive—have applied for treatment at the Connecticut State Clinic for Alcoholics here.

The clinic, which was opened October 4, is the fifth to be set up in the State by the Connecticut Commission on Alcoholism. It is located in an attractive suite in a new building in the business district. It gives only outpatient services and has no bed facilities.

The Connecticut Commission on Alcoholism, established by the State Legislature in 1945 in a pioneering effort to cope with the growing problem of alcoholism, is supported by an allocation of 9 per cent of the license fees taken in by the State Liquor Control Commission.

The clinic here will serve without charge patients in the western part of the county. A sixth State clinic in Bridgeport will treat alcoholics in the rest of the county.

Dr. Dudley Porter Miller, executive director of the commission, says the commission scouted around until it found space in "a location with dignity." If the clinic were in "some old garret" in a less desirable part of town, he said, "we would simply be reinforcing the traditional attitudes toward alcoholism."

Nothing to Distract

THE CLINIC has four large rooms with soundproof walls, so the patient may be assured that only the psychiatrist and the psychiatric social worker will hear his story. The color scheme is a restful combination of brown and light green walls and gray desks and chairs. There are no pictures or other decorations on the walls, because it was felt that these might distract the patients' attention during interviews.

Miss Alice M. Fellows, who was a Red Cross director for five years and is a graduate of the Smith College School for Social Work, is the psychiatric social worker. In her forties, she has a pleasant face and a sympathetic manner which invite a patient to tell her all, which is precisely what she wants him to do.

Miss Fellows and Dr. Adrian C. Moulyn, who is about 45, the psychiatrist in charge, try to establish with patients what they term "rapport"—which in social work lingo simply means a bond of sympathy.

By judicious questioning, they try to learn what manner of person the patient is, and why he drinks to excess. This delicate process, which may hark back to the alcoholic's childhood, may take a month, or a year, or it may never take place at all.

The goal of the two workers is to give the patient insight into himself, illuminate the reasons for his alcoholism and suggest methods short of alcoholism of coming to terms with his surroundings.

Miss Fellows was reluctant to discuss the case of the wife of the $15,000-a-year magazine executive, lest she let slip information that would identify the woman. The names of all patients are, of course, confidential.

Miss Fellows said, however, that enough had been learned from the woman to indicate that the cause of her alcoholism might stem from a feeling of rejection. For example, the woman told Miss Fellows that her parents left her with her grandparents at the age of 1.

Go Easy on Advice

NO ONE is told that he must never take a drink, Dr. Miller said. "If we did that," he said, "we'd never see him again. He'd tell us he'd heard that stuff before, which would be the truth, because most alcoholics have gotten that advice from their wives or husbands and it didn't do any good.

"We are not able to work with the patient when he's inebriated," Dr. Miller said. Usually, the intoxicated ones steer clear of a clinic, Dr. Miller said. "They're feeling fine when they're looping," he said. "Why should they go to a clinic? It's only when they sober up and get guilty feelings that they decide they want help."

The fact that few inebriates would be coursing through the building was a point on which Dr. Miller reassured the landlord before renting the office.

Nobody was surprised when six of the patients turned out to be unemployed dishwashers, Dr. Miller said. Alcoholics who are on "Skid Row" frequently gravitate to this occupation because it offers them a meal and a warm place to stay, he said. Among the patients also were men with incomes of $5000 to $10,000 a year.

In addition to Miss Fellows and Dr. Moulyn, who is Holland-born and an instructor in psychiatry at Yale Medical School, the clinic staff consists of a secretary and a part-time consulting psychologist. Expenses of the clinic are estimated at $18,000 a year, Dr. Miller said.

The Gallup Poll

62 Pct. Give ERP Vote of Confidence

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

THE Marshall Plan, whose fate is in the hands of the new Congress, receives a substantial vote of confidence from American voters who have heard or read about it.

A coast-to-coast survey finds that nearly four times as many want to see Congress continue appropriations to support the plan as want to see it given up. The general feeling among those expressing an opinion is that the European Recovery Plan is working satisfactorily.

However, approximately two fifths of the people questioned either had not heard of the Marshall Plan or would express no opinion as to how well it has worked.

Sentiment on the measure, which has been in operation for approximately seven months, was sounded by the institute through the following series of questions put to a national cross-section:

"Have you heard or read about the Marshall Plan?"

Yes	82%
No	18

"How satisfied are you with the results of the Marshall Plan to date—very satisfied, fairly well satisfied, or not at all satisfied?"

Very satisfied	11%	50%
Fairly well satis.	39
Not at all	12
No opinion	20
	82%
Have not heard of plan	18
	100%

Eliminating the 18 per cent who have not heard of the plan, the percentages would be expressed this way:

Those Familiar With Plan

Very satisfied	14%	62%
Fairly well satis.	48
Not at all	14
No opinion	24
	100%

The third question in the survey was put to voters in two different forms. One half the cross-section was asked the general question whether Congress should continue the Marshall Plan next year. No mention was made of the fact that additional money would be needed. The question put to the other half of the cross-section asked whether Congress should appropriate the money required to continue the program.

The results on the two questions were virtually the same.

Matter of Fact

'New' Liberals Seek House Power

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

THE LABOR groups and their Northern liberal allies now clearly intend to make a genuine effort to transform the Democratic Party. Their objective is a party in which the labor-liberal faction, which claims credit for Truman's reelection, will speak with a dominant voice on such matters as appointments, legislation and party strategy.

What labor wants, in a word, is a Democratic Party which will be in some measure a labor party. And if labor does not get what it wants, there is sure to be trouble ahead for President Truman.

There are signs of trouble already. For one thing, the Cabinet shake-up which Truman's labor backers expected after the election has conspicuously failed to occur. Truman's enthusiastic assurances to his conservative Treasury Secretary, John Snyder, have particularly failed to please the labor groups.

Yet the most interesting aspect of the struggle for the soul of the Democratic Party arises in Congress. Those in whom labor and the liberals have real confidence in both houses are by and large the junior members of the stripe of Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota and Paul Douglas of Illinois.

On the other hand, much of the power which derives from seniority and committee assignments rests with the older conservatives, and particularly the Southerners; men like Georgia's Walter F. George, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and North Carolina's Robert L. Doughton, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in the House.

Two Important Prizes

THE LABOR-BACKED liberal Democrats are in a big majority, and they intend to get an equivalent share of power. Already it is clear that this situation will give rise to a bitter struggle for power in Congress. Initially, the contest will revolve largely around the organization of the House, and particularly about the two most powerful House committees, Ways and Means and Rules.

Ways and Means, acting as the Committee on Committees, appoints members of other committees, including the Rules Committee. In the ordinary course of events, Ways and Means would be heavily loaded with Southerners and conservative Democrats.

Already, however, plans are being laid by the Northern liberal contingent to insist in the Democratic caucus, which meets before Congress convenes, on a heavier representation on Ways and Means. The liberals may even attempt to establish the Committee on Committees as a body entirely separate from Ways and Means, thus undercutting the Southerners and conservatives and altering the whole structure of power in the House.

The outcome of the fight on the Ways and Means Committee will closely affect the contest which is in prospect on the Rules Committee. As things stand, the Rules Committee can prevent any legislation from reaching the House floor. And an alliance of the Republicans and three Southerners, Cox of Georgia, Smith of Virginia and Colmer of Mississippi, could stop labor-backed legislation in the House dead in its tracks.

Party Purge Possible

THE LABOR-LIBERAL contingent is determined that this shall not happen. It could be prevented in a number of ways. A Committee on Committees controlled by the liberals could disregard seniority and pack the Rules Committee. Or the rules could be changed, so that the Rules Committee could no longer bury legislation. Or a purge of the Democratic Party, which would take care of Cox and possibly Colmer, could be undertaken.

Among labor and liberal groups, there is much talk of such a purge. Indeed, a purge list has already been drawn up. The list includes, as a minimum, such unquestioned Dixiecrats as Eastland in the Senate and Cox, Davis, Rivers, Battle, Hobbs, Boykin, Rankin, Williams and perhaps Colmer in the House. The liberals argue that the Southerners must be disciplined, and that the disciplining should be accomplished right away, as an object lesson to less conspicuous bolters.

In this impending struggle for power in Congress, the key figures are Vice President-elect Barkley and, more especially, probable Speaker Sam Rayburn. It is a reasonable guess that the Barkley-Rayburn strategy will be, at least initially, one of conciliation and delay. In all probability, no purges will be undertaken. The Southerners, including the overt Dixiecrats, will be allowed to keep their committee places. In the meantime, the pressure from the Northern labor-backed Congressmen can be used, by Rayburn especially, to prevent the Southerners from hamstringing the Administration program.

Thus there is a fair chance for a short honeymoon. But toward the end of the session, civil rights legislation, to which Truman is inescapably committed, will be introduced. Then it is perfectly certain that a battle royal will ensue, which may permanently split the Democratic Party. One consequence of such a split would be that the Democratic Party would then become wholly a party of labor and the liberals, a party of the left.

Real 'Gold Fever' Fells Diggers

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—There's a strange new disease called "cave sickness." Its victims become sick while working in a cave. It is a lung infection, with fever, headaches, chills, nervous irritability, chest pain and other complaints.

A report of the illness in the American Journal of Public Health covers 21 men and boys who became sick while digging for treasure in an abandoned chalk mine in southwestern Arkansas. It is made by Dr. A. M. Washburn of the Arkansas State Board of Health, Dr. John H. Tuohy of the United States Public Health Service, Little Rock, and Dr. Elmer L. Davis of Foreman, Ark.

They couldn't find the cause of the peculiar disease. But they found that people who had been in a cave in Oklahoma in 1943, and another in Mexico, had come down with the same kind of ailment.

Penicillin Useless

THE disease is either a new one or one not before described accurately, the doctors said. It differed from pneumonia, tuberculosis, Q fever, malaria and other diseases caused by bacteria, viruses, bugs or fungi, they added.

Tests did not show any gases in the cave air, or anything unusual about the cave rock that could have caused infection from dusts. X-rays showed peculiar spots or lesions in the lungs that later disappeared.

The disease usually lasted about a week, and then the victims recovered spontaneously, they said. Drugs like penicillin and sulfamerizine didn't show noticeable effects. For long periods afterward, the men and boys often complained of general weakness.

Six of the 21 had severe attacks of the sickness, 11 moderate attacks and 4 only mild cases. They became ill after 4 to 13 days of digging in the cave. Two guinea pigs left in the cave for a long time stayed well.

Brazilian diamonds may not be Brazilian, says Dr. Kenneth E. Caster, University of Cincinnati paleontologist.

"All, or almost all, of the diamonds in Brazil may have been transported by glaciers thousands of years ago," he said after returning from four years of work there.

"Diamonds occur in Brazil wherever there are glacial deposits. Almost everywhere where there are Ice Age gravels, diamonds can be washed from the gravels. Apparently diamonds were carried into Brazil by ice sheets, although this view clashes strongly with traditional views held in Brazil as to the origin of these diamonds.

"Where they came from is still a mystery."

There Were Never Times Like These

Canada Booms on Prairie 'Gold'

By Percy A. Rowe

WINNIPEG, Nov. 27—Up in the prairie provinces of Canada, stretching 800 miles across the center of the continent, there were never times like these.

An Eldorado has been struck; but it is the yellow of grain, not of gold, which proclaims boom times for the Canadian farmer. A bumper crop helped by perfect harvesting weather; an assured market both in Canada and Europe, and record high prices for all grain and dairy products have combined to give the Canadian farmer his most prosperous year.

Before the depression, the occasional grain farmer could holiday in California on the profits of a good harvest. This year he can take a world cruise.

To those who went through the depression, it seems miraculous. Then the Canadian farmer, whose father was probably a Pole, Ukrainian, Swede or Scotsman, got deeper and deeper in debt. He saw his wheat sold for a few cents a bushel, or, worse, saw it parch in a 90-day drought. He saw grasshoppers ravage his crops, or saw his Saskatchewan soil swirl before the wind and fill the dribbling creeks.

1943 Market Turn

HE had 10 years when the mortgage on his farm grew heavier and heavier; when corned beef and cabbage was the supper dish six nights a week. It was a slow recovery, even with the coming of war.

It was not until 1945 that most Western farmers paid off the depression mortgages on their farms. Yet many war veterans, who started farming in 1945, have already paid their mortgages.

Since 1943, all the harvests have been good, but none attained the proportion of this year's yield. In Manitoba alone, with 52,500 farms, the income has averaged more than $6000.

The result is reflected all over the country. Canada's leading mail order store has had a record year. Goods which five years ago were regarded as luxuries of the better class city families, are being snapped up so fast that manufacturers are unable to meet the demand.

Rural electrification means a demand for washing machines, electric stoves, refrigerators and fancy lamps, so that in many city stores there are long waiting lists for these goods.

Cities Spruce Up

THE pulse of spending has hit the cities, whose economy was always tied to the prosperity of the man in the field. Winnipeg and Regina, capitals of two provinces, have had a complete facelifting this year. More than half the storefronts on their main streets have been remodeled.

On the roads, 9 automobiles out of 10 are postwar models—invariably with a farmer at the wheel. The roads themselves are being improved, along with schools and churches. The farmer has a fat pocketbook, and for the first time in a decade is willing to pay high taxes to get these amenities.

Even last spring there were still small clouds on his horizon. It was a late spring, which made sowing late. This was followed in the valley bottoms by a sudden thaw that spilled the rivers onto the land. And in the background was a concert of economists' voices warning that a recession was on the way.

But the crops' slow start did not affect the final result, and the floods increased the soil's moisture content. As for the recession, it did not come.

Grossed a Billion

THE result was a gross agricultural production in the three prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta of $1,100,000,000 this year. That sum is for an area with a combined population of less than two million.

This record income was not all from grain. It was as dependent on the reopening of the United States market to all Canadian livestock except hogs. Also offshore buying by the United States for European reconstruction has given the Canadian farmer an export market while Europe, and Britain in particular, is regaining its trade balance with North America.

Lastly, the recent introduction of new crops and new methods have increased income. Thus flax, which until five years ago was grown by only a dozen farmers in Manitoba, grossed $47,300,000 for the province's farmers this year. The same story could be told for sunflower seed and (because of new methods of marketing) for sugar beets.

Danish Girl Hides German 3 Years

AALBORG, Denmark (AP).—The Aalborg police broke a 3-year-old romance after they discovered that an attractive Aalborg Juliet had kept her Romeo, a German soldier, in seclusion since VE-Day.

Police said the girl could not stand to see her boy friend sent home to Germany with the German occupation troops in May, 1945. She locked him in her room and he had stayed indoors ever since, except after nightfall when he sneaked out for a stroll in the dark alleys.

The girl locked the doors every day before she went to work at an Aalborg industrial plant. She gave her friend books to read and taught him to knit and darn. The couple lived on the girl's rations.

The affair became known after the soldier got homesick. He wanted to visit his relatives in Germany, left his voluntary confinement and got caught trying to cross the Danish-German frontier. Under investigation, he gave his girl friend's name.

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

THE letters written by Eleanor and Franklin D. Roosevelt from their honeymoon in Europe to his mother, and reprinted in the Ladies Home Journal, are remarkable for two reasons. They reveal the importance of his mother's role in both their lives, although not one letter from her is included. And the picture of the extreme luxury and irresponsibility of their youth is in such incredible contrast to what these two people later became.

Tales of visits to the many Roosevelt relatives and friends, of sightseeing and museums, were sent home regularly to "Dearest Mama," as they both address their letters. These are interlarded with lists of shopping which included lavish purchases of Paris dresses, furs and linens. Franklin Roosevelt took particular delight in teasing his mother with exaggerated tales of spending. "I am getting Eleanor a long sable cloak and a silver fox coat for myself." A PS reassures, "Don't believe all this letter. I may be extravagant, but . . .!!!"

The bride remarks quite casually, "Poor Franklin is sad at having failed in two exams, particularly as he got good marks (B) in all the others and if possible he wants to take them again this autumn . . . I am not very confident about his passing but it won't hurt him to try. . ."

After a trip to a clairvoyant in Paris, FDR notes, "We were told delightful things. E. is to inherit a fortune: Warren to marry a foreigner——not of his religion—and will live to be 105 in the shade and I am to be President of the United States or the Equitable, I couldn't make out which!"

On her monthly page, which precedes the letters, Mrs. R. tactfully and gracefully answers a query about what influences the two Mrs. Roosevelts exerted on the late President.

IF YOU are Mrs. Jones, and can't decide what to have for dinner or if you are Mr. Jones, and can't decide about selling the house, buying a trailer and going to California, then turn to Greer Williams, who advises "Make Up Your Mind" in McCall's. "Everywhere you look today, you see the twisted threads of indecision running through our social pattern," says Williams.

Some, but not all indecision by any means, is symptomatic of mental illness, he explains. It is normal, obviously, to think before we act. It is also normal for indecisiveness to increase when we assume positions of great responsibility. By now, scientists think, everyday indecisiveness "comes simply from a conflict in our motive for making a choice." In other words, we don't know what we want.

Here are some tips gleaned by Williams from the pages of psychiatry. First of all, he says, we must have confidence in ourselves. We must also accept responsibility, and be prepared to risk failure. Some warnings he gives: "Don't pride yourself on masterful decisions when you have nothing at stake." "Remember that indecisiveness and deciding to wait are not the same thing: a decision to do nothing frequently takes more guts than stepping in where angels fear to tread."

SOME hot discussion takes place this week on unification of the armed services. Defense Secretary James Forrestal answers "Yes" to the question, "Is Unification Succeeding?" in the Saturday Evening Post. William Bradford Huie says its hoey in the Reader's Digests! "A Navy or an Air Force."

"Far better for people to say plainly what they think," says Forrestal of the front page argument last spring on the 70-group Air Force. "After a decision is reached, I think it should be followed loyally," he adds. The Secretary lists seven major gains made under the National Security Act which he considers important and some initial economies effected through unification. On the subject of the Navy-Air Force battle, he says only that "progress" was made at the Newport conference in ironing out differences.

Huie, on the other hand, charges that abiding by the Congressional decision is exactly what the Navy hasn't done. The Navy is defiantly planning to spend billions on its own air force, carriers and an army (the Marines) of its own. All these branches have been rendered useless either by the atom bomb or by the nature of the potential enemy, he reasons.

There is still time for an insistent public demand to prevent a victory of the admirals over the American taxpayer, says Huie. The Navy should be compelled by the President to accept unification and a back seat, he concludes.

She Said He'd Be President

Crystal-Gazer Called the Shot, But It Was a Joke to Roosevelt

Roosevelt as Assistant Navy Secretary in World War I, practicing with a Springfield at the Marine Corps range at Winthrop, Md.

By William V. Nessly

F. D. R.: HIS PERSONAL LETTERS, VOL. II: 1905-1928, edited by Elliott Roosevelt. Duell, Sloan and Pearce. $5.

FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT, gaily honeymooning in Paris with his bride Eleanor, was told in 1905 by Mme. de Noel, "the clairvoyant lady," that he was to become President.

So little impressed was he that he dismissed the forecast with a clause in a letter to his mother—"and I am to be President of the United States or the Equitable, I couldn't make out which."

In fact, he gave equal prominence in the letter to "a prolonged bat" on which he, Warren Delano Robbins and two other young firends had been a couple of night previously. Obviously, it was too happy a time for him to concern himself with the future's uncertain troubles.

It was a carefree life within the framework of a brotherhood of family and close friends. Buying furs for his bride and linens for their future home, hunting out rare books, boating, teas, exploring Europe, these took his attention.

No signs then of the social concepts that later were to shape so much of his public career.

London, the $1000-a-day royal suite at Brown's Hotel ("Damn the expense, Wot's the odds!" Franklin wrote to his mother); Paris, Milan, Venice, Augsburg, St. Moritz, Strasburg—the honeymooners saw them all, with few distractions. Franklin had the hives and lumbago and there were some unpleasant encounters with Germans and an American couple, who, Eleanor wrote, "needless to say . . . were common."

Mother Was Hub

VOLUME II of F. D. R., His Personal Letters, is a fascinating portrayal of the family-and-home side of the man whose career engrossed the world's attention for two decades. It will stir into flame afresh the embers of whatever feelings the reader may have had toward Mr. Roosevelt when he was here.

The overall tone in the collection is one of strong family ties, centering for many years about his mother, Mrs. Sara Roosevelt.

Elliott Roosevelt, who edited the collection, writes that when his father was elected to the New York Senate and moved his family to Albany, it marked "the first day in which A. E. R. (Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt) had complete charge of her own home. F. D. R.'s mother did not move to Albany with her children, thereby ending five years of A. E. R.'s dependence upon her in running the household affairs of the family."

And as late as 1920, when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, we find Mr. Roosevelt addressing "Dearest Mama" with these grateful words: "You are not only an angel which I always knew, but the kind which comes at the critical moment in life! For the question was not one of paying Dr. Mitchell for removing James' insides, the Dr. can wait, I know he is or must be rich, but of paying the gas man and the butcher lest the infants starve to death, and your cheque which is much too much of a birthday present will do that. It is so dear of you."

Eleanor Roosevelt shared her husband's affection for his mother. Near the close of the honeymoon tour she wrote to Sara Roosevelt, "A thousand thanks and kisses. I feel as though we would have such long arrears of kisses and cuddly times to make up when we get home."

Both addressed the elder Mrs. Roosevelt as "Dearest Mama" or "Dearest Mummy."

Franklin addressed Eleanor in his letters as "Dearest Babbie," "Dearest Lamb" or "My Own Dearest."

The children for many years were known as "the chicks." Elliott sometimes was written to by his father as "Dear Bunny," Anna was referred to as "Sister" and Franklin, jr., as "Brother."

In his early married life Franklin loved to tease his mother about his and Eleanor's "extravagances," a trait that brought frequent protests from the latter.

Better Than Europe!

FAMILIAR with Europe in his youth, Franklin seemingly began discovering America after starting to work in a law firm as "a full-fledged office boy." On a railroad-horseback business trip to Harlan, Ky., he found himself amazed at the beauties of Virginia. "In some places," he wrote to "My Own Dear Babs," "we were over 2000 feet up, and the train ran through gorges that for sheer beauty beat anything that we saw in the Black Forest."

The letters in the collection abound in intimate details of the Roosevelts' daily lives. Some names are deleted because of caustic or sarcastic comments in the letters. Before James' birth, Eleanor Roosevelt was convinced that he was going to be twins.

The collection comprises a history of world-rocking events by one of the central figures in many of them, but a history with a background of concern over the minutiae of domestic life.

Letters about curtains for the house, plumbing repairs, the death of one of the children's rabbits and about the killing of his mother's pet dog by a canine visitor are intermingled with those detailing, gripping war preparations.

Historically, the collection brings refreshing revelations of inside phases of events in Mr. Roosevelt's career.

His surprise election to the New York State Senate from a Republican district; his successful rebellion against Tammany that brought election of James A. Gorman to the United States Senate in 1910; his labors in the drive to nominate Woodrow Wilson for the Presidency in 1912, and his subsequent appointment as Assistant Secretary of the Navy are related in detail.

"The United States Navy, which formerly had been one of F. D. R.'s favorite hobbies, thus became his major occupation," Elliott writes.

The Obdurate Josephus

MR. ROOSEVELT didn't always get along well with his "Chief," then Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, it is revealed. The Assistant Secretary was impatient at Daniels' caution in Navy building and strategy matters in the face of the critical situation building up in Europe. Likewise he was critical of Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan.

"These dear good people like W. J. B. and J. D.," he wrote to Eleanor, "have as much conception of what a general European war means as Elliott has of higher mathematics."

After Bryan resigned, to be succeeded by Robert Lansing, Franklin still complained:

"J. D. will not resign."

Later, during the war itself, his good relations with Daniels were reestablished.

Mr. Roosevelt's service in the Navy Department throughout World War I is related in such detail that one wonders how he found the time to be so prolific in letters and diaries. It embraced long struggles in Congress for a Navy-building program; an inspection tour of naval forces abroad; many cruises; night-long conferences on Navy strategy, and an audience with King George V of England, in the course of which he quotes the King as saying:

"You know I have a number of relations in Germany, but I tell you frankly that in all my life I have never seen a German gentleman."

The "war to end wars" over, Franklin and Eleanor went to the Paris Peace Conference, and there is another wealth of detail on the struggle there over creation of the League of Nations.

A Dramatic Meeting

HIS LETTERS narrate events at the San Francisco Democratic Convention of 1920, where he worked for the nomination of Gov. Al Smith for the presidency but found himself made the vice presidential nominee on the ticket headed by Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio. He tells of the White House meeting of Cox and himself with the stricken Woodrow Wilson when Cox, with tears in his eyes, pledged that he would carry on, in the campaign, Wilson's fight for the League of Nations.

For himself, Mr. Roosevelt wrote, "I have read the draft of the League three times and always find something to object to in it, and that is the way with everybody . . . Personally I am willing to make a try on the present instrument."

The hopeless campaign, resulting in election of Warren G. Harding as President, did not discourage him.

In 1916 he had written: "I hope to God I don't grow reactionary with advancing years." Now after an overwhelming political defeat, he commented:

"Thank the Lord we are both comparatively youthful."

In August, 1921, he was stricken with the dread infantile paralysis, and there began the grim, years-long fight for physical rehabilitation. His mother wanted him to give up public life and settle down as a gentleman farmer. But he spurned any thought of retirement.

By late 1922 he was able, after a fashion, to resume business affairs.

Something to Celebrate

HE RETURNED to politics in 1924 to place Al Smith in nomination again for the Presidency and made what has been hailed by the press as one of his greatest speeches.

Four years later he wrote that "I have had a difficult time turning down the governorship nomination," after Smith won top place on the national ticket. But the State convention would not permit him to turn it down, and he found himself heading the State ticket in order, it was generally said, to strengthen Smith in the State.

When New York State went for Herbert Hoover but still elected Mr. Roosevelt Governor, it was a joyous Christmas holiday.

"He was back in politics," Elliott writes, "his legs were no longer a liability, his family was united, and there was everything to look forward to in the days ahead."

That is as far as Volume Two takes the reader. A third volume will cover Mr. Roosevelt's writings from 1929 until his death in the Presidency, the first four-term President in history.

Volume Two makes delightful reading. The pity is that the papers could not have been made available to entertain millions while Mr. Roosevelt was alive.

Ellman Study Of Yeats Is No Cartoon

YEATS, The Man and the Masks. By Richard Ellman. Macmillan. 331 pp. $5.

It is an irreverent picture of Yeats, the champion of Irish folklore, in keeping with the anecdotes that have come down from the gossipy 1890's, but it is not the picture of the Irish poet presented by Richard Ellman.

Ellman, a Harvard instructor, who was allowed access to "some 50,000 pages of unpublished manuscripts" by Mrs. Yeats, gives a sober account of the poet that is part outward and part inward biography and does much to clarify Yeats' more esoteric writings.

Ellman pictures Yeats as a youth in revolt against his artist father, John Butler Yeats. "Hating his father's skepticism, he still could not escape it; he would have liked to dream the days away, but he also wanted to be a success in the world."

Yeats' wish to be a success, increased by his desire to win the hand of Maud Gonne, caused him to overcome his timidity to the degree that he took some part in public affairs.

His revolt against his father's religious attitudes led the poet into theosophy, via Mme. Blavatsky, and occultism, and he even managed to convince himself that William Blake was of Irish origin and a fellow member of the "Hermetic Students of the Golden Dawn," although this order was not organized until Yeats' day.

By the time of his death, in 1939, Yeats had matured. He had arrived at a better appreciation of his father, Ellman says, and had achieved a synthesis of the two aspects of his own nature in a dualistic philosophy.

Ellman's book provides a basic understanding of the symbolism of Yeats' later poetry and is a good introduction of the study and enjoyment of his work.

Rugged Heroes

Holbrook's 'History' Is A Sideshow

Little Annie Oakley and Other Rugged People. By Stewart H. Holbrook. Macmillan. 238 pp. $3.50.

STEWART H HOLBROOK, the former lumberjack who still chews tobacco, spins wonderful yarns and drinks his whisky without a chaser, has gradually become the approved historian of backwoods America.

Best known for his "Holy Old Mackinaw," the saga of the lumbering industry, his biography of Ethan Allen and his books on the iron industry and forest fires, he is also the indefatigable Boswell of the lesser heroes of American tradition who have often passed into folklore without benefit of historian.

Holbrook, who could make many of these characters glamorous without arousing protest in any but the most punctilious, has chosen instead to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. If, for instance, Calamity Jane turns out to be little more than a mining camp prostitute with a squat, masculine figure whose only claim to fame was a soft heart and a flare for publicity, he says so with merciless documentation.

If the first "nature boy," Joe Knowles, turns out to be a 1914 Hearst publicity stunt who did not live in the wilderness sans all but a breech clout, Holbrook is the man to prove he had a warm cabin and most of the other comforts of civilization.

Little Annie Oakley fares better in this roundup of rugged individualists (and other eccentric citizens). Annie, it is true, was famous only because she could shoot like a female demon. Challenged to a shooting match by a Russian archduke, she ignored the advice of her boss, Buffalo Bill, and took his royal highness as the Bolsheviks took the duke's relatives in 1917. Victim of a train wreck which nearly destroyed Cody's traveling troupe, she recovered from five operations and partial paralysis still able to outshoot any man, woman or child in America. She died childless, leaving her estate to the 18 orphan girls she had put through school.

In fact, most of these wayward characters were very decent people. Buffalo Bill, who was finally swindled out of his show by the former barkeep and notorious Denver newspaper publisher, H. H. Tammen, was so beloved that six of his surviving sweethearts came with the other thousands to weep at his interment. Calamity Jane selflessly nursed the sick during a smallpox epidemic at Deadwood, and was always remembered there as an angel of mercy.

Holbrook mourns the passing of the real lumberjacks and bull cooks, tells of the last of the Wobblies, uncovers a colorful nest of anarchists who flourished on Puget Sound, memorializes the writing endeavors of Ethan Allen, General Lew Wallace and Ned Buntline, inventor of the dime novel and author of 410 inexcusable volumes.

In the main tent of American history one sees the wars and presidential elections, internal diplomacy, booms and depressions. But Holbrook is the barker for the sideshows without which the main events are meaningless and colorless.

Central Valley and the Army

THE THIRSTY LAND, by Robert De Roos. Stanford. $4.

THE Central Valley project and controversy, in California, are both gigantic of their kind. The principles they involve enter deeply into the heart of the whole future water-and-power program of the United States. Briefly, the controversy concerns how much of the benefit of the four-million-dollar Government expenditure to provide a water-and-power supply to this great inland empire should go direct to the people, and how much should be drained off in subsidies to farming corporations and private electric power companies.

But it's so complex that no adequate account of it has appeared in print nationally. That is, until now. Mr. De Roos' book is lucid, entertaining, and while journalistic in tone (he is a special writer for the San Francisco Chronicle), it is thoroughly, briefed and authentic.

It's noteworthy that in his preface, where he can state his own opinions, Mr. De Roos has no use for the Army Engineers in the Western reclamation territory. While stating his respect for the Army, he says that in this case he wishes they "would go away and shoot their guns." In the Central Valley, as in some other Western regions, the connivance of the power and big-farm companies with the engineers is notable, and it isn't to the best interests of any such region.—ROSCOE FLEMING.

A GODDESS TO A GOD. By John L. Balderson and Sybil Bolitho, Macmillan. 213 pp., $3.

WITH considerable artistry, John Balderson, the dramatist, and Sybil Bolitho bring the fabulous Cleopatra to life in a series of letters from the Egyptian to Julius Caesar. Cleopatra, at once woman and politician, dreams of a world state in which she, Caesar and their son, Caesarion, will rule as a trinity of deities. The climax of the novel comes in the one letter by Caesar in the book. On the eve of his assassination he rejects her idea.

NO PLACE TO HIDE

by David Bradley

What this book means to:

OWEN J. ROBERTS: "A startling and amazing appraisal . . . should be read by every American."

DOROTHY CANFIELD FISHER: "It now seems to me that nobody should be allowed to vote in any election who has not read NO PLACE TO HIDE."

JOHN P. MARQUAND: "The very quietness of this superb day-by-day record of the Navy's experiments at Bikini gives a more devastating impression of atomic bombing than even Mr. Hersey's description of what happened at Hiroshima."

LESLIE R. GROVES, Lieut.-Gen. U.S.A., Ret.: "A most interesting narrative of what was and should have been recognized as a world-shaking event . . . The book gives a first-class picture of the Bikini Test and its real lesson —the overwhelming need for peace."

HARRY SCHERMAN, President, Book-of-the-Month Club: "What I want to tell you directly is that this book is in my opinion probably the most important to our society that the Book-of-the-Month Club has ever distributed."

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY: "Everything in this quiet Diary of Doom is memorable . . . This book is too modest, too wise, to try to panic us. But the reader, who should be everyman, will bear in his mind, as he would in a Geiger counter, the clock-tick of warning."

WILLIAM L. SHIRER: "If enough people read it maybe we can still save ourselves from destruction."

HENRY SEIDEL CANBY: "The most informative, most impressive book on what we must fear, though not necessarily expect, from the atom let loose on the world."

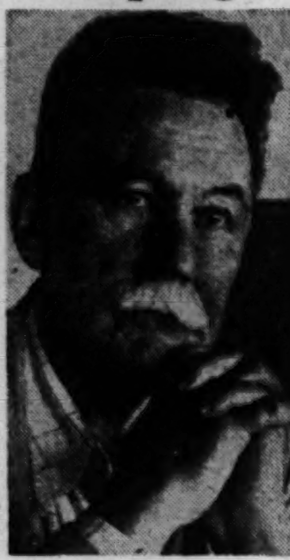
More Literary Historian Than Critic

Brooks Still Sniping at Mencken

By Sterling North

A CHILMARK MISCELLANY. By Van Wyck Brooks. Dutton. 315 pp., $4.



VAN WYCK BROOKS
. . . perfect apologist

VERY few critics in America have achieved the millennium; no deadlines; time to reread the classics and explore the byways of literature; days and weeks to spend in research and in quiet contemplation; a chance to develop one's own philosophy while placing all culture in some sort of perspective.

Van Wyck Brooks, one of the few fortunate souls in this category, has done nothing world-shaking with his leisure. But at least he has outgrown the facile Freudian and Marxian explanations he used to offer in lieu of criticism when writing about men like Mark Twain.

Actually, Mr. Brooks is less a critic than a gifted literary historian and journalist. He will probably never be mentioned in the same breath with Twain or Sainte-Beuve. But his contribution to the understanding of American literature in such books as "The Flowering of New England" and "The Times of Melville and Whitman" is not to be disparaged because his approach has been historical, biographical and anecdotal rather than (in recent years) analytical, dogmatic or doctrinaire.

A Slap for Huck

BECAUSE his writing is warm, tolerant, human and mellow, and because he has immersed himself in the spirit of New England (with little taste for or knowledge of the frontier), he has been accused of misunderstanding the more robust schools of American writing. Perhaps that accusation still applies.

For instance, in this "Chilmark Miscellany" (named for the author's home on Martha's Vineyard), he continues to snipe at Mark Twain, Mencken and Hemingway.

"We have had more than enough of what Wyndham Lewis called the 'cult of the savage and the child.' The cult of 'Huckleberry Finn' is the cult of both; yet, according to Mencken, this is our only classic, and Hemingway says, 'It's the best book we have. All American writing comes from that.'"

Many Americans who have no use for the 'cult of the savage and the child' and who 'feel that both Mencken and Hemingway are overstating their case, will feel that Brooks' distaste borders upon the effete.

Much that Mr. Brooks propounds is noble, true, virtuous and cultivated. Some of his flat statements, however, make little sense:

"Fenimore Cooper was ten times closer to the truth (about Indians) than Mark Twain."

"Americans too often suggest mendacity and fear . . . We are the victims of . . . the mixture of races who have little in common at the bottom of their minds."

"I like painters. They are just like writers, without the nonsense."

"The stolid egoism of the English household is the milieu for poets. Americans are too sympathetic to provide a good medium for the development of individuality."

A Modest Man

BUT despite these doubtful dicta, Mr. Brooks is the perfect apologist for Hawthorne, Emily Dickinson, Howells, John Muir, Edwin Arlington Robinson and others whose sketches appear here. He has sharp intelligent things to say in criticism of Santayana and Henry Adams. He knows and understands his Concord and Amherst and Salem and Cambridge as his severest critic, Bernard DeVoto, will never know them.

And Van Wyck Brooks' essential modesty is a rare and disarming quality which should confound his enemies.

"In forty years of writing, I have not gained an ounce of confidence. I begin each new book with a sense of impotence, chaos and desperation that cannot be overstated. I always feel that I am foredoomed to failure.

"Every day I begin my work with the same old feeling that I am on trial for my life and will probably not be acquitted."

How many of us feel that way, and how few admit it!

The Painter's Parentage

Talleyrand a Fillip For Delacroix Novel

TO SEIZE A DREAM. By Virginia Hersch. Crown. 341 pp. $3.

WHEN young Baudelaire paid "supreme homage" to his friend Delacroix at the time of the latter's death in 1863, the poet said of the romantic painter, "Eugene Delacroix was a curious mixture of skepticism, politeness, dandyism, violent will, cunning, despotism and . . . quiet tenderness . . . (he) was passionately in love with passion, and coldly determined to find ways of expressing passion in the most visible manner."

HERSH

All of these characteristics (with the possible exception of the "cunning") are dramatized in Virginia Hersch's romantic novel concerning her rebellious subject. And yet there is probably nowhere in the novel a line of conversation which Delacroix himself did not record somewhere in his copious letters and journals.

Delacroix was that rarity among painters, a man of wide general culture who translated Shakespeare from the English and Dante from the Italian. A close friend of Chopin and George Sand, he knew and loved music and poetry. His circle in Paris included Stendhal and Merimee, and during the last 18 years of his life Baudelaire.

So well documented a life furnishes many advantages but certain disadvantages to a novelist.

Little Missing

EXCEPT for the two gaps in the journals, Delacroix's life can be followed almost day by day between 1822 and 1863. His contemporaries wrote about him. Every art critic of his time, and since, has written about him. We know how deeply he was influenced by Guerin, Gericault, Rubens and later Constable and Goya. And we know in turn how deeply he influenced Renoir, Cezanne, Van Gogh and even Matisse and Derain. We know his blue shadows, his vivid colors, his big flamboyant canvases; his impressionistic prints and drawings.

What, then, is there left to reveal? For one thing, his parentage. Virginia Hersch makes much of the interesting speculation that Delacroix was actually the son of Talleyrand and Mme. Delacroix.

Fo another thing, his childhood in Marseilles, in which he narrowly escaped death by suffocation, fire, hanging, poison and other accidental violence.

For a third, his many mistresses, who are usually passed off lightly in veiw of his 'addiction to his one supreme passion—his art. They make, however, a charming but rather tragic parade—Elizabeth, Caroline, Cara, La Belle Dalton, Josephine and the rest. Mrs. Dalton, the English painter, was the most interesting of the lot. Their affair lasted for nearly a decade and Delacroix at one point even seriously considered matrimony.

Neat Explanations

MISS HERSCH relates in detail the involved misfortunes of the Delacroix family: the impotence of the father, the financial reverses of his widow, and the law suits over the 3000 acres of forest in which the family funds had been invested. Eugene had a small inheritance, but was never wealthy. Most of his life he was little ahead of his tailor bill.

The facts about the Delacroix clan are matters of record. The story of the Talleyrand paternity hangs largely upon conjecture. But it neatly explains several otherwise strange coincidences, including the birth of Eugene, his brillance, and perhaps even his first acceptance at the academy.

The research behind this book is impressive. The plot progression is orderly and interesting. But the style does not match in brilliance the painting, or even the writing of Delacroix himself.

Perhaps this novel should have been transformed into a straight biography. I suspect that it might have been, save for the great temptation to make the most of the tantalizing Talleyrand.—S.N.

4-Star Lineup for Book Luncheon

JOHNSTON

FREEMAN

SMITH

THE Nation's film czar, a very scholarly "tramp newspaperman," a woman with a humorous "heart" and a literary Brooklynite will form the speaking panel at the next Book and Author Luncheon sponsored by The Washington Post.

The luncheon, second of the current season, will be held in the Presidential Room of the Statler on Thursday, December 9, at 1 p. m. The talks will be broadcast over WINX from 1:45 to 2:30 p. m.

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, is the man who put Joe Stalin back in the market for American movies right in the middle of the cold war. With that neat bit of diplomacy tied to his belt, he has returned from another of his extensive European travels to write the very well received book on American foreign policy, "We're All in It."

"Tramp newspaperman" is a self-description supplied by Douglas Southall Freeman. To the people who read his daily editorials in the Richmond News-Leader and listen to his two daily radio programs, and to those who have read his Pulitzer Prize winning biography of Lee, it is the misnomer of the year. His most recently published work is the first two volumes of "George Washington: A Biography."

Emily Kimbrough and Cornelia Otis Skinner put their heads together to reminisce about a hilarious schoolgirl junket to Paris, and came up with "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay." After that success, Miss Kimbrough soloed with "We Followed Our Hearts to Hollywood" and "So Dear to My Heart." Her latest book, "It Gives Me Great Pleasure," is a humorous account of her experiences while lecturing from coast to coast

The literary Brooklynite is, of course, Betty Smith. After skyrocketing to fame with "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," Betty Smith has written a second best-selling novel, "Tomorrow Will Be Better," also set in her native Williamsburg section of Brooklyn.

Tickets for the luncheon, available to the public at $3 each may be bought at any of these book stores: Ballantyne's, Brentano's, Community Book Shop, David Pearlman's, Francis Scott Key Book Shop, Paul Pearlman's, Purcell's, Sidney Kramer Book Store, Whyte's, Better Mouse Trap Book Store and the book departments of Woodward & Lothrop's and Kann's.

Balancing the Books

By Lee Grove

THE LITTLE BOY'S pocket that contains everything from a ball of twine to a tadpole, for variety of interest has nothing on Washington book collectors, according to the new "Private Book Collectors in the United States and Canada," just published by Bowker.

In the highly selective list of 2000 names are those of 43 residents of the District. These, coupled with the uncounted names of collectors in nearby Maryland and Virginia communities, would suggest that Greater Washington is right up there in interest in the "old and rare.'

As might be expected, many of the collectors are interested in fields of literature and history. Perhaps reflecting Washington as a political and library center is the considerable number of persons collecting political science works and books-about-books (bibliography, printing, binding, publishing, graphic arts).

But then there are such less common interests as "pipe organ" (James C. Webster); "Roumania in period of late Queen Marie" (R. Baker Harris); "ceramics, glass" (Robert A. Elder, jr.) and "Magic, Suicide, the Sun" (Caresse Crosby).

Among others on the list are Senator-elect Clinton P. Anderdon, who collects material relating to the early Southwest and Franklin D. Roosevelt; Emil Hurja, who has a weakness for material on Alaska, Andrew Jackson, Michigan and books from Presidents' libraries, and Watson Davis, who enjoys prime scientific works.

Settling a Point

SPEAKING of book collecting, I asked that fine English authority on the subject, John Carter, at lunch one day shortly before his return to London, about that often-argued question: Just how much attention should the collector of first editions pay to broken commas and other "points" that determine priority of first books in the first edition?

With the scholarly common sense for which he is famous, Carter said the collector should know about points, then do as he pleases.

If this attitude prevailed generally, it would do much to eliminate a lot of dealers' hocus pocus.

Mrs. Marie Williams Sheerin, widow of the late pastor of Epiphany Episcopal Church, the Rev. Charles Sheerin, is the author of "The Parson Takes a Wife," recently published by Macmillan. It is a pleasant personal narrative that should have considerable local interest. Since her husband's death last April, Mrs. Sheerin has been living in Richmond.

ROGER TORY PETERSON of Glen Echo, ornithologist and bird artist, is the author of "Birds Over America," just published by Dodd, Mead. In addition to an interesting collection of stories about birds and the men who study them, the book contains 80 pages of photographs.

Peterson holds the Brewster Medal of the American Ornithologists' Union. Highest award in its field, it was presented to him in recognition of his previous bird books.

In a Nutshell...

THE SEVEN MIRACLES OF GUBBIO, by Raymond Leopold Bruckberger. McGraw Hill, 60 pp. $1.50.

IN A delightful allegory involving a big bad wolf, St. Francis of Assisi and a town of worldly weaknesses, a Dominican monk displays startling insight into human motivations. As the Wolf trots about the town of Gubbio, dispensing the miracles which St. Francis granted him as a reward for being good, he finds himself less and less worthy as he learns to be a good fellow in the eyes of the townspeople. The shrewd, underlying appraisal is uncompromising, but Father Bruckberger's handling of moral implications is disarmingly humorous. The result is good entertainment. G. W.

DIARY OF INDEPENDENCE HALL. By Harold D. Eberlein and Cortland Van D. Hubbard. Lippincott. 378 pp., ill., $3.50.

FROM the day in 1729, when an appropriation was passed, to Lafayette's visit in 1824, the life and times of the State House for the Provincial Legislature of Pennsylvania are reported in this "Diary." The building that eventually became known as Independence Hall saw many famous events and persons, and their story is told with an abundance of lively quotations from contemporary sources. The book includes 32 pages of pictures.

JANE'S ALL THE WORLD'S AIRCRAFT, 1948. Macmillan, $20.

THIS is a vastly improved compilation of the available information on aircraft. Editor Bridgeman says that Russia remains an enigma, an opinion milder than Churchill's. He tells an interesting anecdote about the preparation of the section on Russian aircraft. Illustrations of the new jet aircraft were prepared from information obtained from film exposed from the ground through a telescopic lens at the 1947 aviation display. Better paper, type and printing, added to Bridgeman's thoughtful editing, make this the finest production of its kind. Photographs are clear and the aircraft markings sharply defined. For the first time there is included a supplement of information obtained after the main book was compiled and an index to both the airplane and engine sections. A convenient tab to the contents points the way to Part A: Air Forces of the World; Part B: World's Civil Aviation; Part C: All the World's Airplanes; Part D: All the World's Engines. J. K. B.

THE CATEGORICAL IMPERATIVE. By H. J. Paton. University of Chicago Press. 283 pp., $4.

H. J. PATON, White's professor of moral philosophy at Oxford University and internationally famous student of Kant, in this brilliant study of Kant's "Groundwork of the Metaphysic of Morals," says the work has been misunderstood and distorted. Kant, Paton says, was not attempting to lay down an unconditional moral law—or categorical imperative—to be applied without relation to other factors, but of attempting to set forth or isolate, the first principles in moral thinking.

THE POLITICAL COMMUNITY. By Sebastian De Grazia. University of Chicago Press. 258 pp., $4.

THIS is a study of "anomie," a word first given prominence by the French sociologist Durkheim. Loosely, anomie may be described as the lack of values on the part of an individual or society because of the loss of faith or system of belief, and as being characterized by fear and mental tension. Anomie has afflicted most of the civilizations of the past and was a factor in their disintegration. Sebastian De Grazia, a political scientist on the faculty of the University of Chicago, examines the systems of belief current today and finds anomie present in varying degrees.

THE POLITICAL THEORY OF BOLSHEVISM, A Critical Anaylsis. By Hans Kelson. University of California Press. 60 pp.

A MEATY, succinct analysis of the contradiction within Bolshevist thinking between anarchism in theory and totalitarianism in practice. Russian political thinking is shown to consider socialism sufficiently important to impose it by the dictatorship of a minority. The author has no patience with apologists for Russia who maintain its political theorists believe in the Western concept of democracy but just use different words for it.

District School Borrowing Would End 74 Years of Strict Pay-as-You-Go

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

WASHINGTON has the choice of borrowing money to build schools or neglecting the educational welfare of its children.

This conclusion is a major point in the report on District school building needs prepared for Congress by Dr. George D. Strayer. He recommends that the District borrow from the Federal Government without interest to help complete a 38-million-dollar school building program. That is a bending away from what has been the chief Congressional rule for managing District financial affairs for 74 years to keep the city on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Only previous major softening of the policy has been the Capper-Cramton Act of 1930, which authorized, in effect, a kind of borrowing to buy land for park and recreation use. The land is bought by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, title is kept by the United States, but it is made available to District residents and the District finally pays the bill. Some 11 million dollars' worth of land has been bought in this way.

Now, says the Strayer report, District school building needs must be financed in somewhat the same way. A similar approach was recommended in 1947 by the District Board of Education, but it received no backing from the Commissioners and fell by the wayside at the Capitol without thorough review.

Money as Needed

THE Strayer report calls for the spending of $37,901,816 for school construction. To get the money, it proposes that Congress authorize a loan arrangement with the Federal Government to be called the "Periodic Loan Annual Repayment Program." It adds:

"The amount of money to be made available at any one time should be geared to the capacity of the department of construction to handle the work."

The report cites these advantages of the proposed loan plan:

"1. Adequate financing of the school housing program to take care of current needs which cannot be accomplished by the present pay-as-you-go plan.

"2. Spreading the local tax burden over a period of several years by providing an amount of money in each annual budget for loan repayment.

"3. Making available to the people of the District a method of financing capital outlay needs on a basis comparable to that of other American cities."

Invariably Fall Behind

DR. STRAYER'S report said that the pay-as-you-go method of financing building had failed in nearly every American community where it has been tried.

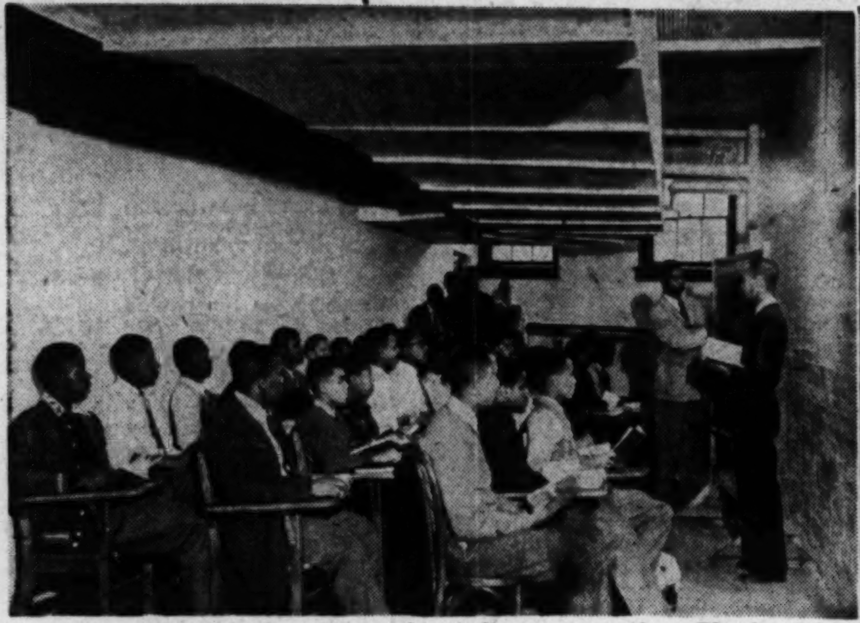
"Construction of new buildings has not kept pace with the need for school housing, with the result, as in the District, that the backlog of neglect has reached the point where the only alternatives are borrowing or gross neglect of the educational welfare of the children and youth."

The failure of pay-as-you-go was only one of the arguments given by the Strayer report for borrowing to build. Others were:

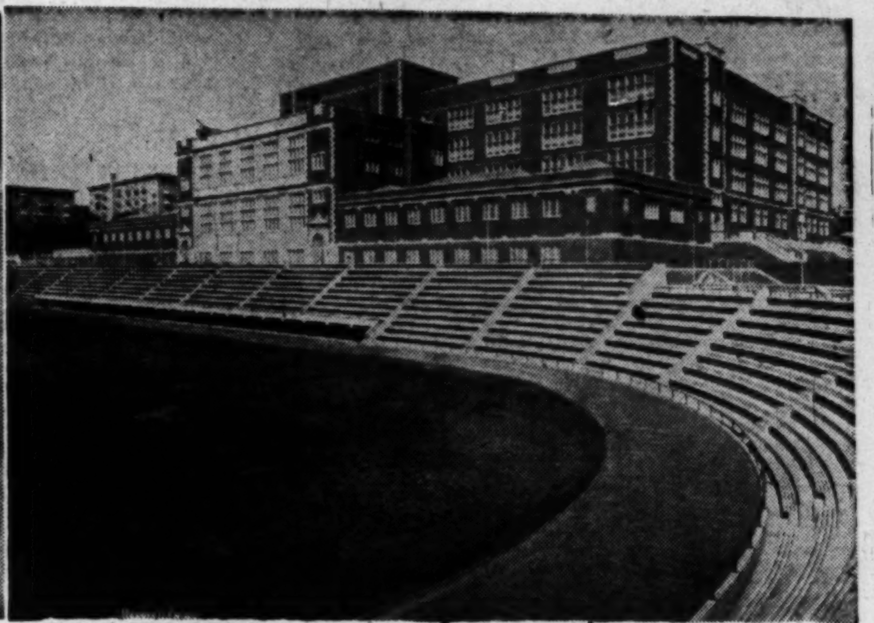
"1. Capital outlay requirements do not distribute themselves uniformly over the years. They fall in large lump sums at one time between intervals of little or no need for replacement or expansion of plant facilities.

"2. School buildings serve three or four generations of children—50 or more years of useful life—thus justifying the spread of initial cost over a period of as much as 20 years.

"3. Finally, borrowing is an accepted practice in both private and public enterprises, based on the economic principle that money is worth its hire."



Cardozo High School at 9 st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., is so crowded that this health class has to meet in a basement corridor. The furnace pipes overhead reduce the ceiling height to a lowering 7 feet



Central High School, the landmark on "Thirteenth Street Hill," would become administrative headquarters of the District school system, under one Strayer proposal. Another is to make it a technical institute

Individual Supporters

WHILE Congress has stuck to the pay-as-you-go policy for the District, there have been expressions of support from individual members for borrowing to build schools.

Last year, Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.) urged at one point that the District Committee be asked to authorize a 7-to-10-million-dollar loan program for District construction, with special emphasis on schools.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), who with Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) received the Strayer report, declared that "it is essential that the District have adequate school facilities. If we have to borrow, then borrow we must."

He emphasized he was not specifically approving the Strayer recommendation, and would not comment on it without further study.

Senator O'Mahoney said he was particularly concerned with the effects of inflation upon school building costs. O'Mahoney is former chairman, and Dworshak present chairman, of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee in charge of the District budget.

The leading House figure in fixing District financial policies in the past two years has been a strong supporter of the pay-as-you-go idea. He is Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.) chairman of the House subcommittee in charge of District revenue legislation.

Bates last year urged, and Congress approved, a program for financing expansion of the District water system out of a 25 per cent boost in water rents coupled with a million-dollar-a-year Federal contribution. The program was a substitute for a borrowing plan that Bates said would have cost District taxpayers an extra 10 million dollars in interest over a period of 15 to 20 years.

Authority for limited District borrowing was recommended this year in the Washington home rule bill which failed to clear Congress.

The District's 74-year-old system of financial management took its cue from a big debt built up by what was a mammoth public works program for the time.

The program, put through under the District's territorial government by Alexander R. Shepherd, lifted the city out of the mud with miles of street grading and paving. It extended the water and sewer systems, and lined the streets with trees.

In about three years, the city debt jumped from some four million to 22 million. The territorial form of government was replaced in 1874 by the Commissioner setup, the debt was funded, and it took 50 years to pay it off. Congress has since clung to the pay-as-you-go approach.

Strayer's $38,000,000 Program Should Carry Capital School Load Until 1960

difficult, if not impossible," Dr. Strayer said.

The school surveyor took note of the peculiar nature of the government of the District, which gives residents no voice in school policies.

"In any other American village, town or city," Dr. Strayer said, "the citizens confronted by similar conditions could by popular vote choose between continued neglect and modern, safe and sanitary schools."

Pointing out that it is not within the scope of the report to seek changes in the District government, Dr. Strayer declared it his duty "to appeal to existing authority to recognize the urgency of the situation and to make available to existing agencies sufficient funds over a period of years to consume the backlog of neglect and to meet the problem of expanding enrollment."

He recommends that Congress end its "current piecemeal policies" of appropriating funds project by project and substitute "a policy of authorizing proven necessary large-scale programs."

War Baby Allowance

DR. STRAYER had little to say on the city's dual school system.

It had been expected that he would recommend the transfer of certain white schools, particularly senior and junior high schools, now used below capacity, to the Negro divisions to relieve overcrowding. Instead, Dr. Strayer recommended that white secondary schools, with the exception of Central, be continued to take care of the war babies when they reach junior high and high school age.

Comparing the white schools with those used by Negroes, he found that a larger percentage of the white schools passed the test of educational adequacy. Dr. Strayer reported that 26 per cent of white schools and 32.6 per cent of Negro schools were unsatisfactory.

"These differences are in large measure explained by the geographical movement of the population," the report says. "The white population has moved away from the older part of the city. This area, with its older buildings, has been occupied by the colored people. Where buildings have been recently constructed, those occupied by colored children are as good as those occupied by white children.

"The Richardson and Young schools for the colored population are in the highest bracket among all the schools of the city."

But Dr. Strayer assigns the lion's share of the money to the Negro schools. Of $35,169,316 for new buildings and additions, he earmarks $27,655,626 for the Negro schools and $7,513,690 for the white schools.

Point System Employed

ASSISTING Dr. Strayer in the preparation of the report were Frank W. Hart, professor of educational administration at the University of California; Harold L. Corzett, former superintendent of schools at Little Falls, N. Y., and Charles E. Sagner, jr., a graduate student at George Washington University.

Dr. Strayer and his staff evaluated each building according to a standard score card. Elements making up the ideal school plant were broken down into more than 100 items. Each item was assigned a score. A perfect score was 1000.

School plants scoring 700 points or more were judged "very satisfactory." Plants falling below 700 were found to need alterations, additions or improvements. Schools scoring less than 300 points were considered generally not to justify heavy expenditures.

Here follows Dr. Strayer's analysis of school buildings, listing for each its educational adequacy score, his recommendations and its assigned priority.

White Senior High Schools

ROOSEVELT, 13th and Upshur sts. nw., 767.

Eastern, 17th and East Capitol sts., 764.

Wilson, Nebraska ave. and Chesapeake st. nw., 744.

Coolidge, 5th and Tuckerman sts. nw., 738. New stadium recommended, $310,500, priority 3.

Anacostia, 16th and R sts. se., 721.

Central, 13th and C[illegible] sts. nw., 708, rapidly passing in need as a regular high school. He recommends three alternative uses in order of preference:

1. Continued use as a regional high school with the addition of a technical institute offering a two-year program above the high school level.

2. Closing of the school and conversion of the plant into a central administrative building for the school system.

3. Continued temporary use of the facility as a combined high and junior high school.

McKinley, 2d and T sts. ne., 695.

Western, 35th and R sts. nw., 606.

Dr. Strayer finds that the present surplus of space, sufficient to house 2272 pupils, indicates no need for white high school construction before 1960.

White Vocational High Schools

CHAMBERLAIN, 13th st. and Potomac ave. se., 684.

Burdick, 13th and Allison sts. nw., 753.

Bell, Hiatt pl. and Lamont st. nw., 414.

Dr. Strayer praises the Board of Education for transferring Bell into the old Powell Junior High School building. He recommends immediate conversion of the Powell plant and razing of Johnson annex to add more recreational area, $100,000, priority 1.

Negro Senior High Schools

THE report describes housing for Negro high school students as critical and points out that all three schools are below par in educational adequacy and occupied beyond capacity.

Dunbar, 1st and O sts. nw., 489, needs modernizing. Recommended: An addition to house 350 students; new cafeteria; two new gymnasiums; enlargement and development of athletic field; $1,100,000; priority 1.

Cardoza, 9th st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., 371. Complete lack of play space, inadequate cafeteria, limited gymnasium and auditorium facilities and fire hazards make necessary abandonment of the building, Dr. Strayer reports.

Armstrong, O st. between 1st and 3d sts. nw., 353, inadequate for high school program. He recommends a replacement to be built at 6th st. and Brentwood pkwy. ne., $4,600,000, priority 1. Dr. Strayer suggests that the old Armstrong building be turned into an occupational junior high school.

New Negro high school, Spingarn, 24th st. and Benning rd. ne., recommended to house 2000 students at a cost of $4,600,000, priority 1; stadium, $310,500, priority 3.

Negro Vocational High Schools

WASHINGTON, North Capitol and O sts., 733.

Phelps, 24th st. and Benning rd. ne., 655.

Both schools are "very satisfactory," Dr. Strayer said. Current overcrowding will be relieved by the the proposed new Armstrong and Spingarn buildings.

White Junior High Schools

Jefferson, 8th and H sts. sw., 700.

Kramer, 17th and Q sts. se., 656.

Macfarland, Iowa ave. and Varnum st. nw., 620; recommended improvements, $85,000, priority 3.

Deal, Fort dr. and Nebraska ave. nw., 564.

Gordon, 35th and T sts. nw., 555.

Taft, 18th and Perry sts. ne., 537.

Paul, 8th st. and Missouri ave. nw., 519.

Eliot, 18th and B sts. ne., 515. New gymnasium, $290,000; priority 2.

Stuart, 4th and E sts. ne., 464. Improvements, $85,000; priority 3.

Hine, 7th and C sts. se., 262. Replacement, $2,300,000; priority 1.

New junior high school, Sousa, east of the Anacostia River, $1,895,000; priority 1.

The downward trend in white junior high school enrollment is a reflection of the low birth rate of the 1930s and will be reversed beginning in 1953, Dr. Strayer said.

Negro Junior High Schools

DR. STRAYER notes that the schools are operating at 28 per cent above capacity.

Banneker, Euclid st. at Georgia ave. nw., 674. Addition recommended, $270,000; priority 1.

Browne. 24th st. and Benning rd. ne., 623. Addition and new gymnasuim, $920,000; priority 2.

Francis, 24th and N sts. nw., 523. Addition and gymnasium, $575,000; priority 2.

Garnet-Patterson, 10th and U sts. nw., 412. Current overcrowding will be taken care of by a replacement for Shaw.

Randall, 1st and I sts. sw., 382. Addition now under construction will take care of immediate needs.

Shaw, 7th st. and Rhode Island ave. nw., 322. Dr. Strayer noted that the school has no gymnasium, and that assembly hall and play areas are inadequate and stairways do not meet fire regulations. He recommends a new building at 6th and O sts. nw., $3,680,000; priority 1.

Terrell, 1st and M sts, nw., 228, has "one of the lowest scores on record anywhere in the United States for a junior high school or high school plant," Dr. Strayer reported. He recommends a new building, $2,300,000; priority 1.

New junior high school, Pomeroy and Stanton rds, se. School census in area east of the Anacostia River and South of Pennsylvania ave. se., shows need for a Negro junior high school, 800 capacity, $1,840,000; priority 1.

DR. STRAYER divided the city into 14 zones to determine whether elementary schools covered all areas. The schools are listed according to these zones. Wherever Dr. Strayer recommended major improvements, cost and priority number are listed.

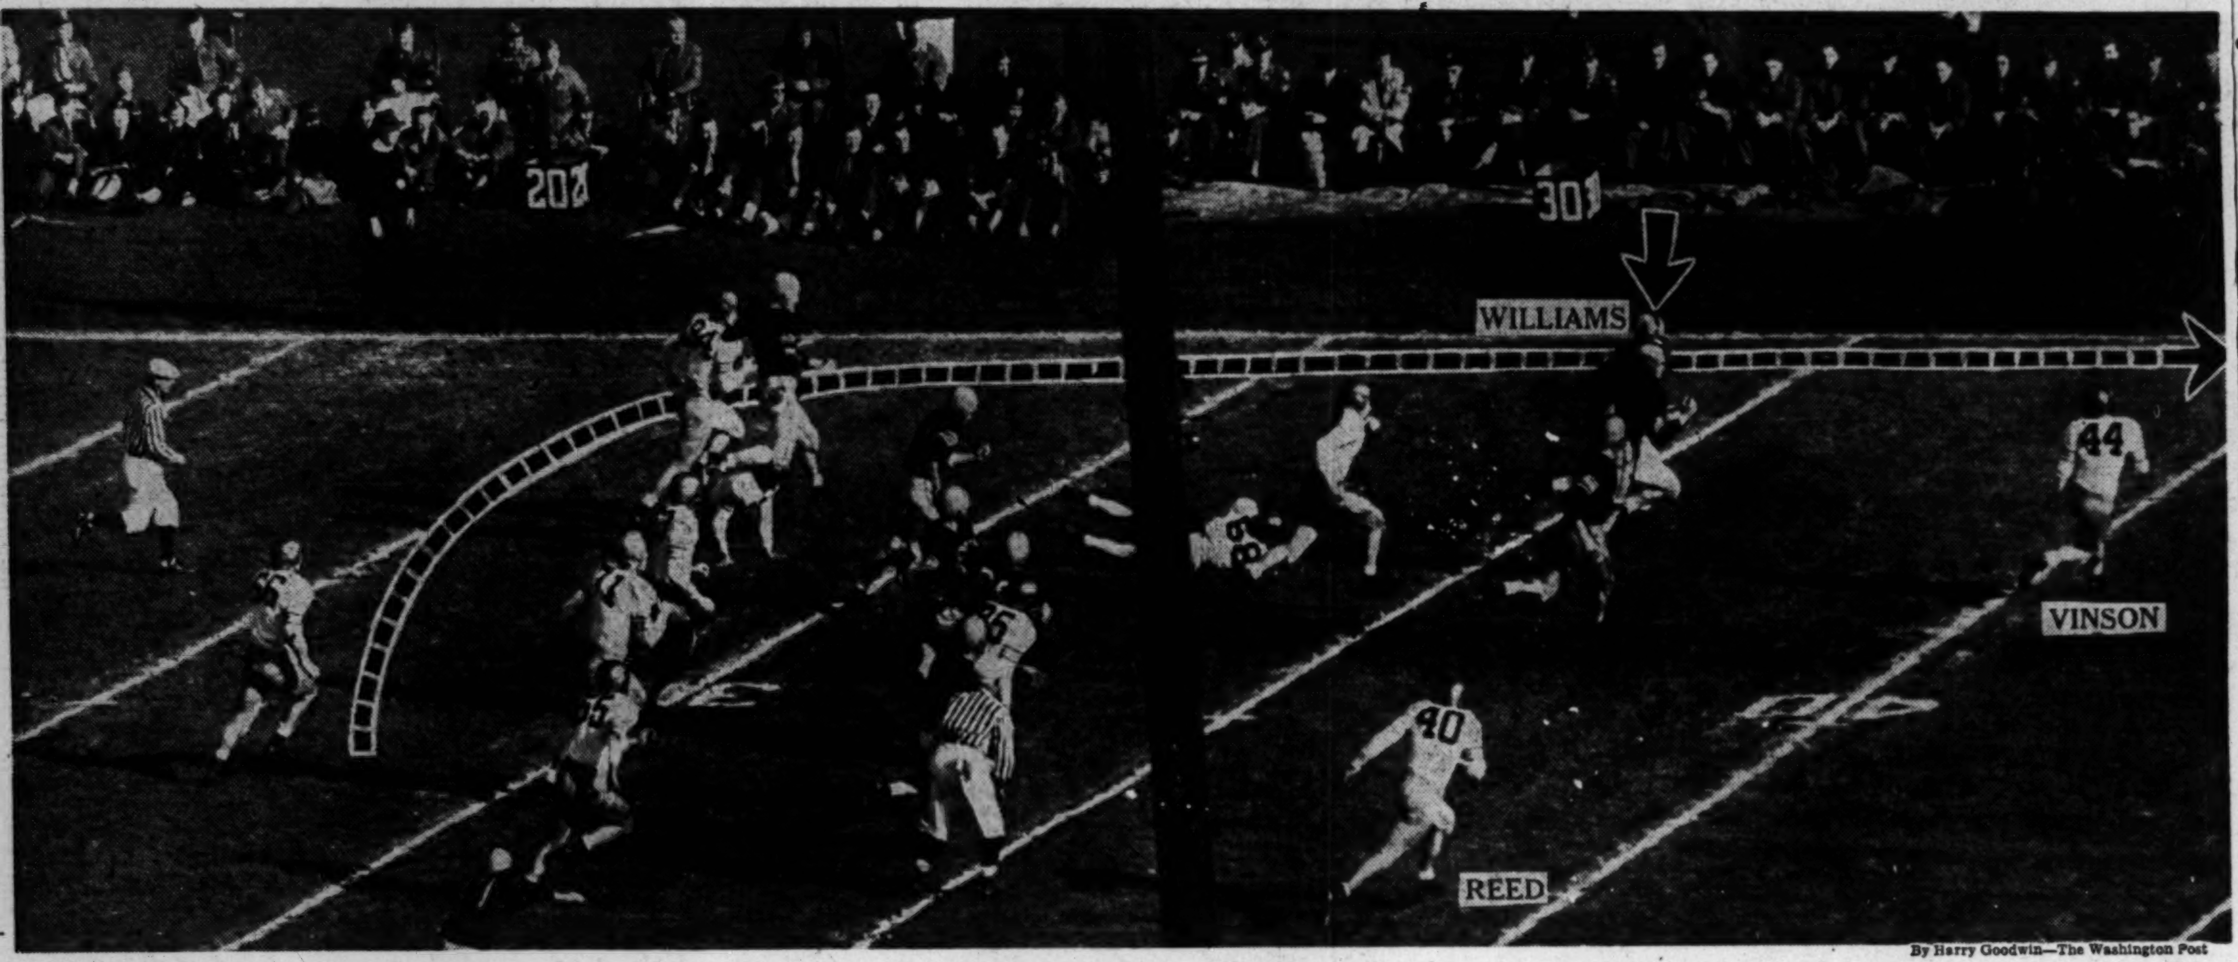
N. C., Oklahoma Win, Go to Sugar Bowl



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Play of the Game— Pete Williams, Navy back, makes "The Play of the Game" by running 59 yards against Army, setting up the Middies' first touchdown in their 21-21 tie yesterday at Philadelphia. Williams takes a pitch to the left flank from Reaves Baysinger, outruns Army's defense and tight ropes down the sideline 59 yards before he is pulled down on Army's 12 by John Shelley. A little later Baysinger went across for the game's first touchdown in the opening period. President Truman was among 101,000 fans at the spectacle

Justice & Co. Beat Virginia, End Season Undefeated

By Herb Heft

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 27.—Choo Choo Charlie Justice and his undefeated North Carolina teammates landed in the Sugar Bowl today after belting stubborn Virginia, 34-12, before 26,000 fans of Scott Stadium.

The incomparable Justice reeled off spectacular touchdown runs of 80 and 47 yards, and passed to Art Weiner and Bobby Cox for another pair. Choo Choo's battering running mate, Hosea Rodgers, bulled five yards for the first Tar Heel touchdown.

The Tar Heels scored 21 points before Virginia could catch its breath, and the dye was cast. The Tar Heels completed their first undefeated season since the turn of the century.

As Sugar Bowl opponents on New Year's Day at New Orleans, Carolina drew once-beaten Oklahoma, champions of the Big Seven.

Choo Choo Opens Throttle

An aroused Virginia team offered Carolina stiffer resistance than expected, and going into the third quarter narrowed the Tar Heel margin to 21-12. But with four minutes left, Justice loosened up to pass for one touchdown and scoot for another.

Justice drew a great roar from the crowd every time he got his hands on the ball, and the large delegaion of flag-waving Carolinians almost tore down the stands when the Asheville Express wiggled loose for his two long touchdown sprints.

His first touchdown run came in the second quarter and upped the Tar Heels' lead to three touchdowns. It was a breath-taking play with Choo Choo taking the snap from center, hesitating and then whooshing straight through left tackle and into the clear, 80 yards without being touched.

Guard Bob Mitten and Tackle Bob Hazelwood opened the gap in the line, and Justice whisked through. Only Virginia Safety Man Joe McCary took up the chase, and Justice out-sprinted him by 15 yards.

The other Justice touchdown dash came in the fourth quarter when Carolina held a 25-12 lead. Kennedy took a punt from Virginia's Dick Michaels at midfield, and ran laterally toward his own bench. From out of nowhere came to Choo Choo to grab the ball

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—Pitt's offer of the post of athletic director to Navy's Capt. Yale made Big Three football history when it elevated Negro Halfback Levi Jackson to the captaincy but Yale men are awaiting the spring and the answer to another question: Will Jackson become the first colored boy to make a Yale fraternity? . . . the Philadelphia Eagles won the National Football League's draft rights to Chuck Bednarik, Penn's All-America center, only to discover that he is already pledged to Brooklyn of the All-America Conference . . . Admiral Eddie Ewen who captained Navy teams that beat Army in 1919-'20, watched today's games via television at Bethesda Naval Hospital . . . critically ill in a hospital in Hartford, Conn., was Gil Dobie, who coached those two teams for Navy . . . FOR THE FIRST TIME in their three seasons in the All-America Conference, the Cleveland Browns are underdogs in a football game. Terps Lose Again, 16-14

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 27.—Maryland was waylaid in the hills of West Virginia today by a stubborn mountaineer football team which simply refused to lose and didn't, 16-14.

The Sun Bowl-bound West Virginians converted a Maryland fumble into the winning touchdown with less than three minutes to play.

The victory, achieved before about 25,000 enabled former Redskin Coach Dud Degroot to wind up his first season with the mountaineers with the impressive record of eight successes and three losses. For Maryland, it was setback No. 4 against six triumphs and put an end to a season which began brilliantly, but closed dismally.

Jimmy Devonshire, a West Virginian by way of Penns Grove, N. J., and Gene Simmons, 140-pound native son who earns his keep at West Virginia by dropkicking, did it to the Terps this balmy afternoon.

Devonshire scored both Mountaineer touchdowns. The remarkable little Simmons, who looks like the team's mascot, registered what proved to be the winning margin when he neatly dropkicked an 11-yard field goal in the third period. This also stemmed from a Terp bobble.

The work of Devonshire, 185-pound senior, and the mighty mite from Elkins, eradicated an 82-yard touchdown gallop by Hubie Werner and a 30-yard scoring pass cooked up by Joe Tucker and Jimmy Larue.

The game had a little of everything, including a rhubarb by Head Linesman F. G. Heath which almost precipitated a junior-grade riot when he got his signals crossed on the number of downs the Mountaineers had used up during an abortive second-quarter drive.

After calling a five-yard pass penalty against the Mounties, Heath failed to notify the down-marking crew and the marker plainly showed third down when it should have read fourth.

The Mountaineers, forgetting that the penalty did not void the down, sent Jack Morton crashing

Four in Stands Sit Out Game in Texas Blizzard

Canyon, Tex., Nov. 27 (AP).—Only 10 hardy football fans huddled in the stands today in heavy falling snow and 60-miles-an-hour winds to watch West Texas State shiver to a 19-0 victory over New Mexico University. At the end of the game, four were left.

Two hundred automobiles, allowed inside the stadium, ringed the field for the border conference game. Chattered a college official: "We've got a blizzard and you can't see more than 200 in front of you."

In the Dressing Rooms After Navy's 'Moral Victory'

Cadet Huskies Weep, Tars Whoop It Up; 'Man Upstairs' Was for Us, Yells Captain

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

MUNICIPAL Stadium, Philadelphia, Nov. 27.—It was perfectly obvious which was the winning dressing room after today's memorable 21-21 tie. Those 21-point Navy underdogs really whooped it up all the way on their run to the showers.

Coach George Sauer closely followed his players and his appearance created a bedlam. Boisterously, the Middies mobbed him and carried him on their shoulders. Was it spontaneous? Well, a photographer didn't arrive on the scene until fully 10 minutes later and the performance wasn't repeated.

Sauer leaped on a trunk and said, simply: 'You're the fightingest bunch of men I've ever known. I'm proud of you." His eyes weren't moist—they were awfully wet.

Co-Capt. Scott Emerson, 6-foot 3-inch, 215-pound tackle, wasn't dry-eyed, either, when he got the floor long enough to speak: "Say a prayer tonight, will you, fellows. That man upstairs sure was on our side today."

Navy brass trouped in led by Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan. "If you boys," he said, make as good officers as football players, the Navy need have no worries."

It's little wonder Navy was supplied with three perfect placement conversions by boyish Roger Drew, refugee from the Jayvee team. The kid who played such a prominent role in Navy's historic stand actually was the calmest man in the dressing room after the game.

No extra-point kicker ever had more pressure on him than the 20-year-old third-classman had on that tying try. You'd never guess it talking to Drew. "No, I didn't think of missing," he said, adding almost a bit indignantly, "I couldn't let the team down. It meant too much."

There's a terrific story in Drew. He replaced Jim Wills, La Plata, Md., specialist who was injured after kicking 13 conversions in a row and a field goal in two years. Sauer didn't want to send Drew back to the Jayvees after the Huntington, Ind., lad had filled in so nicely. Drew repaid his coach today when he sent his streak to eight perfect points.

AN APPROPRIATE FIGURE in the dressing room was Navy's Athletic Director Tom Hamilton. It's been 22 years since an Army-Navy tie and that last one also was 21-21. Hamilton drop-kicked the three extra points at Soldier Field, Chicago, and had a particularly warm hand clasp for Drew.

Captain Hamilton refused to discuss the athletic job at Pitt, which, it is rumored, he has been offered. "Really, I'm too elated about this ball game to even think of it," said Captain Tom. All week he parried questions by saying he was only looking for-

Caps Win 12th In Row, 94-76

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

The unbeaten Washington Caps made it an even dozen in a row last night with an easy 94-76 rout of the Indianapolis Jets before an appreciative Uline Arena crowd of 3325.

The Caps won this one going away, opening out from a one-point lead at half time to 10 at the three-quarter mark and finally to the 18-point margin at the end.

The game demolished Cap Coach Red Auerbach's self-delusion that all his hands are of equal quality. Auerbach substituted freely after his first team had built up a first-period lead, and the Jets quickly closed in to make it 41 to 40 at half time.

Auerbach caught on quick and removed his regulars, Bones McKinney, Fred Scolari and Kleggie Hermsen, for only limited periods in the second half.

There was no rest at all for Captain Bob Feerick, the Caps' cool feeder in the second half. Feerick, a self-effacing individual, was a master at finding Caps in position and setting them up with the ball. Only rarely did he try his gently arched one-handers that seem to roll off his elbows.

McKinney and Scolari were high men for the winners with 19 points each. About half of Scolari's total came in the game's closing minutes when the Caps, disdaining the freeze, poured it on mercilessly. Bruce Hale led the Jets with 17 points. Behind him with 15 were Ray Lumpp and former Cap John

Baylor, Rice End in Tie, 7-7

Houston, Tex., Nov. 27 (AP).—Baylor and Rice handled a slippery ball for 60 minutes here today and finished in a 7-7 deadlock that also left them in a tie for third place in final Southwest Conference standings.

The Baylor team, finishing the season with five victories, three defeats and two ties, immediately received an invitation to play Wake Forest in the New Year's Day Dixie Bowl at Birmingham.

Rice moved 37 yards in three plays for its score, with Braden hitting right tackle from the 8 for the touchdown. James (Froggie) Williams, All-Conference end, converted.

Baylor's score came early in the fourth period after Rupbert Wright, Bear tackle, made his third fumble recovery of the day on the Rice 6. On third down Halfback Lyle Blackwood cut outside left tackle from the 2 for a touchdown and Henry Dickerson kicked the tying point.

Cotton Bowl Picks Oregon

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Sugar Bowl got North Carolina and Oklahoma, while Oregon accepted a bid to meet Southern Methodist in the Cotton Bowl today as the New Year's Day football picture began to take final shape.

Oklahoma wound up its regular schedule by outlasting Oklahoma A. & M., 19-15, and North Carolina clipped Virginia 34-12. They meet at New Orleans in the Sugar Bowl to open the new year.

As expected Oregon got the bid for the Dallas Cotton Bowl, after losing out to California for the Rose Bowl assignment. California tackles Northwestern in the Pasadena event.

Georgia was given the Orange Bowl bid after beating Georgia Tech, 21-13. Their opponent was not announced.

Clemson, which barely squeezed past Auburn, 7-6, to remain unbeaten, accepted a bid to play Missouri in the 'Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla. Baylor, in a 7-7 tie with Rice, got a bid to the Birmingham, Ala., Dixie Bowl, against Wake Forest.

Sooners Win Finale, 19-15

Stillwater, Okla., Nov. 27 (AP). Oklahoma's powerful Sooners shouldered aside stubborn Oklahoma A. & M., 19-15, today and moved into the Sugar Bowl for a New Year's game with North Carolina.

The once-beaten Sooners, Big Seven champions, had to go all out against a traditional foe to rack up their ninth straight victory after their opening game loss to Santa Clara.

Thirty-thousand rain-soaked spectators watched the contest which was hampered by fumbles.

Aggies May Go to Bowl

The inspired fighting Aggies could only be called great in defeat. On the strength of their showing they got an invitation to the Delta Bowl at Memphis.

Oklahoma also was brilliant in victory, turning back the tenacious second half Aggie attack which two times swept within ten yards of the Sooner goal.

Jim Spavital, hard-hitting Aggie halfback, made both his team's scores in the second and third quarters—the final touchdown on a 57-yard run.

The Sooners' Left Half Lindell Pearson accounted for two of the Oklahoma scores—one a 50-yard romp—and Quarterback Jack Mitchell made the other. Fumbles set up two of the touchdowns. Mitchell purposely grounded the ball in his end zone in the final 5 seconds of play for a safety rather than take a chance on losing the ball.

A. & M. 21-Point Underdogs

The Aggies were three-touchdown underdogs going into the game.

Oklahoma drove on the kickoff to the Aggie 10 but Jack Mitchell fumbled and Toy Ledbetter recovered for A. & M. On the next play, the wet ball squirted out of Spavital's hands and Ed Lisak recovered on the six. Two plays later Lindell Pearson plunged over from the four.

The Sooners, moving slowly because of the wet turf, started another drive after recovering a fumble by Spavital on their 42 at the end of the first quarter. On the second play after the second

It Takes 4000 Men to Put on Army-Navy Game

Philadelphia, Nov. 27 (AP).—It takes about 4,000 men to put on an Army-Navy football game and only 92 of them are players.

For example, at today's get-together in Municipal Stadium, there was 1,300 private detectives, 210 uniformed Philadelphia cops and 95 plainclothes detectives. Because the President was there, 50 Secret Service men also were on hand.

Concessions and program sales staffs run more than 1,300. Working press, radio, television and newsreel men number almost 500.

SMU in Tie; Johnson Star

Dallas, Nov. 27 (AP).—Gil Johnson, Southern Methodist's mighty bomber, pulled another one out of the fire today as he passed the Mustangs to a 7-7 tie with Texas Christian in the season's last Southwest Conference game for both teams.

The clock showed a minute and 40 seconds to go and the crowd of 67,000 was filing out of the Cotton Bowl as Gil set his sights from the Southern Methodist 1-yard line. Fighting Texas Christian had outplayed SMU badly and was leading, 7-0.

Johnson passed to Zohn Milam on the Southern Methodist 19. Some of the people leaving the stadium came back. Then Johnson, who never runs with the ball, took out around right end for 22 yards. All the people leaving the stadium stopped. Next the great passer pitched to Dick McKissack on the Texas Christian 35, and then, as the clock showed 22 seconds to go, the baldish man with the whipcord arm faded back and passed to Milam down on the TCU 2-yard stripe. Milam gathered it in and fell across the goal line

Distance King Pilaster Spurts to Fifth Maryland Stake Win

Straus Ace Scores By Two Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 27.—Any doubt of Pilaster's distance-running and weight-carrying ability was wiped away today when Harry L. Straus' 4-year-old gelding won the $20,000 added Bryan and Memorial Handicap by two lengths in the mud with 125 pounds on his back. A crowd of 17,000 saw the sparkling effort.

It was a fitting close of the 1948 campaign for Pilaster on the final racing program of the Maryland season. It's on to Charles Town Monday. Earlier the 4-year-old gelded son of Pilate, had swept every route takes event in Maryland except the Pimlico Cup, including the 2 1-16-mile Exterminator Handicap at Pimlico.

Two outsiders took place and show money in the richest race offered during this very successful Bowie session, owned by George Jacobson of Washington. Big Dial, second last week in the Prince George Cap, again snared place, some 2½ lengths in front of R. E. Carter's Oriole, a 40-to-1 outsider, who returned $12.40 show.

Timed in 2.04 1-5

Pilaster, a co-favorite with the Brookmeade Stable entry of Inseparable and Chains, paid $7.00, $4.80 and $3.80 across the board. Pilaster was timed in 2.04 1-5 for the 1 3-16-mile trip around the soggy oval.

Carson Kirk of Silver Spring, Md., who has ridden Pilaster to most of his triumphs this year was justly applauded for his well-judged ride aboard the winner. Pilaster earned $15,250 in today's race which raised his bank account this year to exactly $72,000.

A heavy disappointment in the Bryan and O'Hara was the performance of the Brookmeade entry. The crowd figured Inseparable, who had captured last week's Prince George's cup, could repeat that effort.

Inseparable, except for a brief burst of speed at the start, showed no liking for the going and ran last all the way. Chains, the other half with Clarence Picou up, was never a factor and wound up seventh.

Istan Takes Lead

Istan, who eventually faded to finish ninth, shot into the lead the first time through the stretch. The Brookfield Farm runner held on to half way down the back lane when he had to give up. Ace Admiral, of Maine Chance Farm, then forged into command with Big Dial at his heels.

The latter, in a bold challenge, seized the advantage and for a few seconds on the big bend for home appeared to be stealing the race. But Pilaster, who was in sixth at the half mile pole, was just beginning to find his foot on the outside.

At the eighth pole, Pilaster was at Big Dial's saddle cloth and flying. He moved by with ease and a sixteenth from the wire anyone in the crowd could have called the finish. Oriole, who was close up in the early running, came on again to save the third, about three legths before Ace Admiral, who quit at the end.

The betting for the day set an all-time record for Bowie. A total of $1,424,000 was wagered, topping the last Saturday of the 1947 meeting by a few thousand.

Metro Teams Play Benefit for Tawney Today

The Brookland-Woodridge Merchants, 1948 Metropolitan Football League 160-pound western division champions, and the Southwest Merchants play today on Gonzaga High field in a benefit game for Ed Tawney.

Tawney, former star at Central High School and fullback of the Southwest club, suffered a broken back in a game between these teams last month.

Twenty-year-old Tawney's injury ruined the championship chances of Southwest, which won the title last year.

Tawney has been released from the hospital but must remain in bed at his home with his back and chest encased in a cast.

Two 8-Round Bouts Head Turner Card

Two eight-round boxing bouts will head the weekly fight show at Turner's Arena tomorrow night, replacing the scheduled meeting of Joe Blackwood and Al Wright which was postponed by an injury to the former.

A sprained ankle suffered by Blackwood on Friday forced Matchmaker Gabe Menendez to come up with a substitute program.

One of the feature bouts will be between Artie Bethea, hard-hitting local middleweight, and Jumping Joe Green of Asheville, N. C. This will be their third meeting, each fighter holding a victory. Green is a tough Southerner who holds recent victories over Dave Clark and Emery Jackson. Bethea is best-known for his surprise victory over Al Wright, the scheduled headliner.

The other eight-rounder matches George Bradford Smith, rising New York welterweight, with Walter Rowan, Richmond scrapper. Bradford recently scored over Bobby Lee in Holyoke, Mass., after Lee had given Ray Robinson a very close fight in Philadelphia. Rowan last week scored over Leslie Harris, and drubbed tough Jimmy McGriff in Richmond.

Three five-round preliminary bouts are also listed. Johnny Holt, local middleweight, will meet Oscar Wakefield, Baltimore puncher. Don Wagner, Portsmouth heavyweight, mixes with Ben Harrison of Washington, and Ray Aldridge, Portsmouth, meets Washington's Frank Ball. The show starts at 8:45 p. m.

Redskins Tackle Bears Today; It May Be Baugh's Last Game

Chicago, Nov. 27.—For the twelfth—and perhap last—time in his 12 years of professional football, Slingin' Sammy Baugh will lead the Washington Redskins against the Chicago Bears tomorrow at Wrigley Field.

There'll be more than 40,000 fans watching the ancient football league rivals come to grips, and most of them will be expecting the Redskins to lose without a struggle. Baugh thinks differently.

"We've got to win this one," he exhorted his teammates throughout the 17-hour train trip to Chicago. And by way of giving credence to the possibility, the 34-year-old passing wizard thinks this might be his last year of active football. Sammy followed up with the statement, "I've got to win this one."

Baugh was never so right, if the Skins hope to keep their Eastern championship prospects alive. A loss to the Bears, along with Philadelphia's anticipated victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers, will forever close the door on their '48 chances.

The Slinger and his unpredictable mates are three-touchdown underdogs, largely as a result of the Bears' record of only one setback this year. While the Redskins realize the faintness of their chances, and have little to lose, Chicago is high in the running for the Western crown.

Baugh's passes will be pitted against a Bear team boasting three of the country's greatest aerialists—Sid Luckman, Johnny Lujack and Bobby Layne. But oddly enough, the Bears will probably depend more on running than passing to roll over the 'Skins.

For a change, Washington hopes to do a little running, getting Steve Bagarus back into action but it lost some power when Halfback Tom Farmer was left at home with injuries. Also unable to make the trip were Center Al Damao and Halfback George Cheverko.

St. John's, Gonzaga Play for Title

A red-hot Catholic high school rivalry goes into its twentieth year today as Gonzaga meets St. Johns at Griffith Stadium before an expected crowd of 15,000.

Gonzaga, having had the best of it during the past 19 years with 12 victories as against 5 losses and 2 ties, is expected to add another victory today over the Cadets, who have won only one game this season.

However, St. Johns has decorated this otherwise disappointing showing with two ties against the football powers of the city—0-0 against Georgetown Prep, and 19-19 against Central, the Interhigh champion. Despite this, Gonzaga's 5-3 record this year makes the Eagles two touchdowns favorite on paper. Gonzaga will present a trophy to the outstanding player of the game.

The winner of today's game will be considered the Catholic Prep School champion. Powerful Georgetown Prep, had to cancel its game against Gonzaga because of a polio outbreak.

Scheduled to start at 2:15, the game will follow a Catholic Youth Organization Junior championship clash between Blessed Sacrament and St. Anthony's, at 12:30.

Georgia Turns Back Georgia Tech, 21-13, Boosts Bowl Stock

Rauch, Geri Pace Attack Of Bulldogs

By Sterling Slappey

Athens, Ga., Nov. 27 (AP).—The Georgia Bulldogs, beaten only once, scented an invitation to the Orange, Sugar or Cotton Bowl today and pounded Georgia Tech in a convincing 21-13 victory on Sanford Field.

The Southeastern Conference battle also won the league championship for the Bulldogs. They are unbeaten in six Conference games.

Georgia's first touchdown was set up by a Rauch-Lorendo pass good for 46 yards. Lorendo made a diving catch for the ball and jerked away from three Tech men befort being brought down 10 yards farther down field.

Floyd Reid Scores

Tillitski, Eli Maricich, Geri and Rauch began hitting the middle. Tech's defense was boxed in when Floyd Reid went around left end for the score.

Geri kicked his first of two placements during the half, which were his thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth of the year.

Within three minutes Georgia scored again in a near repeat performance of the first quarter drive. Rauch and Lorendo opened Tech's defense with passes and then the same power smashers were sent into the Tech line for consistent gains. The touchdown was bucked across by Tillitski on a 4-yard run.

The first Yellow Jacket touchdown came when Tackle Clay Matthews blocked a Georgia kick and End George Broadnax covered the ball in the end zone. It was Georgia's second blocked punt of the game. Dinky Bowen kicked the point.

Fourth Score a Thriller

The fourth touchdown was a thriller. Bulldog Ken McCall returned a Tech kick 53 yards for the score and Geri kicked his thirty-sixth point of the year.

The best work by Tech was midway the last quarter. The Jackets drove 61 yards and Bowen capped the drive with an end run for the touchdown. Bowen missed his last after point try.

HAROLD SHULTZ SMASHES 6 YARDS FOR ARMY'S FIRST SCORE AGAINST NAVY YESTERDAY. PETE WILLIAMS MAKES THE GOAL-LINE TACKLE FOR NAVY TOO LATE

TAR HEELS—Fr. P. C-1

Carolina Wins, Ends Season Undefeated

away, and dart 47 yards over the goal line, again untouched.

Coach Carl Snavely's Carolinians went the distance the first time they got possession of the ball: Justice, Rodgers and Kennedy cracked the Virginia line, and on six plays advanced 59 yards to the Cavalier 10. There, a Justice fumble was nullified by a Virginia off-side penalty, and Rodgers scored on a 5-yard thrust through right guard.

A McCary fumble, recovered by Johnny Clements on the Virginia 45 set the second Tar Heel score in motion. After an off-side penalty moved the ball to the Virginia 40, Justice went into action. He faded back and whipped the ball high to 6-foot, 3-inch Weiner, who, like a scatback, dodged McCary on the 25, and raced over the goal line.

Virginia stuck to a ground game without much success until Justice's 80-yard sprint boosted the Tar Heels into a 21-0 lead. Then, no longer able to complacently stick to the land, the Cavaliers' Steve Osisek and Mchaels began passing, and they manuevered Virginia 69 yards to the Tar Heel 16.

Michaels then fired a great pass to Mike Mausteller who leaped in full stride to catch the ball on the rear chalk line of the end zone. Carl Elliott missed the try for the extra point, and Virginia trailed, 21-6, at intermission.

For the first 20 minutes of the second half, Virginia completely outplayed its foe, with Michaels, McCary and Osisek guiding the Cavaliers to a third-quarter touchdown.

It was a 32-yard drive with a Michaels-to-Osisek pass of 17 yards putting the ball on Carolina's 10. On third down, with 8 yards to go, McCary found Barney Gill clear in the left flat, and he hit the Norfolk sophomore with a touchdown pass.

Justice had just enough time left to unload his last 47-yard touchdown run.

Winless Navy Rallies Twice To Tie Army

Forrestal, Admiral William Leahy, Army Secretary Kenneth Royall, Supreme Court Justice Fred Vinson, Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan, Secretary of State George Marshall, Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin and Gen. Omar Bradley, Chief of Staff.

In a historic departure from Army-Navy tradition, the opening coin-toss was made by President Truman from his sideline seat instead of by the officials at mid-field. And before the game he extended warm greetings to Navy's Co-Capt. Pete Williams and Scott Emerson, and Army Capt. Bill Yoemans.

Navy supporters outspokenly regarded Mr. Truman's presence on the Annapolis side of the field as a lucky omen, chanting "we'll win with Harry," who earlier this month had fought the same kind of underdog battle.

Against the suspicion that there may have been fluke attached to Navy's glorious come-back are the game's figures which show that the Middies won everything except the final score. They gave West Point a horrible shoving around in the other statistics, rolling up 19 first downs to Army's 11; gaining 256 yards rushing to Army's 197 and edging out Army in passing, 83 yards to 73. Navy completed 6 of its 12 passes, Army only 3 of 10.

Army was hobbled soon after the start of the game when its No. 1 back, Bobby Stuart went out with an injury, but early in the second quarter the Cadets got the tying touchdown on a 55-yard march powered chiefly by Reserve Back Shultz.

Galiffa's 40-yard pass play to Parrish that carried to the Navy 3, precipitated the touchdown that put Army in front at the half, 14-7. But with the help of a pass-interference play, Navy went 80 yards to tie the score in the third quarter with Hawkins finally banging through the Army line.

Navy Bounces Back

Galiffa grabbed hold for Army at that point and personally led a 66-yard stampede climaxed by his own 9-yard slant around end that restored the Cadets to a 21-14 lead. And then Navy lashed out again.

A roughing penalty moved Army back to its 11, and Navy gained possession at mid-field on Rawers' punt. Big Hawkins, alternating with Green, charged down the middle for one 9-yard chunk and Horne sneaked to a first down on the Army 25.

Baysinger moved in to spell Horne and take over direction of Navy's attack. He sent Hawkins around right end for 6 yards on a pitchout, and Green's 5-yard gain at the middle left Navy needing 2 yards at the 4-yard line for a first down. Hawkins swung free on a pitch-out at left end and went all the way, with Barnes making a belated tackle on the goal line.

Now it was Midshipman Roger Drew, whose kicking toe held Navy's fate on the needed extra point, and he didn't miss. Young Drew, lately promoted from the junior varsity, booted his third placement of the game.

Navy had a good crack at both Army's famed offense and defense at the start of the game, and it was evident that Coach George Sauer had his lads inspired from the opening kick-off. Army failed to make a first down in three tries by Stephenson and Stuart, and Rawers punted to the Navy 12.

Green and Hawkins moved the ball 72 yards and then developed the play of the ball game. Baysinger flipped a seemingly reckless pitch to little Williams on the left flank and the halfback took it in full stride and was on his way.

He outsped Army's defense at the scrimmage line, and tight-roped down the boundary where he picked up two blockers. They were slowed by safetyman Reed, and in an attempt to reverse his field Williams was collared from behind at the 12-yard line by Shelley. It was an electrifying 59-yard gallop.

Baysinger sent Green probing at the Army line for a 2-yard gain, but it was only to set up a duplicate of the Williams play at the other end. Again Williams took a wide pitch-out from Baysinger and ripped 8 yards for a first down on the 2.

Eliminating the risk of a fumble by too much ball-handling at that point, Baysinger himself charged to the touchdown on a pair of quarterback sneaks.

And with Army unable to move after the next kick-off, the Middies also provided the next scoring threat. Before the quarter was over, they drove from their own 40 to a first down on the Army 16. Baysinger floated a smart pass to Green for 14 yards to the Army 27, and McCully barged to another first down. The Middies reached the Army 12 where two of the Cadets' outstanding linemen of the day, Kellum and Henry, called a halt by smearing Baysinger on a pair of pass attempts.

Galiffa organized the Army offense in the second quarter, though, despite the absence of Stuart and the ineffectiveness of Stephenson. He found a consistent ground-gainer in Shultz and from the Army 45 the Cadets went to the tying touchdown.

Shultz's hard-hitting charges contracted the Navy defenses and Galiffa cleverly capitalized on that state of affairs by pitching a 24-yard pass to Parrish, who was run out of bounds by Earl on the Navy 13.

Switching to the ground, Army sent Rudy Cosentino into Navy's right side for 7 big yards, and on the next play it was touchdown. Shultz got a quick hand-off and broke through the middle almost untouched for the las 6 yards. Captain Yeomans kicked the first of his three conversions.

Shultz launched Army's second touchdown with a 10-yard return of Baysinger's punt to Army's 46, and it was another Galiffa-to-Parrish pass that was the big play of the march. Parrish outwitted both Baysinger and Earl to get to the ball, and was finally knocked out of bounds by Earl on the Navy 2. It was a 40-yard chunk. Cosentino took the ball over with a plunge and lunge for the final inches.

But with Navy trailing 14-7 as the half ended, the huge gathering had seen the scorned Middies outrush the Cadets on the ground 158 yards to 84, and roll up eight first downs to Army's five.

Early in the third quarter there were signs that the game might become a Navy rout. Rushed all day on his punts by Army linemen, Baysinger finally had one blocked by Kellum. The Navy quarterback recovered the loose ball but Navy surrendered it on downs on its own 38.

Shultz ripped around Navy's left end for 9 yards before Baysinger brought him down, but Shultz was smeared for no gain by Hawkins on the same play at the other end. Army was stymied finally on the Navy 19, with two of Galiffa's passes missed by Parrish and Trent.

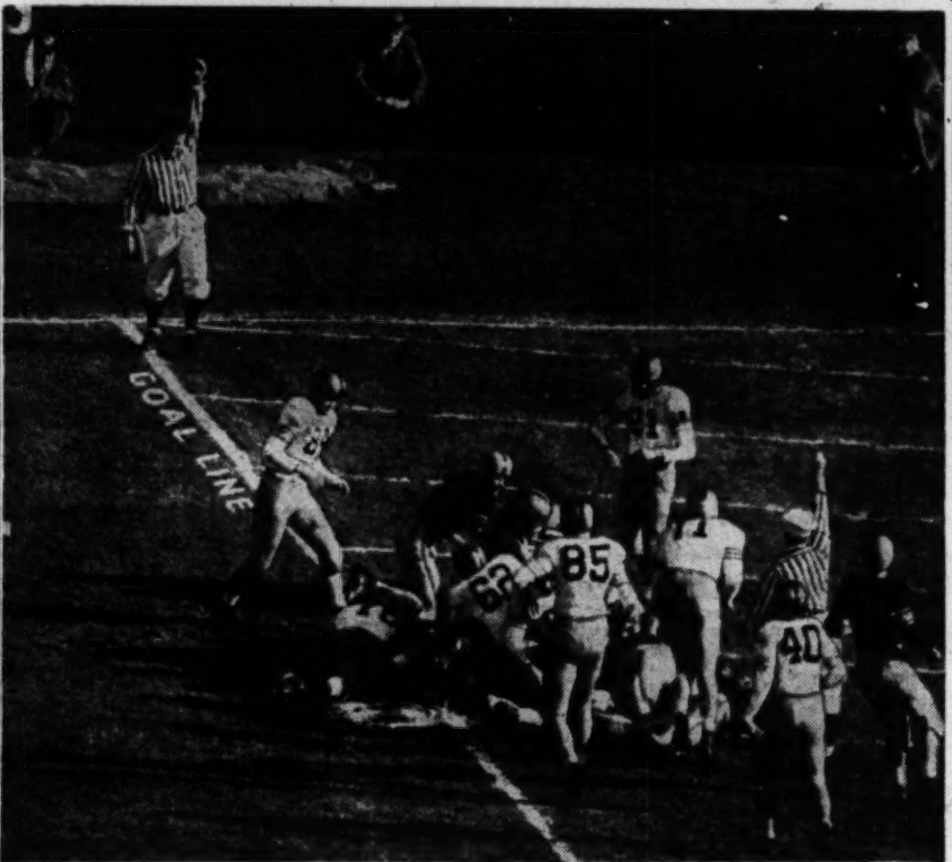
Navy got a break to tie the score at 14-14 on an 80-yard advance. Bayinger pitched a pass to Purvis for 12 yards on the Navy 44, and on the next play the officials ruled interference by Reed on a Baysinger pass to Williams, with Navy getting a first down on the Army 38. Baysinger hit Carson with a 10-yard pass over the middle, and then sent Bill Powers around left end behind blocking for a 23-yard dash to Army's 2, where Kellum got him.

Obviously trying to reward Powers with a touchdown play, Baysinger sent him into the line but he gained only one yard. Whereupon Hawkins got the task of carrying it over and did, bouncing into a pile-up at left guard and spinning off across the goal. Again Drew converted.

Navy's gallant come-back apparently was going for naught a bit later, though, when Army unloosed an unstoppable drive from its own 34. Stephenson ripped off 20 yards on a quick-opening play, and Galiffa scampered 14 on a fake handoff that evolved as a bootleg play, to a first down on the Navy 18.

Shultz and Stephenson moved the ball to Navy's nine and Galiffa himself took it over, hiding the ball until blockers moved ahead of him, and smacking past both Parsons and Hawkins at the five-yard line for the touchdown.

That made it 21-14, Army with 14 minutes to play, and Navy was now battling the clock, but four minutes later it had the tying touchdown and most of the day's glory.



BAYSINGER OVER—Reaves Baysinger, hidden by players of both teams, crosses the goal line for Navy's first touchdown in the Middies' dramatic 21-21 tie with Army at Philadelphia yesterday. Baysinger scored on a 2-yard plunge capping an 88-yard drive by the Middies

Wolfpack Bows, 21-7, To Villanova

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 27 (AP).—Villanova defeated North Carolina State's Wolfpack here today, 21-7, on a turf made soggy by an all-night rain.

The Wildcats scored the first time they got their hands on the ball, taking 11 plays to march 55 yards. Fullback Ralph Pasqueriello, a line busting 225-pounder, crashed over from the 6 for the first touchdown.

State scored, tied it up in the second quarter when Ogden Smith tossed 7 yards to Bill Thompson in the end zone.

During this stage of the game, Pasqueriello, Villanova's heavy gun, left the game on orders from the bench after successive roughing penalties called against him. Coach Jordan Olivar kept him on the bench for the rest of the contest. In all, the Wildcats lost 120 yards in penalties, compared with State's 40.

Villanova scored again in the third and fourth quarters. Soon after the second half began, Bob Polidor, on a beautiful opening play through his left sde, scampered 50 yards with the aid of good blocking.

The fourth quarter began with Villanova in possession of the ball on its 35. John Geppi, a fleet, 5-foot 7-inch 180-pounder, reeled off two consecutive first downs, and Joe Rogers smashed through center for another. Four plays later Fullback Pete D'Alonzo ripped off 5 yards for a touchdown.

The game was the last of the season for both squads and gave Villanova a record of seven wins, two losses and a tie. State wound up with a record of three wins, six losses and one tie.

State was outrushed 281 yards to 74, and made eight first downs to the Wildcats' 20. Villanova racked up 265 yards rushing against State's net of 44.

Fordham Rout NYU

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Fordham University made its 1948 football season a success today by defeating its traditional rival, New York University, 26 to 0, before 26,000 at the Polo Grounds.

The Rams took the opening kickoff and marched 69 yards to a touchdown, Larry Higgins bucking over from the 1. A minute later Fordham had another tally when Langdon Viracola sprinted across from the 18 after Erwin Gerung had recovered Bill Payne's fumble deep in Violet territory.

NYU was stopped on the Fordham 20, then Fordham scored again, George Appell ran over from the 7 to end the drive and Jim Erickson converted as he did after the final touchdown.

Fordham got its final score after a poor kick by Jack Fogarty early in the second half was run back to the NYU 31. Viracola carried twice, the second time an 11-yard jaunt to pay dirt.

Tripucka Tosses 3 Touchdowns

By Charles Chamberlain

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 27 (AP).—The football was like a greased pig to the University of Washington today.

Notre Dame turned five fumbles by the Huskies into quick touchdowns during the first half to romp rodeo fashion to a 46-0 triumph.

It was the Irish's greatest winning margin in nine consecutive decisions this season and stretched their victory streak to a school record of 21. The game also was the 27th in which Notre Dame remained undefeated, including the scoreless tie with Army in 1946, to eclipse another mark which was hoisted in the Knute Rockne era.

A crowd of 50,609—about 5,500 under capacity, ending a Notre Dame record of playing to sell-out throngs through 24 games—watched the Irish with awe as they piled up four touchdowns in the first quarter and one in each of the next three periods.

Frank Tripucka flipped three touchdown passes, each stemming from recovered fumbles, in directing an aerial game that accounted for 107 yards on three out of five completions.

Leahy, trying to hold down the score in this first of a two-game series with the Seattle team, gave orders to throw no passes in the last half. Then the Irish's ground attack was uncorked, picking up most of the total 337 yards rushing.

Washington completed only 8 of 24 tosses for 65 yards and was checked for 45 yards on the ground. The loss was the Huskies seventh in nine encounters this campaign, and their worst.

Here is the "Fumble'tis chart:"

Ansel McCullough lost the ball to Capt. Bill Fischer of Notre Dame on the Washington 24. John Panelli ripped 11 yards then sprinted the remaining 13 to score.

Brooks Biddle lost to Ed Hudak on the Huskies' 25 and after a 5-yard penalty, Tripucka tossed 30 to Terry Brennan.

Dick King's bobble was captured by Lancaster Smith on Washington's 36. Panelli banged 17 and Hart scooted the last 19 around end. Jack Seth lost to Fred Wallner on Washington's 35. The Irish soaked up a 5-yard infraction when Tripucka connected for 40 to Hart.

Eagles Whip Holy Cross By 21 to 20

Boston, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Boston College Eagles had to come from behind for a 21-20 victory over Holy Cross' underrated Crusaders in their football windup today before a packed 46,132 crowd at Braves Field.

Bill Dechard started the Crusaders rolling early in the second period by intercepting a Clasby pass and racing 48 yards for a touchdown. This occurred after the Eagles scored in the first period.

Shortly after, Snapperback Bill Stetter snagged a Butch Songin aerial on Boston's 17. Walt Brennan then contacted Winger Leo Troy with an 11-yard scoring toss and Kissell place-kicked the Crusaders into a 13-7 half time lead.

Halfback Maury Poissant came up with a pair of touchdowns in the third period for the Eagles—on a 1-yard smash and an 11-yard end sweep. Then the Crusaders halted two more thrusts by holding for downs on their 20 and 11-yard lines before lashing out in their own behalf.

With Brennan tossing with deadly accuracy, Holy Cross moved overhead from their 11 to Boston's 21, from where the former contacted Spare Fullback Dave Cook in the end zone on the third last play of the game.

Oregon State Romps, 28-12

Portland, Oreg., Nov. 27 (AP).—Oregon State power beat the Nebraska Cornhuskers here today, 28-12. The Staters drove to four touchdowns, and added a safety to dominate the game from start to finish.

Midway in the first period Oregon State opened up. From the Nebraska 42, Halfback Don Samuel went 10 yards around end. Next he passed to Halfback Rudy Ruppe on the 5. Fullback Dick Twenge scored from there.

A 50-yard march added another touchdown in the second quarter. Halfback Dick Gray turned in a twisting 21-yard run for the score. In the third, Samuel again maneuvered the Staters to scoring territory ,and Twenge again plunged for a touchdown.

Then Nebraska came alive. Quarterback Frank Collopy passed 20 yards to End Bob Schneider who lateralled to Fullback Don Strasheim. Strasheim raced 40 yards more to the Oregon State 20. From there, Delbert Weigand passed to Halfback Dick Hutton for a touchdown—the first play of the fourth quarter.

The Staters countered with a 68-yard march, with Carpenter slicing off tackle the final 9 yards.

Late in the game, Nebraska drove Oregon State reserves back 67 yards for the final touchdown.

Merrick Boys Rout Georgetown, Tie for Second

Paced by Bill Savannah, Merrick defeated Georgetown, 25-0, in the feature game in the 140-pound class of the Washington Boys Club yesterday at the Ellipse.

The win gave Georgetown a tie with Eastern for first place. The two teams will meet next Saturday on the Armory Field for the championship.

Savannah got Merrick off to a quick start, returning the opening kickoff 100 yards through the entire Georgetown team for a touchdown. In the second quarter he went off tackle for 80 yards and a touchdown.

The other two Merrick scores came on short plunges by Tom McCann and Kenny Divvers.

In the 105-pound class Georgetown triumphed over Stagecraft, 12-0.

Alabama Beats Florida, 34-28 As Salem Sparks Late Drive

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Trailing for three periods, Alabama placed all its hopes on a fourth period surge by Ed Salem today and he came through for a 34 to 28 victory over Florida before 25,000.

The game was an individual duel most of the way between Salem and Charley Hunsinger of Florida, but Hunsinger tasted no disgrace even in eventual defeat.

He paced the 'Gators to the front and kept them there for three bruising periods until Salem finally opened up with a 32-yard sprint inside right end for a touchdown that gave Alabama the lead early in the fourth quarter.

That was the spark the Crimson Tide needed. They quickly added another touchdown which proved the clincher.

Florida opened the game by driving 82 yards for a touchdown with Doug Belden scoring on a quarterback sneak. Alabama came back with a 46-yard drive, Left Half Gordon Pettus going over from the 3.

Florida's end, Tommy Bishop, stole the ball from Pettus on the Florida 23 to set up the second 'Gator score. Hunsinger, on the next play, raced 77 yards for a touchdown. Bill Abston scored Alabama's second after a 26-yard drive.

Russ Godwin set up the next Florida score with a 48-yard gallop. Belden passed to Hunsinger for the score. Salem went over from the 2 for the Tide's third score after a 60-yard drive.

The flying Syrian came right back and raced 32 yards for a touchdown and his best performance of the day. Charley Davis, Alabama right halfback, went over from the 8 for the Tide's last marker. On the kickoff Hunsinger ran 96 yards for a score without being touched.

Georgetown Club Lists Court Clinic

The third annual basketball clinic will be held tomorrow night at the Georgetown Boys Club at 7:30. Three members of the Washington Capitols, Bones McKinney, Johnny Norlander, and Freddie Scolari, will be instructors.

McKinney will award trophies to three local boys, Bob McLindon, George Hall, and Bucky Poston, who won top honors in the national free throw contest last year.

Six-Day Bike Races Start At Armory

Washington's 10-year-old marathon cycling famine will be over at 9 this evening when Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox shoots off the starting gun for 12 six-day bike teams at the National Guard Armory.

The event has drawn the attention of the New York bookmakers and the St. Louis betting commissioner who have established three teams as 2-1 favorites.

The three so honored are the Luxembourg-Italian combination of Gustav Kilean and Severino Rigoni, the all-Italian entry of Franco Georgetti and Primo Bergomi, and a Danish twosome, Arne Pedersen and Carl Koblauch. Kilian, Georgetti and Pedersen, coincidentally, are the only foreigners entered who can speak English.

Old-time bike race fans will remember Georgetti and Kilian as regular attractions back in the heyday of the sport in New York's Madison Square Garden. Of even riper vintage than these two will be Reggie McNamara, who first started going on wheels 35 years ago. McNamara will act as chief referee here.

The only home-grown team entered, Howard Rupprecht and George Shipman, are listed right behind the favorites at 2½-1. Louis Saen and Emile Bruneau of Belgium, who won the sixty-eighth international meet in New York in October, are considered no better than 3-1.

Roy Barnes of British West Indies, the only Negro ever to ride in modern six-day competition and also the youngest entry at 19 years old, is paired with Roger Godeau of France. Barnes hasn't faced this kind of a field yet and the team has been made the long shot at 8-1.

Pairing, nationalities and jersey numbers: (1) Howard Rupprecht and (2) George Shipman, United States; (3) Gustav Kilian, Luxembourger and (4) Severino Rigoni, Italy; (5) Arne Pedersen and (6) Carl Koblauch, Denmark; (7) Franco Georgetti and (8) Primo Bergomi, Italy; (9) Christian Van Gent and (10) Ben Remkes, Holland; (11) Jean Louis Saen and (12) Emile Bruneau, Belgium; (13) Jean Goujon and (14) Roger Le Nizerhy, France; (15) Arie Vooren and (16) Gerard Van Beek, Holland; (17) Robert La Course and (18) Laurent Tessier, Canada; (19) Robert Mignat and (20) Georges Oullier, France; (21) Rene Paquin and (22) Claude Gregoise, Canada; (23) Roger Godeau, France, and (24) Roy Barnes, Jamaica.

Harlem Stars In Court Fray

Four of the all-time all-star Harlem Globetrotters will appear tonight in Uline Arena in a professional basketball game against the Indiana Clark Twins.

Ted Syrong, Babe Pressler, Reece Tatum, and Ermer Robinson are the four. The great Harlem quintet has amassed 3038 wins against 230 defeats in 21 years of competition.

The program will include another game, between the Kansas City Stars and the Philadelphia Sphas, and a floor show headed by Jesse Owens, former Olympic sprinter.

Traditional Foes

Tulane Gives LSU Worst Beating, 46-0

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 27 (AP).—Bowl-conscious Tulane ran all over the soggy Louisiana State University Stadium field today to overwhelm its traditional foe, 46 to 0.

It was the worst beating either one of these two old rivals had ever given the other in a 45-game series. The most one-sided previous score was a 41-0 victory for LSU in 1935.

Three workhorses of the Green Wave backfield—Bill Svoboda, Bodie Price and George Kinek—started the scoring drive from Tulane's 18 early in the second period. They pushed to the Tulane 45, where a touchdown pass—Joe Ernst to Kinek—was called back for a clipping penalty. But the trio packed the drive again and Price took the ball over from the two-yard line.

The next score was set up five plays later when a pass by LSU's Charles Pevey was intercepted by Bobby Jone on the Louisiana State 20 and returned to the 4-yard line. Kinek took it over.

Tulane drove soon after the half from its own 14 to the LSU 28, where Joe Ernst tossed a pass intended for Svoboda. It bounced off him into Sheffield's hands. He juggled it, Kinek recovered and ran for the touchdown.

Another Tulane drive began almost immediately. It was climaxed when Ernst passed to Sheffield for 12 yards to LSU's 4. Svoboda pushed it over the goal line in two plays.

Volunteer Pastor Gives Eulogy

50 Baltimore Neighbors Pay Last Tribute to Hack Wilson

Baltimore, Nov. 27 (AP).—Hack Wilson started for the grave today, unnoticed by all except 50 neighbors who knew him only as a "good guy."

It was up to a Minister who volunteered his services and not the baseball world he once ruled to pay eulogy to the slugger.

"I come to pay respect to one of the most courageous spirits that ever graced this land," said the Rev. Robert Simms. "It's a long road from a coal mine to a quarter of a million dollars and back again. If you can travel that road then you have a commendable spirit."

Hack traveled that road in his 48 years, from the coal mining town of Ellwood City, Pa., to a Chicago Cub Star paid $33,000 a year and back to asking at the Baltimore City Hall for "any kind of work."

He died here Tuesday of internal hemorrhages, broke, and his body lay unclaimed for two days in the City Morgue. Friends and a few baseball fans who remembered Hack as a roly-poly diamond star offered to pay the funeral expenses. The National League finally footed the bill.

The services were in a funeral parlor a block from where Hack lived his last years as an airplane plant worker and city employee. The six floral pieces were bought by the neighbors.

Neither Hack's second wife nor his son, Bobby, attended. Baseball's representatives consisted of Herb Armstrong, Baltimore Oriole business manager, and two former players with the International League team, Merwyn Jacobson and Clayton Sheedy.

The Rev. Simms, who never knew Hack personally, recalled that Hack was the goat of the 1929 World Series by losing two fly balls in the sun.

"It took courage not ordinarily born in the heart of man to come back next year with 56 home runs," the Methodist Minister said.

The 56 homers still are a National League record and the 190 runs Wilson drove in the same year remain tops in both leagues.

Wilson's body was taken to Martinsburg, W. Va. for another service and burial there tomorrow.

Unbeaten Clemson, in 'Gator Bowl, Barely Downs Auburn, 7-6

Tigers Win 9th Straight On Late Tally

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 27 (AP).—Clemson's unbeaten Tigers came from behind today to edge Auburn, 7-6, on a muddy gridiron before 14,110 fans.

The win, Clemson's ninth in a row this year and twelfth in a two-year period, put the Tigers in the 'Gator Bowl against Missouri at Jacksonville, Fla.

Trailing 0-6 with less than seven minutes to play, Clemson hit pay dirt for the first time after an 80-yard sustained drive. Speedster Ray Mathews went off tackle from the 1-yard line for the score after setting up the touchdown with a 39-yard pass to Oscar Thompson.

Jack Miller provided the victory margin by booting the extra point from placement. It was Miller's twenty-sixth conversion in 33 attempts this year.

Auburn went for its touchdown shortly after the second quarter opened, with Zach Jenkins going over after a 12-yard sweep around left end. Langner's try for the extra point was low.

After a scoreless first quarter, Auburn took over on its own 37 as the second quarter started. A 27-yard screen pass from Weaver to Inman gained to Clemson's 35. Jenkins ran to the 25 and Russell Inman completed an 11-yard pass to Pyburn, setting the stage for Jenkins' touchdown.

Post Contest Winners Get Real Thrill

By a Post Reporter

Municipal Stadium, Philadelphia, Nov. 27.—We have to admit that The Washington Post can't take too much credit for the gorgeous weather and truly memorable game here today, but 10 Pick-the-Winners Contest victors and their guests were unanimously agreed that it was the finest prize ever awarded.

The Post party left Union Station at 9:25 a. m. on an all-Pullman special.

Fifteen-year-old Trygve Tuve, who won three contests in two years, ran true to form. The bored veteran of last year's trip avidly read his copy of Popular Mechanics. Although young Trygve is our No. 1 predictor, he hadn't been to a game all season. Trygve correctly picked Army's score, but thought Navy would get only 7.

Picks 21 for Navy

Closer was Clinton R. Tucker, sr., at 63, the oldest winner. Mr. Tucker, retired GPO employe, was the only one to pick Navy—his score was 21-13. Not bad.

When the train was all of six minutes out of Union Station, Mrs. Cora Fisher, only woman winner, confessed that she was having "a wonderful time."

It was a big day, too, for 17-year-old John B. Burcham, jr. He was squiring pretty Sally Pierson, 16, on a high-class date. Johnny said he's trying to get into the Naval Academy. The way those Middies played today, it will be hard to keep him from earning the coveted appointment.

List of Winners

Here's the complete list of winners who with their guests enjoyed a de luxe all-expense trip to what was truly a service classic:

1. James G. Timlin, 740 N. Monroe st., Arlington;
2. John B. Bupcham, jr., 4340 St. Barnabas rd. se.;
3. Dean H. Davis, 1104 Custis parkway, Falls Church;
4. J. Williams Richards, U. of Maryland, College Park;
5. Horace Hines, 1030 S. Barton st., Arlington;
6. Clinton R. Tucker, sr., 1214 Seminary rd., Silver Spring;
7. William M. Kaiser, 6003 Third st. ne.;
8. John T. Vivian, 1445 Spring rd. nw.;
9. Trygve Tuve, 135 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase;
10. Mrs. Cora Fisher, 700 S. Arlington Mill dr., Arlington.

Two for Bill Hawkins

Bill Hawkins was a big man in Navy's attack yesterday as the Middies fought to a stirring 21-21 tie with Army at Philadelphia. Left, Hawkins backs over the goal line for Navy's second touchdown as at least three Army players struggle to stop him. Reaching over two unidentified Cadets is Army's Joe Shelley (21). Right, Hawkins again as he gets set to take a short pass from Reaves Baysinger and then run for Navy's final and tying touchdown in the fourth quarter

Second Period Tally Wins

Washington State Beaten By Penn State in 7-0 Battle

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 27 (AP).—Penn State was glad to settle for a 7-0 football victory today over a Washington State College team it was expected to bury in the moist earth of the Tacoma Stadium.

Larry Cooney scooted around right end on a 17-yard fake reverse in the second quarter to score the only touchdown of the game.

The Cougars from Pullman, Wash., egged on by a partisan crowd of 18,000, checked the East Coast's Nittany Lions time and again just a breath from the goal. A WSC penalty nullified another Penn State touchdown.

At the start it looked like the Lions were out to rack up a tall score. They smashed from their own 45 to the Cougar 24 with Joe Colone doing the heavy work. Cooney took it from there on a reverse to cross the pay stripe untouched, but a holding penalty wiped out the score.

Taking the ball on downs, WSC launched its only threatening thrust of the afternoon, but got just past midfield when Tackle John Finley pounced on a fumble to give Penn State the ball.

Cooney and Frank Rogel lashed at the Cougar line in a second quarter march that carried all the way to the goal. Duplicating the play that had carried them over for the counter that failed, Cooney galloped the last 17 yards. Carl Sturges booted the extra point from placement.

From there on the Westerners fought with their backs to the wall. Late in the second quarter Penn State knocked at the touchdown door with a first down on the Cougar 4-yard line. They were pushed back 10 yards and then Torgerson came up with his goal-line interception of an Elwood Petchell pass.

Santa Clara Ties Spartans

San Francisco, Nov. 27 (AP).—Michigan State's Spartans, tremendous favorites, were held to a 21 to 21 tie by an underrated University of Santa Clara here today before 20,000 fans.

The Spartans, who had held mighty Michigan to a 13-7 win, had to come from behind twice to break even.

They started out impressively, scoring a first period touchdown when Fullback Le Roy Crane pounded through the Santa Clara line for the last four yards. It climaxed a 48-yard drive. Throughout the second quarter, however, the Broncos held control of the game and crossed the Michigan State goal line twice.

Santa Clara tied the count at 7-7 when Quarterback Billy Sheridan passed to Left End Ellery Williams, who ran 39 yards behind good blocking to score.

Just before the half, the Broncos made it 14-7 as Al Martin passed to Left Halfback Hall Hasnes, who ran 21 yards for the touchdown.

Right Halfback Everett Chandnois intercepted a Santa Clara pass and returned 19 yards to his own 35-yard marker late in the third quarter. The Spartans went from there all the way to a touchdown, scoring early in the final period.

The Broncos then put together a 70-yard drive in five plays, Sheridan passing from the 22-yard line to Williams in the end zone. Moe Chavez place-kicked his third extra point and Santa Clara was out in front, 21 to 14.

Michigan State tied it up late in the last few minutes. Quarterback Eugene Glick passed to Left End Ed Sobczak, who ran 40 yards to score. Smith made the extra point to deadlock the contest.

Tulsa Gives Detroit Scare

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 27 (AP).—A University of Tulsa team that hadn't won a game in nine starts rose out of the rain and mud today to scare the daylights out of a heavily favored Detroit before bowing, 26 to 22.

So hard pressed were the Titans in the closing minutes that Quarterback John O'Connor ran back from his own 9 to down the ball for a safety and gain precious time from the surging Tulsans.

But it was more Detroit than Tulsa in the first half. And there was where the game was won, principally on the brilliant running of Jack O'Leary, Wally Gruber and Jack Kurowski.

O'Leary ran 20 yards for the Titans' first touchdown. Gruber rambled 28 for another in the second and Kurowski plunged for 13. The fourth Detroit touchdown was engineered on a 14-yard pass play from O'Connor to Joe Wright.

Australian Net Title Won by Doris Hart

Sydney, Australia, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Loris Hart of Miami, Fla., won the new South Wales Women's Singles tennis title today when she rallied to beat Miss J. Fitch of Australia, 1—6, 6—4, 6—2.

period opened, Mitchell cut around left end 14 yards to score.

Aggies Come Back

The Aggies came back for their first score after Pearson's fumble was recovered by Ledbetter on the Sooner 33. Despite the slippery ball, Jack Hartman, the Aggies' classy passing quarterback, started tossing on fourth down, he completed a pass to Alex Loyd on the 23, then connected to Jim Long and Bill Grimes to move the ball to the 10. Two more tosses fell incomplete before Spavital picked one out of the air in the end zone after Sooner End Jim Owens touched it. Hartman made the extra point to cut the Oklahoma lead to 13-7.

The final scoring came fast and unexpected. With three minutes gone in the second half, Pearson broke loose to sprint 50 yards for a goal.

Ledbetter returned the kickoff to the Aggie 43, on the next play, Spavital, skidded past the Sooner line and went untouched the remaining distance to the goal.

Each team came out with 12 first downs. Oklahoma had 247 yards rushing and the Aggies had just three less.

West, Jackson Fight Again

Promoter Goldie Ahearn of the Liberty Athletic Club announced last night that Sonny Boy West and Stonewall Jackson had signed for a return 12-round match at Uline Arena a week from Wednesday night, December 8, for the District's lightweight championship.

West won the title when he knocked out his hometown rival in the eighth round of their scheduled 12-round fight at Uline's November 17, but Jackson demanded a return bout.

In signing for the fight, West agreed to put up the local lightweight championship belt presented to him by the Liberty Athletic Club for winning the last fight.

The match will mark the third time the two local fighters have fought. In addition to their last scrap at Uline's, they met in a 10-rounder in Baltimore last September in which Jackson pounded out a decision over Sonny Boy.

Ahearn announced that tickets for the return championship match would remain on sale for $2, $3, and $5, tax included.

GW High Ties In Cross Country

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 27.—George Washington High School of Arlington, Va., Virginia State champions, tied the Maryland State champions, Baltimore Polytechnic in the A. A. U. Southern Atlantic States High School cross country championship meet here today on the muddy Clifton Park 2-mile circuit. Each harrier team accumulated 36 points.

De Matha High Beats St. Paul's, 32 to 23

DeMatha Catholic High School of Hyattsville trounced St. Paul's Academy, 32 to 23, last night in the Merrick Boys Club gym in what was the opening of the season for both teams.

The winners were paced by Jerry O'Rourke and Bob Salter, who totaled eight and seven points respectively. At halftime DeMatha led, 11-4.

Vandy Smashes Tennessee For 7th Straight Win, 28 to 6

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 27 (AP).—The speedy Vanderbilt Commodores scored two touchdowns within 90 seconds to smash the Tennessee Volunteers, 28-6, in a thrilling Southeastern Conference game today.

The victory was Vanderbilt's seventh straight. It marked the first time the Commodores had beaten their cross-State rivals since 1937. A record crowd of 24,074 fans saw the game.

Tennessee's lone score came at the end of an 80-yard march after Vanderbilt was leading, 21-0, in the fourth period. Vanderbilt then bounced back to score again in the final minutes.

The Commodores' first score came when Herb Rich grabbed Bobby Berry's pass from the Tennessee 42-yard line and raced over for a six-pointer.

Lee Nalley—who holds the Nation's punt return record—set up Vanderbilt's second score when he carried a punt back 67 yards to the Tennessee 30. Two passes put the ball on the 4. Jamie Wade passed to Bucky Curtis for the score on the first play in the fourth quarter.

The runback upped Halley's total to 690 yards—74 more than the previous record of 616.

Seconds later Joe Hicks intercepted a pass on the Tennessee 35 and churned back to the 5. Wade scored.

W. C. Cooper sparked Tennessee's 80-yard touchdown march, racing 35 yards to Vanderbilt's 47. Passes and runs put it on Vanderbilt's 3. Ralph Chancey carried it over.

Dean Davidson's running and passing accounted for Vanderbilt's final marker late in the final period.

Touchdowners List 'Navy Day'

"Navy Day" will be observed at the Touchdown Club's weekly luncheon tomorrow when George Sauer, the Naval Academy's head coach of football, takes over as main speaker at 12:30 o'clock.

Sauer and his staff will be on hand to review yesterday's Army-Navy classic in Philadelphia in which Navy tied the Cadets 21-21.

W & M Beats Arkansas, 9-0

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 27 (AP). William and Mary utilized a bruising line and sharp punting to defeat the Arkansas Razorbacks, 9 to 0, today. The Indians punched over a third quarter touchdown and kept the Razorbacks hemmed against their own goal for the remainder of the game.

A safety scored on a blocked Arkansas punt in the fourth period merely added to the margin by which the Indians avenged a 21-9 Dixie Bowl defeat last New Year's Day.

The Razorbacks played without the injured Clyde (Smackover) Scott, Arkansas sparkplug.

A crowd of 26,000 saw William and Mary march 60 yards for the only touchdown. Fullback Jack (Flying) Cloud sliced into the end zone from a yard away following a 30-yard pass from Tommy Korczowski to Jack Bruce and an offside penalty against the Razorbacks. Buddy Lex kicked the extra point.

In the final period, Korczowski, whose kicking was William and Mary's best weapon, punted out of bounds on the Arkansas 1-foot line. Four plays later Arkansas' Harold Cox tried to punt from the same spot. Indian End Pat Haggerty blocked the ball out of the end zone for a safety.

St. Francis Wins CYO Title, 7 to 0

St. Francis de Sales captured the championship of the CYO 160-pound division yesterday by downing Holy Comforter, 7-0, on the muddy Ellipse field.

The only touchdown occurred midway in the second period when Brother Frye, Holy Comforter quarterback, received a bad pass from center in an attempt to punt from his own 5 on last down and was brought down on the 3.

Two plays later Nick Poulos crashed off tackle for the score and then skirted end for the conversion.

Poole Paces Ole Miss, 34-7

Oxford, Miss., Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Big Barney Poole said his long-delayed farewell to collegiate football here today, catching two touchdown passes to pace Mississippi to a 34-7 victory over sluggish Mississippi State.

Despite the victory, Mississippi had to doff its Southeastern Conference crown. Georgia's victory over Georgia Tech sewed up the SEC title for the Bulldogs.

Poole's first touchdown came shortly before the first half ended, on a 5-yard pass from Bobby Wilson. Mississippi already led by virtue of Billy Mustin's 52-yard spent in the first period.

Big Barney caught his last collegiate touchdown pass from Farley Salmon. Salmon pushed the ball to the 12 on a series of short bucks and then sneaked through the middle for his last touchdown.

Buck Buchanan made a journey to the end zone in the second quarter, running 28 yards with an intercepted pass. Bobby Oswalt converted all but one of the Ole Miss scores.

In the fourth quarter State scored its only touchdown, a 29-yard bee-line pass from Harper Davis to Crosby Simmons.

W. Virginia Cashes in Fumble, Beats Terps

through the middle on the Terp line trying to pick up the first down. Morton failed and the ball was awarded to Maryland.

In Goes DeGroot

DeGroot had Dropkicker Simmons ready to race in and try for a field goal at the time, but when the Terps were awarded the ball he himself rushed in and the Mountaineers were promptly fined 15 yards by the officials.

Strangely enough, the West Virginians gained their victory on the ground, not in the air where the Nation's fourth best passing team was expected to try for its triumph.

Devonshire's first touchdown, scored in the opening quarter after the Terps had bolted into a 7-0 lead, climaxed a 52-yard push. Devonshire went the last 19 alone, knocking over three Old Liner tacklers who tried to halt him.

The payoff marker was a 25-yard excursion with Devonshire again culminating the sortie. He required three licks to go over from the 1-yard line, but he made it.

Terps Score Early

Both Maryland scores were chalked up with electrifying suddenness. The first came when the game was only 2 minutes 30 seconds old. The second required exactly 42 seconds of the third quarter, coming on the first play from scrimmage following the kickoff.

Werner, whose fumble paved the way for the winning West Virginia touchdown, took a Vic Turyn handoff on the Terp 18-yard line and went all the way. The senior halfback was really highballing it when he hit the 50-yard line, but there safety-man Vic Bonfili was waiting for him. Bonfili didn't get a chance to molest the touchdown bound Werner because End Elmer Wingate rubbed him out of the way with as vicious a block as you'd ever want to see.

Bob Dean very deftly place-kicked the second of his two-extra points and the Terps were leading, 14-6, with things pretty much under control.

Twice in the first half the Mountaineers had first down and goal to go, but they couldn't make it either time. Midway the third period, Steve Stuvek reclaimed a Vic Turyn fumble for the winners on the Terp 32. A 19-yard Devonshire dash plus a fancy Jimmy Walthall to Bonfili lateral pushed to the six, where again it was first and goal to go.

Three running plays netted a 5-yard loss as Chester Gierula, Wingate and the dynamic little Bob Ward smeared the Mounties. On fourth down, however, Mr. Dropkicker Simmons swung his right foot into the ball and the score board read Maryland 14, West Virginia 9.

And that's the way it stood when the clock showed there were only two minutes and 46 seconds to go. At this stage, Werner fumbled a Turyn handoff on the Maryland 25, End Frank Reno scooped up the ball and in four plays the Mounties were on the Terps' 1-foot line with first down. The Terp line threw back two Devonshire smashes, but he slammed through center on his third effort. Simmons' dropkick for the extra point was perfect.

Johnny Idzik set up Maryland's first period score by intercepting a Walthall pass and returning it 13 yards to West Virginia's 30. On the first play, Tucker flipped a perfect toss to Jimmy Larue, who latched on to it in the end zone, only one foot away from the out-of-bounds stripe.

A break helped West Virginia to its first touchdown in the opening period. The Terps appeared to have a West Virginia drive stopped when the Mounties needed four yards for a first down on the Terp 35. Maryland, however, was offside on fourth down and West Virginia got the break it needed. Walthall pegged 16 yards to Bonfili on the first play and the irrepressible Devonshire took care of the last and most important 19 yards on the next maneuver.

Tars Whoop It Up After 21 to 21 Tie

ward to today's game. Look for further developments Monday night.

Naturally under the east side of this mammoth concrete bowl it was an entirely different story. There wasn't a peep from any of the stunned, bitterly disappointed Army players. Some of the cadet huskies cried. Even when Coach Earl Blaik told them they played a "good game" it didn't seem to help.

BLAIK SUMMED IT up better when he congratulated Sauer after the game with: "Your boys were truly wonderful today."

Blaik was extremely gracious after the game and answered the routine game questions courteously and fully. It was only when a reporter asked, "Did Army play as well as it has all year?" At that Blaik looked a bit pained.

Well, even as the wags were saying before the game started, with President Truman on Navy's side anything could happen. The presidential party didn't take its usual runout two or three minutes before the end. That's the kind of game it was.

The pregame toss took place in President Truman's box and, believe it or not, three flips were needed to decide that Navy won. The first silver dollar was dropped, the second messed up.

NAVY NEVER LOST its sense of humor. Trailing at half, 14-7, the band impertinently spelled out the score and tooted: "Give me five minutes more." The musicians started out with a red-hot version of "St. Louis Blues"—must have been for the amusement of the distinguished guest from Missouri.

There aren't 30 covered seats in this 102,000 capacity stadium, but Mr. and Mrs. Rome Schwagel were occupying two of them. And the Georgetown director of athletics, stationed right next to the press box, was loaded down with two umbrellas and raincoats.

DESPITE RINGLING BROTHERS' grandiose claim, this is still the "greatest show on earth." Amazing thing was that the huge assemblage wasn't treated like those creatures Phineas T. Barnum claimed were born every minute.

Inflation notwithstanding, chrysanthemums were selling inside for $1.50 and $2. At Washington's Union Station, vendors wanted a deuce for "mums." Other modest prices here included hog dogs at 15 cents.

Bill Hawkins, who powered Navy's final drive and fittingly scored the tying touchdown, said after the game, "Wish we could have beaten them."

PISTOL PETE WILLIAMS, cocaptain, didn't score a point but got Navy off to its start with that scintillating 59-yard run. Pete was happy enough. "We sure wrecked that platoon system, didn't we?" Williams was an inspirational figure all afternoon, limping on and off the field.

Williams, handicapped by weak ankles, was as stout-hearted as the rest of the fighting Navy crew. In fact, he tipped off the reason for Navy's showing today, when he said: "We had a murderous schedule, but if we had to do it over we'd want to play 'em all again. I don't think any club ever outfought this team."

Walker Chosen Player of Year

St. Louis, Nov. 27 (AP).—Three Notre Dame players and two from Michigan were chosen on the all-star football team selected for the Sporting News by 312 football experts, the publication announced today.

In a separate poll by the Sporting News, Doak Walker of Southern Methodist was named the outstanding player of the year.

The first team: Leon Hart of Notre Dame and Dick Rifenburg of Michigan, ends; Leo, Nomellini of Minnesota and Al Wistert of Michigan, tackles; Bill Fischer of Notre Dame and Bill Healy of Georgia Tech, guards; Charles Bednarick of Pennsylvania, center; and Walker, Charles Justice of North Carolina, Jack Jensen of California and Emil Sitko of Notre Dame, backs.

Jack Delaney, Ex-Champ, Dies

Katonah, N. Y., Nov. 27 (AP).—Jack Delaney, former light heavyweight boxing champion of the world, died at 10:45 a. m. (EST) today at his home in a rural area near here.

The cause of Delaney's death was not announced but he had been ill for several months. He underwent an operation at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York last spring. Delaney, 48, won the light heavy title by outpointing Paul Berlenbach at New York, July 17, 1926.

Carnera Faces Baxter On Arena Mat Card

Primo Carnera, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, faces villanious Laverne Baxter in the feature mat bout at Turner's Arena on Wednesday night.

The semifinal will pit Bibber McCoy, rotund Boston badman, against Pete Peterson, a newcomer from Sweden.

Legion Wins Title, 12-0

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 27. Capitalizing on one break and turning it into a touchdown and tallying another on a 35-yard run by former West Virginia University freshman star Walter Glenn, the American Legion gridders turned in a 12-0 victory over the Martinsburg Spitfires to win the city independent football championship here in a night game. Recovering a fumble on the Spitfires' 19, the Legion scored in two plays with Roger Myers bulling over from the 1 after Bobby Butler had sprinted 18 yards.

BETHESDA

NEAR SUBURBAN HOSPITAL—A miniature estate on about ½ an acre secluded by a low brick wall and a tall hedge. The main house has living room, dining room, 2 twin size bedrooms, bath and a kitchen which could have come from a "HOUSE BEAUTIFUL" photograph. This is all on the 1st floor. There is space to develop 2 large rooms and bath on 2d floor. Oil h.-w. heating plant in basement; a guest house has 3 spacious rooms, circulating oil heat, electric hot-water and offers an income situation or joint family living opportunity. Another building about 20x30 with 18 in. concrete walls, circulating oil heat, offers possibility for a studio or even development of a tiny cottage. A fourth building suggests hobby room such as workshop or photography. A root cellar 12x24 has 18-in. concrete walls and would convert into a garage. All this property is of the soundest construction with slate roofing and beautiful clapboard. The main house is in immaculate new-house condition and the auxiliary buildings have a wide variety of potential development value.

*A*T HER coming-out tea on Thanksgiving Day Miss Betsie Bassett and her mother, Mrs. Alfred E. Bassett, received beneath a portrait of the debutante's great grandmother, Mrs. William J. Stone. Grandparents of Miss Bassett who attended the party are Judge and Mrs. Kimbrough Stone of Kansas City. The bud was dressed in white moire with flowers of pale pink pink shaded into white, and her mother wore rose beige lace pinned with orchids*

But Christmas Is Coming—

Holiday Enchantment Broken, Debutantes Turn Back to School

By Marie McNair

NOVEMBER DEBS, having made their bows, are off to school again until Christmas.

The holidays ended yesterday with pretty Elenore DeWitt Townsend's debut tea and a dinner dance last night for that pair of charmers, Helen and Amie Willard. Mr. and Mrs. John William Townsend presented their daughter to their friends; some of the young group were there, too—at their home on Lowell st. The party for Helen and Amie Willard at the Chevy Chase Club was given for them by their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Willard 2d and was a pleasant prelude to their actual debut tea on December 28.

In all white, her mother in blue, Miss Townsend held an old-fashioned bouquet in a frilled lace paper holder, as she stood to greet the guests.

Frock Combines Marquisette and Lace

HER FROCK combined marquisette and lace, the dropped shoulder bodice edged in a lace bertha sprinkled with sequins, the marquisette skirt made with a sequin-trimmed tunic bordered in lace. Mrs. Townsend's gown was of pale blue crepe and a purple orchid was fastened to her shoulder.

Virginia Wetherill, who'll be a debutante next season, was there to assist. Others in the young group asked to help were Miss Elizabeth Anne Kline, and Miss Mary Woodward, and the debutante's two sisters-in-law, Mrs. John Townsend, jr., of Williamstown, Mass., and Mrs. Charles Townsend, of the District.

At the candlelit buffet table, a dozen or more of Mrs. Townsend's friends took their turn at the tea and coffee services. Mrs. William Palmer Townsend and Mrs. Charles S. Eby, grandmothers of the debutante, were assisting and others included Mrs. Richard F. Boyce, Mrs. William Foster Burdick, Mrs. Paul E. Haworth.

Mrs. J. Craig King, Mrs. Robert E. Kline, jr., Mrs. H. Chester Merwin, Mrs. Stewart McDonald, Mrs. E. Barrett Prettyman, Mrs. James Craig Peacock, Mrs. J. Frank Steele, Mrs. South Trimble, jr., Mrs. Roland Walsh, Mrs. John Price Wetherill 3d and Mrs. William F. Weigester.

Willard Debs Go Back to School

MR. AND MRS. William B. Willard's debutante daughters are hitting it back to school today—Helen to Pine Manor and Amie to Sweet Briar.

But last night the picture looked different. Dining and dancing at the Chevy Chase Club, Helen was in a green taffeta frock with underskirt of deep blue, and Amie swishing gray taffeta over bouffant pink tulle around the ballroom floor.

At the party were Miss Joan Davis, here from Pine Manor; Miss Virginia Wetherill, Miss Patty Emory, Miss Agnes Dunn, Miss Adrian Dunn, Miss Frances Gore Haynes, Miss Sherrard Marthinson, Miss Cornelia Langer. And their beaux? Well, there were Leroy Morgan, William Emory, Abram Claude, jr., Scott Birnie, Dana Belser, John Gill, Hayward Siddons, Colt De Wolf, Stewart

Miss Baker Is Wed to Mr. Beavers

SOCIETY yesterday attended the wedding of Miss Patricia Fairfield Baker and Charles Gaylord Beavers, jr., at St. John's Church on Lafayette Square. The Rev. C. Leslie Glenn officiated at the 5 o'clock ceremony and a reception followed at the Sulgrave Club.

Mrs. Beavers is the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Charles A. Baker of Washington, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gaylord Beavers of New York City and Bellport, Long Island.

St. John's Church was decorated in white flowers and greens for the all-white wedding. The bride wore white velveteen and carried calla lilies. Her attendants, who also were gowned in white velveteen, carried ivy.

Miss Marilyn Himes was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Peter Murphy of New Canaan, Conn., sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. Henry Atherton of Warrenton, Mrs. Samuel Dunham of Haverford, Pa., and Mrs. Jesse Spaulding of New York City.

Beekman V. Beavers was best man. Ushering were Peter Wall of Westbury, Long Island; Peter Murphy, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Robert Herman of St. Louis; William Walther of Sayville, Long Island, and Costello Branco.

Mr. Beavers attended Princeton. During the war he served in the Pacific as a naval aviator. Mrs. Beavers was graduated from Holton-Arms.

After a honeymoon in Nassau, the couple will reside in New York City.

Diplomatic Circling

By Elizabeth Maguire

NEWS ITEMS on diplomats last week were principally parties and personalities. Wines of every Nation made a week of special degustation, and the food problem seemed solved as FAO delegates entertained daily.

Last week's "6 to 8" parties included French wines, Portuguese wines, Swiss wines, Chinese wines and so on. Had the Soviet Union been a member of FAO, Soviet wines would have been served, perhaps, in place of vodka.

THE PINHOE BAZAAR will be held this week at the British Embassy on Wednesday. Same day some 400 will be entertained at a reception at the French Embassy, following a concert in the evening at Constitution Hall by the Orchestre National of France.

Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, and Margaret Thors, are leaving Paris by plane on Tuesday, and will be in Washington before the weekend. The Minister is remaining in Paris until the close of U. N.

A LUNCHEON was held at the Italian Embassy on Friday in honor of the Italian Minister of Agriculture, Segni Antonio. The Ambassador, Alberto Tarchiani, was host. Guests included the Secretary of Agriculture, Charles Franklin Brannan, the chairman of FAO, Norris Dodd, George McGhee and Wayne Chatfield Taylor.

CHARLES DE WATER, visiting Ambassador-at-large from the Union of South Africa, was honored at a luncheon on Friday at the British Embassy, the Ambassador, Sir Oliver Shewell Franks, acting as host.

IN 1917 the Finns gained their independence from Russia. Tomorrow there will be a reception at the Legation in celebration of the occasion. Artturi Lehtinen, commercial counselor of the Finnish Legation, is giving a cocktail party on Wednesday.

The ceremony at 3:30 took place in St. Matthew's Cathedral with the Rev. David Dorsch officiating. A reception followed at the Officers Club at Fort McNair.

Talk of 'Good Old Days' Makes Post Pages of Past Turn Over in the Morgue

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

NOW THAT Thanksgiving is safely past without a declaration of war or undue pestilence, it's reassuring to learn our problems are little different than those faced a generation ago. Here's a skimming of headlines from The Washington Post day-after-Thanksgiving issue back in 1891. "Will the Church Split? Dr. Sunderland intimates it is drifting toward Discord Rocks"—"Yale men defeat Princeton Tigers in a Brilliant Game"—"Bank crash in Berlin"—"Spying on Britain's Premier Lord Salisbury; Head Servant an Italian Priest in Disguise; Recognized by a Lady Guest"—"To lay Siege to Pekin; A Victorious Mongolian Force Advancing on the Chinese Capital." The account which followed began: "The Chinese Army is in better condition than ever but the government does not seem sure of its loyalty. Should any disaffection gain ground among the troops in Manchuria where the flower of the army is stationed to watch the movements of Russia the chances for the dynasty would be almost hopeless"—"Brides Stolen Away; Constantinople; Twenty-four Brides Ruthlessly Torn from their Husbands by Bands of Warlike Kurds"—"Is Roosevelt to Go?" Not much difference between 1891 and 1948

A Displaced VIP, You Might Say

MISS LOUISE PICQUETTE ALEXANDER, great-great-granddaughter of James Hoban, Irish architect who designed the White House, has had a terrible time finding a suitable apartment. "I wish," said Miss Alexander, who's extremely pretty, "that my great-great-grandfather had built an apartment house instead of the White House—then I'd have a place to live!" The four Alexanders, children of Edward R. Alexander and the late Mrs. Alexander, were brought up in a large house, 1533 New Hampshire ave., which was sold some time ago. Most of the furnishings, including a famous portrait of George Washington, are now in Mr. Alexander's handsome residence, Sterling Haven, at East Hampton, Long Island. The portrait, personally given by our first President to his friend Hoban, used to be the focal point of an annual ceremony. Mr. Hoban, in later life, summered in a cottage on the Soldiers' Home property opposite Rock Creek Cemetery. Each July Fourth he gave a large reception, placing the portrait on an easel, flanked by candles, on the front porch. As guests arrived they invariably bowed courteously to President Washington's likeness. There are five Alexanders, direct descendants of the architect through their mother, the former Louise Hoban. Mrs. John Meem Carter lives in Philadelphia; Mrs. Robert Conklin, Edward, jr. (known as Tommy), and James are now New Yorkers. James, who's somewhat of a genius at building boats, spends much time in East Hampton and hopes that while the White House repairs are under way, he'll be able to acquire a piece of the original lumber. During the war Louise Alexander managed Mostyn House, the USO headquarters in London. Part of her job was billeting hundreds, even thousands of transients in an overcrowded, war-torn city. Yet so far she's been unable to discover a Washington billet for herself and her many belongings.

Distinguished New Diplomat

A DISTINGUISHED addition to Washington's Diplomatic Corps is G. C. S. Corea, first Ambassador from Ceylon. Graduate of Colombo's Law College, he's combined a legal career with politics and since 1946 has been Ceylon's High Commissioner to London and a member of the United Nations Organization. His three boys and Mme. Corea, who is still in London, will come to Washington early next year, when the new embassy, on 30th st., just off Massachusetts ave., will be ready. The Ambassador ate his first Thanksgiving dinner with Edward Dahl, who heads the State Department's South Asian Affairs, and Mrs. Dahl, who spent much of her early life in Ceylon. The Dahls own one of the most amusing bars in town. It's a basement room which they revamped themselves with beaverboard, deep ochreish paint. They even made frames for lowslung divans and other furniture oddments. The wall in back of the wooden bar originally was blank but now is inscribed with bon mots in the most varied assortment of curious

By Accident or Stroke of Fate, Matron Fell In Love With Another Man Four Years Ago; How Control Feelings and Erase Triangle?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I like the way you look at both sides of a problem and I hope you can help me with mine. I am sure a doctor couldn't, unless he cut my heart out; and it's useless to explain that I'm a darn fool. I know that, but it doesn't change matters.

I am married and so is Ken, and we are not married to each other. Even so, we have been in love for three years; or to be exact, I fell in love with him four years ago, and after a year he discovered my secret and found that he loved me, too.

We both tried to fight it, because we are devoted to our respective families and don't want to hurt them; but our love is just something that happened, we couldn't escape it, and now it is a source of more pain than happiness.

There was nothing wrong with my life, I wasn't unhappy nor was I trying to escape from anything, when I fell in love with Ken; and I am sure the same could be said of him. It was quite by accident—or a stroke of fate—that this love developed and dawned on us. And we are in our thirties, even if we do sound childish.

Unhappy Liaison Full of Conflict

I MAY SAY without exaggeration that I've gone through hell, loving Ken; but I go right on loving him; and we haven't "wronged" our respective families, except in having this love and guarding the secret from them. We've stuck it out, stayed on the job with our respective partners, trying to make them happy, because we feel we shouldn't make them suffer for something they didn't provoke.

However, my strength isn't equal to this sort of thing indefinitely; so what should we do? Should we go on "as is," being unhappy ourselves to make others happy? If we married each other, we wouldn't be "changing for better"—our present partners are nice—we would simply be changing for each other, for love, for the happiness of being together.

Why do things like this happen? Are we being punished by life for something we don't know about? Please let me have your hard-hitting advice; I'll try to accept it and end the suspense.

E. V.

Wretched Bondage Spun of Neurosis

DEAR E. V.: To paraphrase Shakespeare, "Love is not love which brings harvest of pain rather than joyous composure of feeling." What goes on here is that Ken is reacting in kind to your neurotic idealization of him.

As for why you idealize him, who knows? Certainly you have no explanation for it; nor does he; which proves that the wretched bondage isn't woven of the substance of bonafide love.

In real love, the plain truth of each other's personality is recognized and respected. There is an honest unstudied "meeting of minds." A friendly free interchange of ideas and interweaving of interests flows spontaneously, and an overall feeling of security and contentment characterizes thoughts of each other, when apart, and devotional attitudes towards each other when together.

Their Real Love Anchored at Home

IT STRIKES me that you and Ken simply haven't got the gumption, the educated understanding or maturity of feeling, to know what real love is. But to some extent both of you have experienced it already (and unknowingly), in its nourishing serviceable aspects, in relation to your respective partners, to whom you stick like leeches for emotional security, and not, as you think, from a sense of duty.

Some writer has likened lust to a tiger; and in all probability what you and Ken have been fighting against is the tiger-element in your respective psyches. Doubtless both of you have, at least unconsciously, a pretty rampant yen for pagan carousal; and I daresay your assumption of affinity boils down to tacit recognition of kindred difficulty on this level.

However, each of you is constrained, involuntarily, to keep faith, more or less, with civilized patterns of behavior, for fear not only of public censure, but also in worse fear of loosening the tiger lest it destroy all the "would-be-good" qualities in your mind and soul. Prayer and the guidance it brings, in literal ways, afford the only real out from the plight you're in; and if habit of prayer is unfamiliar to you, get a copy of Emmet Fox's book, "Make Your Life Worthwhile," which teaches dynamic practise of it.

One, Two, Buckles For You, Three, Four, Uses Galore

IT'S FASHIONABLE to wear buckles on your shoes this year, and for that matter almost any place you can hang 'em.

Try stitching a buckle to your lapel—one that matches your belt buckle. You can remove the tongue or let it wag, whichever looks best in the particular case. Sewing the buckle on a piece of ribbon makes it easy to handle and gives a touch of color if you want it.

On a beret or casual hat, or attached to a purse that's in need of renovating, they can be worth their weight. As substitutes for buttons on the front of a jacket they are attractive, especially if they have little bands of colored ribbon holding them in place.

Prettiest way to show off antique silver shoe buckles is to thread them on a black velvet ribbon and wear it through your hair.

The Service Set

Visiting Army Leaders Too Busy for Many Parties

By Norma Lanum

ARMY-NAVY football game parties and predictions and Thanksgiving Day observances and dinners are put away for another year and now Washington's service society may devote its full energy to Christmas holiday entertaining.

A glance at the military set's datebook reveals several large parties and weddings in the offing for the next few weeks.

Monday evening the Army's top commanding officers will be entertained at a reception to be given by Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley at their quarters at Fort Myer..

The Army commanders are in Washington on a "strictly business" mission; to confer with their Chief of Staff. But there have been a few parties slated for them.

The visitors include Lieut. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges, commander of the First Army with headquarters in New York; Lieut. Gen. L. T. Gerow, commander of the Second Army in Baltimore; Lieut. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, jr., commander of the Third Army at Atlanta; Gen. Thomas Handy, commander of the Fourth Army at San Antonio; Lieut. Gen. Stephen J. Chamberlin, commander of the Fifth Army in Chicago; Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Sixth Army at San Antonio, and Lieut. Gen. Jacob J. Devers, chief of Army Ground Forces with headquarters at Fort Monroe, Va.

And also attending the party will be Gen. J. Lawton Collins, vice chief of staff, and Lieut. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, deputy chief of staff. Their wives will be there, too, so will General Clark's mother, Mrs. C. C. Clark.

Party for Gen., Mrs. Devers

THIS EVENING General and Mrs. Devers will be guests of honor at a small party to be given by Col. and Mrs. James V. Cole at their quarters at Fort Myer where the colonel is commanding officer.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Clinton F. Robinson will be hosts to several of their friends at a cocktail party Tuesday at the Officers Club at Fort McNair.

And then on Friday the Army's Quartermaster Corps officers have been invited to attend the dinner and dance at the Mayflower Hotel to be given by the D. C. Chapter of the Quartermaster Association.

Heading the receiving line will be Maj. Gen. Thomas B. Larkin, chief of the Quartermaster Corps, and Mrs. Larkin. And the guests will also be introduced to Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Herman Feldman, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. W. M. Middlesward, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Kester Hastings, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. H. B. Hester and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Letcher O. Grice

Incidentally, the Quartermaster Association's membership includes civilians, too, whose job it is to clothe and find quarters for large organizations. The D. C. Chapter, headed by Col. A. W. Beeman, has approximately 1800 members.

Also on Friday the Omar Bradleys are entertaining at a small dinner party.

SATURDAY NIGHT will be an exciting one for many service people here. That's the night of Secretary of Defense and Mrs. James Forrestal's large reception at the Larz Anderson House and the Gordon Grays' dance. And in addition Maj. Gen. Edmond H. Leavy, Comptroller of the Army, and Mrs. Leavy will have a cocktail party at their home. The honor guest will be Lieut. Gen. Sir Kenneth N. Crawford who is stopping in this city on his way back to England from a tour of the Pacific.

Among the several guests from United States and British military staffs will be General Crawford's companions on his journey, Col. G. E. R. Bastin and Lieut. Col. D. B. J. Darbey.

Another party is planned by Col. and Mrs. Remmington Orsinger for Saturday evening. Col. and Mrs. Hoel Bishop, jr., will entertain on Sunday, the 5th, at a cocktail party at their Fort McNair quarters.

OF PARTICULAR interest to the military society are the approaching marriages of Miss Mary Faith Craig to Lieut. Wilber Lewis Hall, jr., and of Miss Mary Frances Anderson to Maj. Edmond Harrison Leavy, jr., of Hammondsport, N. Y.

Miss Craig, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Louis Aleck Craig, will become a bride on December 11 at the Chapel at Fort Myer. She's the granddaughter of the late Col. and Mrs. Louis Aleck and niece of the late Gen. Malin Craig, former Army Chief of Staff.

Major Leavy's wedding to Miss Anderson will take place on December 17 in the Chapel of Fitzsimmons General Hospital, Denver, Colo. He is the son of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. E. H. Leavy, and his bride-elect is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Sam William Anderson of Denver. She attended the University of Georgia where she was president of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority and the Pan Hellenic Society. She also was listed in Who's Who In American Colleges and Universities.

Major Leavy, a graduate of West Point, class of 1942, is attending the Colorado School of Mines in Golden. The newlyweds will live in Golden until June.

General and Mrs. Leavy will leave on December 12 to attend their son's wedding.

Booth of Boston performed the ceremony.

The bride was graduated from Vassar College, where she was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and president of the Vassar Music Club. During the war she spent two years with the American Red Cross in Europe and later served as special assistant to the former United States Ambassador, Ray Atherton, in Ottawa.

A member of the United States Foreign Service, the bride more recently has been divisional assistant in the Division of British Commonwealth Affairs of the Department of State.

Don't Forget Wounded Veterans

LEST WE FORGET the sick, the lonely and the forgotten boys at Walter Reed; Mrs. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton, one of the prettiest of Red Cross Gray Ladies, is asking for contributions to make it a happy Christmas day in the wards. The Gray Ladies are planning to have coffee parties with cake, nuts and candy, beginning on the morning of Christmas Eve, and continuing through the day, with gifts to be unwrapped that night around lighted Christmas trees.

A plump and jolly Santa Claus in person will make the rounds in Mrs. Hamilton's ward. "Please," says Norah Hamilton, earnestly, "give just a little so that we may have enough for all those boys out there. They need it now more than ever before.

On the fateful night in Independence, Mo., the President's daughter stayed by the telephone for direct wire results. She appeared in a new black crepe frock and black ballet slippers laced to her ankles.

When she appeared in print the next day she wore a house coat and bedroom slippers.

Children Come First

When giving a dinner party, by all means feed the children at their regular time and have them either in bed or upstairs at their lessons when the guests arrive. Not only is it confusing to combine children and grownups, but the hour is later than the children are used to and they are apt to be hungry, tired and irritable by the time dinner is served.

He'll Be Proud of You in These Party-Pretty Holiday Frocks

For the Extra Pennies Spent You Will Earn a Compliment

By Peggy Preston

THE woman who economizes on a formal evening dress usually lives to regret it. For where can a girl and a gown shine better than at a festive after-dark gathering, surrounded by the gentlemen, bless 'em, who like their glamour in large doses—but in the proper place and time?

It isn't often we get an opportunity to enjoy the undivided attention of the men in our lives. But at partytime they're apt to put aside their preoccupation with business affairs to glance appraisingly at the women around them. Be it husband, father, son, brother or beau—it is a wise woman who sees to it that she is at her prettiest when this hour arrives. For dad likes to be proud of his women, even though he does grumble a bit when the bills come in.

Every woman knows how important it is to feel the thrill that comes with looking pretty for a party. She seeks to capture it first as a little girl in white organdy and a satin sash; and she never ceases longing for it.

The dazzling effect she wants to create depends on special work and forethought. There must be a deal of extra creaming, brushing, bathing. And, of course, the right dress. Never risk an unbecoming frock. Yours may be old and a little out of style, but if you have picked it carefully in the first place, it will always look well on you.

Leading the Parade

WITH the holiday season approaching, feminine thoughts are wandering toward party clothes in expectant fashion. Everyone from grandma to 10-year-old Sarah Jane has a date on her calendar when she "simply must" look extra special. Jean Spadea, The Washington Post's fashion artist, has obliged by selecting the right dress for everyone. On this page, she depicts the entire family circle of girls, showing them in their party best.

Grandmother leads the parade in Sketch A. She's definitely on the handsome side, with her snowy hair and carefully cared-for skin. During the winter she likes to frequent far-South resorts where she wears evening clothes a great deal of the time. She enjoys them enormously—far more than her family thinks. Being a style-wise lady, she prefers her formal gowns to have long sleeves (after 50 a woman's arms are at their best when covered, she'll tell you). Here she is wearing one of her favorites, made of chantilly lace in a soft, smoky shade. Anna Duke designed it for non-girlish figures and "Granny" is a knockout in it.

When Mother Goes Formal

IT isn't often that mother gets done up in evening dress. Most of her evenings are spent with friends at their home or hers. Often she starts out in a festive frock late in the afternoon and wears it on to dinner. Four or five times a year, maybe, she and dad take on a really formal evening.

When mother decides to invest in a new gown it must be suitable for any season and remain in style for years. If this is The Year to Buy One, she would do well to select the one in Sketch B. Made of chiffon, newly revived, it is soft of line, graceful of fabric. The full skirt is navy blue, the camisole bodice of mauve. A tracery of jewels circles the empire waistline and neck of the mauve capelet. Next summer she can cover the brilliants with bands of flowers.

Debutante in Dreamy White

SHE'S 18—and a debutante! If ever Sister is to look and feel elegant it is now, right this night, this minute. At her coming-out dance she'll be dreamy in white, which always demands attention from the stag line. Ceil Chapman designed the beauty in Figure C. The contrast of tight little crystal-beaded bodice and billowing froth of tulle skirt is just right.

Patty, at 14, in Sketch E, is off to a party with her own gang. And pretty precious she is, too, in a gay rayon taffeta. She could have had it in Christmas red, but chose Christmas green, the better to bring out the lights in her sparkling eyes. It's an American Debuteen, sizes 8 to 16.

With everyone in such a panic of parties, Patty is left with the job of dressing little sister. Miss Mischief wears a crisp, lace-trimmed organdy with ribbon belt to match the bow in her hair.

And they're off—the girls dad is so proud of!

VIP, for Very Important Posture: Tight, nipped-in midriffs are all-important in evening fashions for 1948-49. So walk straight and tall, or you won't do justice to your new dress

FOR holiday hops, 20-year-old Deirdre, at right, will find this white satin parfait among her favorite Bonray dance frocks. It can be worn with or without shoulder straps, but the young set likes it "without"

Where Silhouettes Are Done Locally

I would like to have head silhouettes made of my four children and have inquired at several local photographers, but none do this work. Can you or any of your readers tell me where I can have them made in Washington? P. N. R.

At least one local photographer makes silhouettes by a photographic process. This firm can be reached by telephoning National 8700. Perhaps some reader will have a suggestion on where you can have silhouettes of the youngsters cut from paper and mounted on a contrasting background.

I noticed a request in your column the other day for a Hungarian recipe for stuffed cabbage. My mother came from what is now called Czechoslovakia, and the following recipe is hers. She never used onion in it, but I use a dash of onion salt if I'm cooking the dish with tomatoes. Never bake stuffed cabbage.

Stuffed Cabbage
1 head cabbage (large)
1½ pounds ground beef
½ pound ground pork
½ cup uncooked rice
1 egg
Salt and pepper
Sauerkraut or tomatoes

Remove core from cabbage. Place in a deep pan and cover with boiling water. Do not cook. Mix beef, pork, rice, egg (substitute evaporated milk for this if you wish), salt and pepper. Place spoonful of mixture on each cabbage leaf. Roll leaf over filling, and turn under ends to hold secure. Place extra cabbage leaves in bottom of pan, then a thin layer of sauerkraut, then the stuffed cabbage. When all the cabbage rolls are in, cover with more sauerkraut and cabbage leaves. Add 1½ cups water and cook slowly, covered, about 2 hours. Those who prefer a sweet taste can cook with canned tomatoes instead of sauerkraut. But, in my opinion, stuffed cabbage isn't the real thing unless it's cooked in sauerkraut and made with both beef and pork. A. V. S.

PETUNIA!

My cutlery box
Is a knick-knack shelf.

(P.S.: I made it all myself!)

Good idea for gifts, too, Petunia! Just paint a partitioned silverware box . . . hang it from ribbons . . . and there you are!

A bottle of orange soda pop was spilled on my gray, wool-twist rug. Repeated use of a commercial shampoo has failed to remove the stain completely. Can you suggest a remedy? V. C. L.

Probably the use of a bleach is the only process which has a chance of removing the stain now. Dampen the area and apply a saturated solution of oxalic acid. (Oxalic acid is poisonous, so handle accordingly.) Rinse thoroughly by sponging with a cloth wrung out of clear water. Be sure to test the effect of the oxalic acid on an inconspicuous part of the rug before applying to the stain. The treatment may be repeated if the stain is not completely removed and the color of the rug is unaffected by the first treatment.

How can I safely clean or launder a baby's pink, rayon-lined corduroy bonnet without losing the stiffening in the brim? V. F.

If the stiffening in the brim is a high grade buckram or heavy linen, dry cleaning may not remove it. However, if the lining is a lightweight fabric stiffened entirely by a sizing or a starch-like substance, the stiffness would be completely removed by washing and probably would be partially removed by dry cleaning. It seems there is no way to clean it which would not remove this type of stiffening. My only suggestion would be to have the bonnet dry cleaned and if the brim is then too limp, remove the lining and replace the stiffening with stiff tailor's linen or a good grade of buckram which can be purchased in most yards good departments.

What is the process for concealing cigarette burns on maple finished furniture? V. C. L.

Rub a fine abrasive such as rottenstone or powdered pumice mixed with oil into the burn. Do not get it into the area surrounding the burn and rub with the grain of the wood. When you have removed as much of the discoloration this way as possible, wipe the surface clean with a cloth dampened in oil and polish the entire surface.

What kind of paint should I use for designs on inexpensive molded plastic boxes, and where can I get it? E. J. A.

Use artist's paint which comes in small tubes and is sold at paint stores carrying artists' supplies.

Will you explain what the hosiery terms "gauge" and "denier" mean? C. M.

A textile expert with whom I discussed your question says that the term "gauge" refers to the number of vertical stitches to each crosswise inch. However, he added that the term gauge can be misleading because two stockings with the same gauge can be very different in sheerness and firmness depending upon how the machine upon which they were knit controlled the pull on the thread. To explain this he used as an example two hand knitters, knitting on the same garment. One may knit loosely and obtain a softer, more open product, while the other knits tightly and her product is much firmer. Therefore, a loosely knit hose would be sheerer and less firm than one with the same gauge which was knit tighter. Because the term gauge can be misleading, he suggests you examine the hose for firmness as well as sheerness, the firmer knit hose being the one which would give the best wear.

Denier is a more accurate measure of sheerness than gauge because it is a measure of the diameter or weight of the thread used. The lower the denier, the sheerer the stocking.

S O S! I am about to paint some bookcases and am interested in the linseed oil and pumice powder that you recommended previously for cutting down the gloss. However, you never mentioned whether to mix the two and apply or to use separately. D. E. Y.

The application of pumice and oil has been discussed in detail in the column, but apparently you missed it. Place the pumice in a flat container, such as a saucer, and the oil in another similar container. Now, touch a flat surface of the soft rubbing cloth to the oil and then to the pumice, shaking to remove any loose pumice. Rub this directly onto the wood.

I have some material left over from some drapes and I wish to cover pillows with it to make an ensemble. However, I do not have the throw pillows. Is there any store where muslin-covered pillows may be purchased, or shall I have to pay the high price for the ones already finished. D. E. Y.

The pillow departments in several department stores sell muslin-covered pillows in various sizes.

Modern Girls Lose Tiny Waistlines

Have you ever tried on a dress that your grandmother wore? Chances are you couldn't get into it. The waistline was too tiny, the blouse was too tight and the skirt stopped at the ankles instead of sweeping to the floor.

Women's figures have changed astonishingly since 1873, the year the Womah's Home Companion first appeared. In its anniversary issue the Companion says the modern girl is taller and more slender but weighs several pounds more than her grandmother did.

Today's glamour girl has a large waist and a bigger chest expansion, but through the past 75 years the shoulders haven't changed—they measure the same.

Principal causes for these changes says the Companion are a freer style of dress, increased interest in sports, more abundant food and a faster pace of living.

All Set for the Morning With Pre-Cooked Food

If your family likes a cooked meal in the morning and you like to stay in bed as long as you can and make the grade comfortably, you will be wise to cook the cereal at night in the double boiler while supper is being eaten. Next morning it needs only to be reheated and everyone is pleased.

Tiresome Bed-Making Can Be Much Less So

At least 4 miles of walking and 25 hours of time is spent a year in making just one bed by the common household method.

Those figures are from the Indiana Experiment Station, which has been doing a bit of research on this everyday chore. The many trips around the bed which the housewife takes in making it are the reason this task is longer and more tiresome than necessary, they say.

To cut the distance from 4 miles to about a mile and a fifth and the time from 25 hours to less than 16, the station suggests the following method: Make up one side of the bed completely, then tuck it in at the foot, and finish the other side with no return trips involved.

Tips on Plastic Tape for Home Handymen

Some amateur home handymen may be glad to hear of these uses of cellophane tape to help him with his tasks: To prevent plywood from splitting, for example, put a strip of cellophane tape along the line to be sawed. Children's school kits will last much longer if mended and reinforced with the tape.

ADMIRING part of the Pinhoe Bazaar's large and varied "stock" of goods, are the Misses Mary Evans of Los Angeles (left) and Beverly Pearson of Norfolk, Va. Beverly, who was presented at Court last year when her father, Captain John B. Pearson, was Naval Attache at the American Embassy in London, has her eye on a fitted overnight bag that would come in handy when she goes back to England this summer

Public Invited to See Embassy at Pinhoe Bazaar

Of the thousands who pass the British Embassy on Massachusetts ave., few have had the opportunity or going through the gates surmounted by the lion and the unicorn. But next Wednesday, when the Ambassador and Lady Franks open the embassy for the third Pinhoe bazaar, guests will be ushered up the stairway, flanked by portraits of British royalty, and into the great drawing rooms where the benefit is being held.

Aids Community Fund

Gaily decorated booths are to be set up along the walls the day before, members of the committee there with crates and boxes of Christmas articles, all to be sold and proceeds turned over to the Pinhoe Community Center Fund.

Brentano's has the book stall featuring books for children and all the best sellers. So if books are on your Christmas lists they are to be found at the bazaar. Perfumes and cosmetics, fascinating overnight bags, other leather articles, the new ascot scarves direct from Fifth ave., neckties for men, togs for tots, pipes and smoker's accessories, silk hose in all the new shades, British and French magazines, Christmas cards and calendars, everything to answer your gift problems.

Packages Will Be Sent

The AWVS will arrange to dispatch overseas packages. Joan Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gardner, will have charge of the toys, games and dolls, the booth which her mother ran so efficiently at last year's bazaar. And one of the drawing cards at this miniature toyland will be the doll donated by Mrs. Truman. Guests will have the chance of naming her, dropping their suggestions in a ballot box. Only the committee knows her right name, but she will be awarded to some lucky winner of the doll quiz.

Mrs. E. Taylor Chewning, jr., has taken over chairmanship of the junior committee, members of which are Mrs. William R. Merriam, Mrs. Allen Gullion, Miss Helen Harrison, Miss Louise Hamilton, Miss Marion Norris, Miss Mildred Dunn, Mrs. Lewis McCracken, Mrs. Edward A. Mitchell, jr., and Mrs. Townsend Hoops. They and a group of attractive students from Mount Vernon Seminary will serve as "sales ladies" for the day.

Mrs. Dunnaway Licklider, chairman of the food booth which members of the Women's City Club have organized, promises Virginia hams ready to bake for the holidays, cakes, sweets and other tempting specialties.

The embassy is to be open from 10 in the morning until 8 in the evening and everyone is welcome.

Guests jot witticisms, soft sentiments in chalk and Ed Dahl later traces them in white paint. Mme. Forever thy memory will remain in my heart." In Shan, Burmese Third Secretary U Khin chalked "Grains of rice are falling along the road"—in other words, "Life's getting short—don't miss a trick!" In Burmese: "Blankets cannot produce glowing warmth, but love will!"—The Burmese, incidentally, will soon move into their new embassy which was formerly the Bulgarian Legation. And there's a new baby boy, the fourth child, to Burmese Ambassador and Mme. U So Nyun.

THIS AND THAT—At last St. John's Church is to have an adequate rectory. Miss Helen Louise Sargent, one of Mount Vernon's directors who died a few weeks ago, willed her Farragut Square house to St. John's. Daughter of a naval officer, she had lived many years just a few doors from the Army and Navy Club, her handsome home changing little with the times. Miss Edith Newlon entertained a small group of friends at a dessert-bridge at her apartment in The Morrow, State Circle, on Thursday evening, in honor of Miss Mary Alice Klein, whose marriage to Edward Brownley Owens of Portsmouth, Va., will take place on December 18 in St. Anne's Church.

Holiday Decorations

HERE are some low-cost decoration ideas for the Christmas season which are easy to make and smart because they are simple. Copy them for your front door, buffet or mantel, says Better Homes & Gardens magazine.

A pair of soap-flake boxes filled with snow-laden spruce clippings and covered with red and green crepe paper makes an attractive display. Cover one topless soap-flake box with red paper and the other with green. Fill the boxes with crumpled chicken wire or pliable shrubbery branches. Submerge spruce branches in a large pan or tub of water for a few hours. Then arrange them in the boxes. Wire Christmas balls onto plain sticks and place the balls in the boxes at an angle. To make snow on the spruce, beat one cup of soap flakes with two tablespoons of water until fluffy. Dab snow on the branches with a medium-sized paintbrush.

Green Christmas trees—with trunk and trim—are easy to make from a ball of sphagnum moss wired to the top of a branch.

Cut an evergreen branch 16 inches long. Place it in a small flower pot with stones around it. Pour a thin mortar made from equal parts of cement or patching plaster and sand over the stones. Shake the stones so the mortar runs down to the bottom of the pot. After it has hardened, put an inch of sandy soil over the cement so the tree looks more natural.

Make a five-inch ball of dampened sphagnum moss—available at the seed store or florist—around the top of the branch. Wrap a piece of mesh potato sack around the moss and tie it to the branch at the bottom of the ball. Then drive a tack in the top of the branch and run cords from the top of the tree over the moss to the base of the ball in several places to keep it from sagging.

Stick small evergreen clippings into the ball at the top and shape the tree as you work. Make your tree any size you want—from any kind of evergreen you have.

Trim the tree with artificial red berries, cranberries on toothpicks, tiny pine cones or gilded fruit.

Pour water into the moss occasionally, so it won't dry out.

Harris & Ewing

THESE smiling faces over their colors are Senorita Adelia Sanchez (left) from Nicaragua and Senorita Gladys Terradas of Argentina who will be Miss Nicaragua and Miss Argentina, respectively, at the seventh United Nations Club anniversary ball to be held at the Statler on December 3. Forty girls from the United Nations will compete for the title of Miss United Nations of 1949. Walter Pidgeon will come from Hollywood to be master of ceremonies and 10 per cent of the proceeds will go to Care overseas packages

Bobby Is Better Now

Hope Soars on Red Feather Wings

By Ruth Allison Hudnut

BOBBY is at Christ Child Farm in Rockville, Md., and how he arrived is a Red Feather story which began on a highway in Virginia near Charlottesville on June 27. It began when two cars sideswiped each other, and the car in which Bobby was riding turned over three times.

Bobby had been taken to the University of Virginia Hospital as an accident case. He was cut and bruised and had a head injury and wasn't able to speak or move when he regained consciousness. Pretty soon the words started to come back, and he could move more each day. He was in the hospital two months and two days. By the end of August he was able to return home with his mother to Washington and the little apartment they shared.

Bobby's mother had taken time off to be with him, but now she had to go back to her job so that she could support Bobby and his 5-year-old sister. That meant being away part of the time, and Bobby needed a great deal of attention, such as hot baths and muscle education. Fortunately his little sister was staying with an aunt in Charlottesville. Another aunt came in to help Bobby's mother and made it possible for her to go on earning her living. Somehow, those many weeks, she managed as mothers do, and she was rewarded by a steady improvement in Bobby's condition.

Soon Aunt Couldn't Come

BUT PRETTY soon his aunt couldn't come any more because of sickness in her own home, and the burden became so great that Bobby's mother sought the help of a Red Feather agency, the Children's Protective Association.

This agency helps parents who have problems connected with their children. The problems may be physical like Bobby's. They may be the result of a home broken by illness, separation or death. They may be caused by emotional upsets in the child himself. He runs away. He is in difficulty in school. He avoids other children. He has temper tantrums. Treatment is as varied as the problems. If possible the worker tries to treat the child in his own home, and that treat may embrace the whole home situation. Sometimes the home environment is the real cause of the child's trouble and a change at least for a time is essential. Then a good foster home is found for him.

In Bobby's case, treatment was first of all medical and neurological examinations at Children's Hospital followed by physiotherapy treatments. Then to relieve Bobby's mother and speed Bobby's recovery during the early and most favorable period for recovery, convalescent care was arranged for Bobby at Christ Child Farm.

That meant two Red Feather services were cooperating in the care of Bobby, which is the way Red Feather services work. Children's Protective Association made the plan and will keep in touch with Bobby's mother, and Christ Child Farm will care for his convalescence.

Bobby went to the farm on November 9 and he will remain at least six weeks. While there he will have physiotherapy treatments which will consist of hot baths, gentle manipulation of arm and hand and constructive work to exercise them. He will pick up objects with his fingers, string beads, make puzzles, build airplanes, learn weaving, and paint objects on a wall to help him reach.

Speech Is Better, Too

BOBBY is keenly alert, according to Dr. Mary P. Warner, pediatrician in attendance at Christ Child Farm. He has shown marked improvement since he left the hospital. Practically full use of his body has returned except for his left arm, which still needs treatment. His speech is halting but that, too, is much better. Perhaps other children at the farm are a stimulating influence. After all, a boy has to have the answer quickly when playing with other youngsters. Bobby's teacher is also helping him to talk normally.

The outlook is bright for this little boy, who is one of the 26 children at the farm who are recovering from all sorts of illness. There are the twins who had virus pneumonia with complications and now are regaining their health with nutritious meals and supervised care. The twins come from a foster home where a busy foster mother could not give them all the attention they needed. There are the five youngsters who are on bed rest from rheumatic fever and who may lead normal lives because Christ Child Farm gave them that watchful supervision and bed rest they could not receive at home. There is the little boy with extrophy of the bladder, a rare ailment, which means he was born with his bladder outside his body. So far he has had to spend most of his life in a hospital or in a Red Feather convalescent home.

And there are the acres of rolling land, a world of sunshine and fresh air, big helpings of good food, trained nursing care, daily tutoring to keep children up in school work, all kinds of fun and play, and a skilled pediatrician in regular attendance. And these Red Feather services cost only what a parent can afford. If he can pay nothing, it is free.

When Bobby is ready to leave Christ Child Farm, the Children's Protective will help his mother make the best plan possible for his future. Accidents will happen, but they aren't so bad when Red Feather agencies are standing by to help.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

First-Aid Kit

Small cuts and bruises are a part of every child's growing up. In general, it's a good thing to take a matter-of-fact attitude about them. If mother fusses over the minor wounds or if in any way, the youngster is made to feel that he should have some very special attention whenever there's an accident, the whole thing takes on too much importance.

One way of taking care of the situation is to have a family first-aid kit to which the youngster can go for a band aid, mercurachrome, tincture of green soap, or whatever your doctor thinks is good for cuts and scratches. It's a good idea, too, to have the youngsters in on deciding what should be in the kit and to talk over how one decides that a cut is small enough to be taken care of by one's self and when there needs to be some consultation with mother or father.

With the family first-aid kit in operation you will probably find that there is much less fussing, whining or crying. It may even become fun to be one's own "doctor."

Why English coats?

For an American miss there is a charm about English coats especially when they have labels with world-famous names such as Burberry and Rodex. Some of the cloths are made only in the British Isles — hand-woven Shetlands, Harris tweeds and Connemaras. Even the camel hairs and cashmeres are of typical British weave. All the coats are beautifully tailored in a manner worthy of these royal fabrics.

Helpful Hints on Winter Menus

Why not do up enough cranberries all at one time to last the winter? Then, each time you have turkey or chicken your cranberries are all ready to eat. Make your cranberry jelly as usual and put it while hot into jelly glasses, then seal tightly with paraffin.

Make a filling corn chowder for a soup and sandwich lunch by adding diced cooked potatoes and canned whole-grain corn to a thin white sauce. Season well with finely grated onion, salt and freshly ground pepper.

When you can think of nothing new to vary the menu and meals seem uninteresting take a trip to a real market and just walk through and feast your eyes on the many different things that you had forgotten entirely.

Keep in Trim

A Good Test And Aids For Posture

By Ida Jean Kain

THE NICEST compliment any girl can receive is: "That dress looks so nice on you"—implying that the girl does something for the dress.

The only way to look your best in a dress, and do something for it, is to have good posture. This does not mean to be stiff as a poker. It means graceful posture standing and moving—head balanced beautifully, shoulders relaxed and down, midriff lifted and chest high, hip muscles contracted and abdomen flat. That's correct line-up and allows for freedom of motion.

One physical education expert passes along this advice: Always hold your shoulders the way you would want them to look in a decollete formal Paris creation—you wouldn't be caught rounding them! And keep the same kind of grip on your girdle muscles that you would in a beautifully tailored suit.

If good posture doesn't "come natural" to you and it's more comfortable to slump, take the test that points up posture defects. Lie on your back on the floor, legs straight down, arms upstretched on floor overhead. If you have difficulty in touching elbows to the floor, this is definite proof that you are in the habit of rounding your shoulders. If you can't touch the small of the back to the floor by pulling up and in with the lower abdominal muscles, this indicates the front muscles are weak and that you tend to lean against your belt instead of your backbone. In many cases, weak front muscles pull the small of the back sharply inward, causing swayback.

Poor, Careless Posture

OF COURSE, poor posture is often caused by carelessness. Remember—with elegant posture you can give your clothes a lift and stand out in a crowd, even in a last year's dress.

The desire to have a good posture comes first, and good posture exercise is good posture itself. But to help things along, here's an excellent exercise that straightens shoulders, tones the stomach muscles, and helps correct swayback.

Position: Lying on back on floor, feet elevated to chair seat, arms down on floor at sides.

Movement: Pull strongly up and in with lower abdominal muscles as you flex alternate knees vigorously toward chest and circle arms slowly back on floor overhead, without letting wrists or elbows come off the floor. Swing arms and leg back to starting position. Be sure to keep the up-pull centered through the midsection—otherwise this will be only a leg exercise. Repeat five times, relax, and continue five times. Do the exercise slowly . . . it does no good to dash through it.

Mrs. Gillies, Home Expert, To Speak Here

"The New Look in Color" will be the subject of a talk before the Chevy Chase Women's Club on Friday by Mrs. Mary Davis Gillies, interiors and architectural editor of McCall's magazine. Her speech is one of six by leading decorating authorities sponsored by the American home committee of the club for this season.

Mrs. Gillies is the author of two books on interior decoration, "Popular Home Decoration" and "All About Modern Decorating." As director of recent home of tomorrow contests for McCall's, in which 70,000 women participated, and an editor of the magazine for 12 years, she has had an unusual opportunity to learn what type of home and home furnishings American women prefer.

In 1947, at the invitation of the British Ministry of Information, Mrs. Gillies visited England, Scotland and Wales to study the postwar building program in which whole communities are being laid out with careful study of the needs of families who will occupy them.

Miss Donaldson Becomes Bride

A service wedding of interest in Washington took place at Fort Riley, Kan., on November 24 when Miss Sarah Elizabeth Donaldson became the bride of Lieut. David Saltonstall Mallett. Capt. F. M. Barrett, Army Chaplain, performed the ceremony at the Post Chapel.

Mrs. Mallett is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. T. Q. Donaldson, jr. Her father gave her in marriage and the matrons of honor were Mrs. John W. Donaldson and Mrs. Leslie D. Carter, jr. Miss Jane Vreeland and Miss Dorothy Jane Morris were bridesmaids. Ushering were Lieutenants Leslie D. Carter, jr., William Caldwell, jr., Robert Marshall, Robert Taylor, James McCray and Stephen Griffit.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Officers' Club.

Wm. Turner, Miss Blank Wed

MISS MARY ALICE BLANK, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley H. Blank of Chevy Chase, Md., and William Edward Turner, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Turner of Bristol, Tenn., were married Friday afternoon at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church with the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was costumed in ivory satin, an orange blossom coronet holding her veil, and she carried an orchid banked with roses and stephanotis. Mrs. W. Howard Blank, jr., was matron of honor for her sister-in-law, and the bridesmaids were Miss Joann Gunther, Miss Jamielie Coplin, Miss Betty George and Miss Barbara Rosson.

Craig Rockett was best man and the ushers included W. Howard Blank, jr. James Turner, Bob Scott and Bob Mauk. A reception followed at Chevy Chase Woman's Club. After their wedding trip to Daytona Beach, Fla., Mr. and Mrs. Turner will reside in Chattanooga, Tenn. The bride was graduated from Sullins College and her husband was graduated from the University of Tennessee. He also served three years in the Army Air Corps.

$12,000,000 Secret Sought

Seer, Scientist, Solicitor, Sleuth Still Searching

By Alvin Steinkopf

London, Nov. 27 (AP).—A clairvoyant has joined detectives, lawyers and scientists with strange instruments who are looking for the half dozen lost wills of Mrs. Daisy Alexander.

Mrs. Alexander, a remarkable woman, was about 80 when she died of bomb shock in 1940. Her three million pounds (12 million dollars) were inherited from her father, Isaac Singer, the American sewing machine manufacturer who became a British subject. There may be claimants for the estate in the United States.

The clairvoyant, Frederick Liston of London, stepped in after a wartime mine detector disclosed that the stately Grosvenor Square mansion in which the secretive old lady lived is honeycombed with rooms and unsuspected cavities behind thick masonry.

Other phases of the inquiry include searches for (A) a parrot named Bob, (B) a vase with a hollow base and (C) a six-legged Louis XIV settee with built-in secret places under the cushions.

Leading the search is an elderly solicitor, Barry Cohen, who devoted a good deal of his time to drawing up wills for Mrs. Alexander. She changed her mind often.

'Four or Five' Wills

Cohen, acting for unnamed "interested parties," recalls that he drew up "four or five wills" and any number of codicils in the last 20 years. But when the estate came up for disposition the only will that could be found was one executed in 1909.

The estate, believed to consist largely of shares of the Singer Manufacturing Co. and stock in wood products enterprises, is being managed under the provisions of this old will. Names of the beneficiaries are not to be found on any public records available in London, but Cohen insists that the will could have disposed specifically of only one sixth of the vast fortune.

Cohen recalls Mrs. Alexander, one of Isaac Singer's 12 children, as a "beautiful and gracious lady in her time—but often a difficult client."

"She was a small person of extraordinary determination," he says. "I made those wills one after another, and while I know her general wishes she always directed me to leave blanks in which she could write the names of beneficiaries. Mrs. Alexander said she didn't want persons to know they might benefit."

Was Society Belle

Before the death of her husband, Capt. Granville Alexander, in 1931, she was well known in Mayfair society. One of her most intimate friends was Lady Stanley, sister-in-law of the late Lord Derby. After her husband's death she withdrew into the Grosvenor Square house and became increasingly secretive about her affairs. To the day of her death, which was caused by the explosion of a German bomb in the house next door, she resented interference or intrusion. What she did with her wills, said Cohen, she considered most decidedly to be her own business.

Calling in the clairvoyant, Cohen explained, was merely an impulse to try anything, and he said he believes some progress has been made.

"Mr. Liston, who of course didn't know the strange lady at all, has given us some remarkable leads," he said. "He put us on the trail of a carpenter befriended by Mrs. Alexander who has told us that she used to call him in for little tasks about the house. She would make him sit while she lectured to him for an hour or more. Unfortunately he does not remember any secret hiding places."

Mrs. Alexander's old house is occupied now by the busy Ministry of Town and Country Planning, which does not care to have its walls bashed in in a search for secret chambers. However, the ministry did permit the use of one of the army's mine detectors. A sergeant went over the mahogany paneling with the device.

Several times, in the rambling house, the dial of the instrument wiggled, indicating hidden metal. But the planning ministry suggests that was just some old bolts or a waterpipe, and hasn't permitted any digging in the walls. But penciled crosses mark the spots and Cohen may still seek authority to explore with a pick.

The parrot, the settee with the built-in secrets and the vase with the hollow base were longshots on the fantastic side, but Cohen looked into them.

Mrs. Alexander was fond of a parrot named Bob and talked to him for hours. A suggestion was made that the bird might have memorized oft-repeated phrases and that even now he may be squawking words which might give a clew to the lost wills. But no one can find the bird.

Realty Row Reports Upsurge In Sales Since Election Day

By Conrad P. Harness

WASHINGTON real estate men now date everything as "BE" or "AE." And the difference between the two is like stepping from Tobacco Row to Connecticut ave., the brokers said.

"Before Election" things were tough along Realty Row. Sales were few, ads weren't pulling, sellers wanted half of Fort Knox's gold deposits before signing a sales contract and prospective buyers weren't buying.

BOGLEY

KESSINGER

"After Election," things began to pick up. Nothing like the lush days of 1946, of course, but brokers' telephones were kept busy with prospective customers, ads were attracting crowds to open houses and brokers managed to pay office rent, with a few dollars left over.

A check of realty offices here revealed that the expected Christmas sales lag is yet to come and things look bright for 1949 in the property promotion business.

Highlights: The election outcome itself was unimportant. Prices are still firm and no general drop is foreseen. Home building may be curtailed slightly in 1949, but prices will remain at present levels. With the uncertainty of the election over, sales resistance has weakened somewhat. There are still plenty of new homes standing vacant waiting for buyers. Some speculative builders have cut prices of new homes in efforts to sell them before winter sets in.

Cash Registers Ringing

HERE'S how the brokers put it:

Samuel E. Bogley: "Activity in this office has quadrupled since the election. Busiest November we've ever seen, but October reached a new low in sales activity. November 10 seems to be the dividing line. Inactive before then, plenty busy ever since. It looks like we've settled down to four more years of prosperity. Our November sales included three new homes to incoming Congressmen."

David Milestone: "Over 3500 persons have inspected our open houses in the last two weeks. But it was pretty quiet around election time."

LUTES

LEBLING

James L. Dixon: "I feel that the market is opening up. Six weeks prior to the election it was slowed down to a walk. Inquiries from ads were meager, but now they have increased materially. Buyers are still sensitive to price, more selective and want to see as many homes as possible. $15,000 to $22,500 seems to be the most salable price bracket. Down payments are not so large as formerly, but sellers are more cooperative in taking back second trusts."

John R de Sibour: "Many sellers put off price reductions hoping the election would bring higher prices. And buyers had hoped the election would put more homes on the market, thereby lowering prices. A stalemate occurred, but activity has increased in the last ten days. We've had feelers from 12 incoming Congressmen who are looking for housing. Most of them prefer renting"

No Price Decline Seen

LAWRENCE V. LUTES: "The election helped the real estate business. It looks like a banner year in 1949. Prices are still up. I haven't seen any price drop in either new or old homes."

A. J. Kessinger: "The upset in the elections hasn't affected my business one way or the other—it's running just about the same. Although sales have been slow for quite some time in all real estate, I think things will be better next spring. New houses are holding their own, except in the case of builders who are anxious to unload at reduced prices in order to sell out before cold weather."

Nathan Poole: "The election didn't affect real estate transactions one way or the other. The loan market is still bad, but it looks like business is going to be better now that we know what to expect for the next four years. If a new Administration had come in, most persons would have waited at least six months before deciding to buy or sell."

W. L. Lebling: "Business is somewhat better than before election. It is an indication that people are settled and know what the next four years holds in store for them. The mortgage market is still tight, with too much spread between the total of the first trust and the purchase price. There is no indication of a price break in the housing market. People would be wise in buying now."

Edmund J. Flynn: "Several incoming Congressmen have inquired about purchasing apartments in cooperatives. There seems to be more inquiries about cooperatives since the elections, too. Prospective buyers have offered as high as $2000 as a bonus for apartments at the Broadmoor, which has been sold out for weeks. I have noticed no change in the price of real estate properties."

No Hollywood Touches Included In White House Repair Project

The White House will soon have its first major repair job since President Theodore Roosevelt's Administration, but it will look just the same when finished. It's just a matter of putting steel beams inside walls, leaving appearance as conceived by George Washington. Photo-sketch shows where some of major repairs will be done

By Alexander R. George

THE traditional appearance of the White House will be unchanged by the big reconstruction job estimated to cost one million dollars.

The arrangement and simple classic style of the rooms "will not be altered one iota," says Lorenzo Winslow, White House architect.

"Contrary to some reports," Winslow says, "there will be no Hollywood touches."

Winslow says President Truman is opposed to any deviation from the historic design of the mansion, conceived originally by George Washington, who, incidentally, never got to live in it.

The work of strengthening the second story with steel and concrete will start as soon as funds are made available by Congress. It may take a year to complete repairs aimed at reducing the fire hazard and shoring up the second floor.

"Two historic mansions, Blair House and Blair-Lee, across Pennsylvania ave. from the White House, are being joined by a first-floor doorway to make a spacious temporary home for the President and his family.

Long Repair Record

THE White House repair job will be the biggest since Theodore Roosevelt's Administration. In 1902 the East Terrace and almost all of the first-story floor were rebuilt, retaining George Washington's ideas.

A new office building was constructed and the main stairway was removed from the west end of the House to just east of the main lobby. The State dining room was enlarged and the entire main story was redecorated and refurnished.

The ceiling of the East Room now is sagging about 6 inches due to rotting of old timbers supporting the second floor.

Thousands of Americans, the great and the little people, kings and queens, prime ministers and grand dukes, have walked under the East Room's huge chandeliers. Abigail Adams, first mistress of the mansion, hung the family wash in the then unfinished room.

In 1865 hundreds of citizens, wearing big black badges, streamed into it to view the body of the assassinated Lincoln.

A shaky ceiling now endangers the Blue Room, too. During a formal reception there a few months ago President Truman noticed that the big chandelier was vibrating.

Haven of Celebrities

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND and pretty 22-year-old Frances Folsom stood beneath that chandelier for their wedding in 1886, the only wedding of a President in the White House.

The Blue Room is considered exceptionally beautiful in its proportions and decorations. The wall covering above the white enameled wainscoting is of heavy corded blue silk. Drapes are of the same material.

The second floor has seven bedrooms and baths in addition to the President's study, the library and a wide hall extending the length of the building. Guest bedrooms above the East Room have been occupied by the Prince of Wales (afterward King Edward VII), Winston Churchill and other celebrities.

The White House is the oldest public building in Washington. The cornerstone was laid October 13, 1792.

The "President's Palace," as it was frequently called in the early days, was burned by the British in August, 1814, when Madison was President. The fire destroyed the interior and part of the walls. Reconstruction was begun in the spring of 1815, and President Monroe moved in in December, 1817.

The portrait of Washington which recently has been hanging in the East Room was saved from the fire by Dolly Madison. It is the only remaining White House article which was in the Executive Masion before the fire.

Teddy Liked Name

THE exterior of the building originally was buff, but it was painted white after the fire. People then began to refer to it as the White House, but it was not officially given that title until President Theodore Roosevelt had the name engraved on his stationery.

The home of the Presidents has had its periods of elegance and shabbiness. Monroe had some trouble when he incurred "unauthorized debts" in buying flossy French furniture, silver and glass.

In 1850, the Millard Fillmores "found the White House in a miserable condition, dirty and bare, the great room over the Blue Room covered with a straw carpet made filthy by tobacco-chewers." Gaudy spittoons solved that problem during the Grant Administration.

Apartment Planning Stepped Up

WITH the frosting skimmed off the housing cake, several local builders are conferring with architects and banks with a view toward erecting large downtown apartment houses.

Most of the projects are still in the planning stage, but they make interesting reading to apartment seekers. Newest and biggest is a 560-unit, 8-story building planned for Connecticut ave., Porter and Quebec sts. nw., near the Broadmoor.

Plans for this structure are still in the "hush-hush" stage and the owners, unidentified, have directed the architects, Edwin Weihe and Katherine Gibbs, to divulge no details. Ajax Construction Co., builders of the 500-unit Rock Creek Gardens development at Grubb st. and East-West hwy., Md., will erect the brick, concrete and steel building. It is expected to front on Porter st. and will be of irregular shape to fit the triangular site.

A spokesman for Ajax Construction Co. said the firm would finish up Rock Creek Gardens in February.

Another rental newcomer, still in the planning stage, is proposed by M. Pollin & Sons for a site at 3900 16th st. nw. It will rise five stories and be constructed of brick and reinforced concrete. It will boast radiant heat, according to present plans, an innovation in elevator type apartments here.

Berla & Abel have been retained as architects. This firm has designed several of the District's most beautiful apartment houses. They have plans on their drawing boards for at least two other projects:

An 98-unit eight story apartment set for Wisconsin ave. and Porter st. nw., to be owned by Temple Realty Co.

An 8-story luxury type apartment to be erected at 17th and Massachusetts ave. nw., next to the Bay State Apartments. The site is now occupied by three older-type homes which will be razed. It is a two-million-dollar project.

Already announced is an 8-story, 262-unit building planned to be built at 2430 Pennsylvania ave. nw. by Charles H. Tompkins Co., for Washington Circle Apartments, Dr. Daniel Gevinson, president. Frank Grad & Sons are architects.

Abstract Art Is Newest 'Bait' To Increase Brick, Tile Sales

BRICK and tile producers, in an effort to increase sales, have launched something different in advertising sales technique.

Taking their cue from perfume "ads,' and others using abstract paintings to attract reader-customers, the Structural Clay Products Institute, 1756 K st. nw., is attracting wide interest with its "art in advertising" campaign.

The paintings of a young Arlington, Va., artist, Johan G. Middlethon, 24, are the bait. The institute is a national association of manufacturers of structural clay products. Advertising is carried in the top trade publications.

Douglas Whitlock, general counsel of the institute, conceiving the idea of using abstract paintings to illustrate the use of masonry in contemporary architecture.

Looking around, he found his artist in the institute's mail room, working as a clerk. Previously, he had viewed the youth work at an outdoor exhibit here last year.

Since his "discovery," Middlethon has contributed work to a number of architectural publications. His paintings are now on display at the Architectual League in New York.

Middlethon never attended art school and does his work in the dinette of his small apartment while his 13-month-old son plays nearby. Besides painting and his work at the institute, Middlethon also is a drummer with a local dance band.

"I became interested in painting about four years ago," he said, "when I discovered a technique to translate patterns of music into color."

As far as study is concerned, he said, "Washington schools have nothing to offer." He studies at home with his own selection of books.

"The dinette sure gets cluttered." he remarked of his "studio." "and the baby (Peter) gets paint all over his clothes. But I still manage to turn the work out."

A graduate of Washington-Lee High School, he lives with his family at 4627 S. 36th st., Fairlington.

Restaurant to Remodel

Remodeling of the Ivy Terrace Restaurant, 1634 Connecticut ave. nw., will be started soon by Martin Bros., builders. Designers are Daumit & Sargent.

Lustron Enters Competitive Bidding

17 Firms Vie to Build 60 Homes at Quantico

SEVENTEEN major home building firms will square away tomorrow for a battle royal. The winner will build 60 homes at Quantico, Va. to house families, officers and enlisted men, of the Marine Corps School.

The fight is a friendly one. The weapons are slide rules, estimation charts, cost factors and other items used in drawing up a bid for a housing contract. For the first time, manufacturers of steel homes are bidding against wooden prefabbers and conventional builders on a Government contract. The entire housing industry is waiting to see what firm will submit the low bid.

After all bids are published, the industry will be able to determine to what extent the prefab industry can price compete with conventional builders.

Top names among the bidders include Lustron Corp., producers of an enameled steel five-room bungalow; Harman Corp., another steel home manufacturer; American Houses, Inc., of New York, and Crawford Corp. of Baton Rouge, La.

Haris Construction Corp., builders of Viers Mill Village, large housing project in nearby Montgomery County, Md., are listed as prospective bidders by the Navy's Bureau of Yards and Docks. The project was the center of a congressional investigation last fall to determine if Government agencies had overvalued its homes for mortgage insurance purposes.

A congressional committee charged that the homes were worth less than the sales price of $8700, although several skilled appraisers testified the price was reasonable.

Beat the Weather

OTHER local firms expected to bid on the contract are J. Wesley Buchanan, Harnischfeger Corp., Knox Corp., Green Lumber Co. and Stran-Steel Division of Great Lakes Corp. Most are local offices for firms located elsewhere.

A bid by the Lustron Corp. revealed that the firm's production line was ready. The contract provides that the first 10 homes be completed within 50 days after the contract is awarded. Thus, Lustron would have to be in immediate production to fulfill the contract.

The contract also stipulates that the next 20 homes be completed in 120 days, with the remainder ready in 240 calendar days. Bidders were given only 10 days in which to file bids. The rush was attributed, it was said, to the Navy's desire for an immediate start so concrete foundations for the homes could be poured before freezing weather.

Homes will be two- and three-bedroom bungalows, basementless, and detached. The specifications evidently were written so all major prefabbers, both wood and steel, could compete. The dwellings will be erected on sites prepared by the Government to which water, gas, electric and sewer lines have been installed.

Competition Is Keen

ONE BIDDER, told that at least 17 firms were expected to bid on the job, commented: "I don't know of any time that competition has been this keen. It's caused by the tightening of the housing market, together with lack of financing. It will prove that the prefab industry can come into a tight labor area, such as Quantico, and price compete with conventional builders."

The low bidder is expected to move in materials, equipment and key construction personnel, subcontracting portions of the interior installation, such as electrical wiring or plumbing, to local contractors. He will probably use local labor as much as possible, it was indicated.

If a prefab manufacturer submits the low bid, he will undoubtedly fabricate as many housing sections as possible at the home plant, transporting them to the site for erection. In the case of Harman or Lustron, a complete house would be trucked to the site and erected by a factory-trained crew.

Life Insurance Firms' Holdings Top Billion Mark

With the purchase of 72 million dollars of real estate in the third quarter of this year, total real estate holdings of all United States life insurance companies topped one billion dollars on September 30, the Institute of Life Insurance reports.

This was the first time since 1944 that real estate holdings of the life companies had exceeded the billion-dollar mark. The September total of $1,015,000,000 was nearly 40 per cent greater than in 1946.

Largest single block of the real estate holdings is now the commercial properties held as investment, totaling 345 million dollars on September 30.

Third quarter real estate figures reported by the institute were:

White House Repair Project Has No 'Hollywood Touches'

The cook who reigned in the White House kitchens was much upset when Mrs. Fillmore had a wood-burning kitchen range installed.

The cook had managed to prepare fine state dinners for 36 people every Thursday in the wide-mouthed fireplace with its cranes, hooks, pots and pans. Dinner in those days consisted of nine courses and was two hours in the eating.

Chester A. Arthur, New York socialite president, was said to have taken one look at the Executive Mansion and said he would not live in such a place. He did live in it but gave it a thorough cleaning. Twenty-four wagon loads of furniture and household articles were sold at auction.

Electric lights were installed in the White House during the Benjamin Harrison Administration. Before that innovation the chandeliers, with their gas-lighting fixtures, were called gasaliers.

In 1899 the Commissioner of Public Buildings had a grandoise plan for enlarging the Executive Mansion. It would have doubled its size by adding two large wings surmounted by circular towers.

Architects' societies made such a fuss that President McKinley killed the project.

New Group of Homes Opens in Wakefield Area

A new group of luxury homes in the Wakefield sector of the District has been opened by James E. Schwab, builder. These are the first Schwab has erected since before the war when he helped develop the Ellicott Hills area.

Located in the 3600 block of Appleton st. nw., the large, two-story brick homes feature three bedrooms upstairs, plus a first-floor bedroom or library. One item off the architectural beaten path is a compartmented bath, with separate bath and basin facilities for both sexes.

Schwab plans to continue his construction program with erection of several homes on land which he owns near St. John's.

Low Grades Suffer First

Lumber Output Goes Up While Prices Go Down

By Gordon G. McNab

PORTLAND, Oreg., Nov. 27 (AP). Lumber production is climbing, prices are skidding, and you can get an argument anywhere on what it means to the man building a house.

This much is certain: There is no longer a lumber shortage. Everyone is agreed the lumber industry can supply all that's needed to build all the houses needed. It's the biggest peacetime year since 1929.

While production is climbing, prices have started to skid—some prices, that is.

Everywhere—in the Southern pine region as well as in the far West—lumber prices at the mills are "soft." So far this has made no difference to speak of on the better grades of lumber. But the lower grades are falling.

Here's what has happened:

During the war and since, the lumber scarcity and high prices increased production. Hundreds of small operators, although logging inefficiently, made a profit and boosted output. Increasing attention to conservation plus the profit on trees that earlier had been uneconomical investments, boosted peracre yield of timberland 25 per cent.

Most of this 25 per cent is low-grade common lumber. Before the war No. 3 dimension lumber sold at only $3 to $7 a thousand less than No. 1. So nobody wanted it.

During the period of shortage, No. 3 was wanted because lumber was lumber and nobody cared what the price was if they could get it.

Buyers Are Choosey

BUT NOW there isn't any shortage, buyers are deciding they don't want No. 3 any more—and the price of No. 3 has hit the skids.

No one can say just how far it has dropped for no one knows just how high it was: Each producer during the period of big demand sold for just about what he wanted, and some of them wanted plenty.

Those who got the most now have cut their prices the most. Many of the large, established mills never went up to the peak, and so far they haven't had to come down. Whether they will, and just how much, depends on the future.

But at the moment No. 3 dimension lumber from the fir mills is selling from $20 to $30 a thousand board feet cheaper than No. 1.

This gets back to the man building a house.

H. V. Simpson, executive vice-president of the West Coast Lumberman's Association, says if lower grades of lumber were used in low-cost of housing, substituting No. 3 for No. 1 where suitable, the cost of lumber in a house would be only 100 per cent more than before the war. It now is listed by the bureau of labor statistics as 216 per cent.

Some 20 per cent of the cost of a frame house is lumber. If the lumber bill were cut in two, the men building an $8000 house would save $800.

Codes Frown on No. 3

THIS, says Simpson, is the answer to low-cost housing; but before it gets to be an official part of the cost of a house, two things need to be done: The people have to learn to accept lower grades where they are suitable, and building code and financing restrictions calling for No. 1 have to be revised. Too many builders and too many codes think No. 1 is the lowest acceptable quality, he says.

The United States Forest Products Laboratory at Madison, Wis., and the Oregon Forest Laboratory at Oregon State College both are testing low-grade lumber to determine standards for use. If they come up with the answer Simpson says they will, No. 3 can be used confidently for sub-flooring, studding, sheathing, plates, fire stops and bracing, resulting in lower house costs and an increased demand for the lumber that now nobody wants.

The industry hopes this is not in the distant future, but admits it won't happen tomorrow.

One price authority says that so far the only retail price cuts have occurred in such cities as Portland, Los Angeles, New York and other large highly competitive centers.

In small towns, he says, lower prices are not in sight until present high-cost stocks are cleared and until competition forces reductions. He points out that a widely acknowledged practice of retailers buying from several mills and pricing all lumber at the cost from the highest-priced mill, will work against price slashes in noncompetitive towns. It is particularly prevalent in small Mid-Western cities, he says.

HOME HINTS

Look at the flame of your oil burner for a clew as to whether the burner is adjusted for best heating efficiency or is wasting oil, Department of Agriculture heating engineers advise. For high-pressure atomizing (gun type) oil burners, the flame should be orange-yellow, bushy and even in shape rather than high on one side. It should never look or sound like a blowtorch, or show more than a slight tinge of smoke at the tips.

An uneven flame probably comes from a dirty, soot-clogged nozzle; a blowtorch flame is getting too much air and wasting oil by sending heat up the chimney which should be used in the house. A smoky flame probably is getting too little air and wasting oil by depositing unburned black carbon, often causing dirty smudges on walls and furnishings.

For a rotary vaporizing, or wall-flame burner the correct flame color is mostly yellow with blue at the base and orange at the tips. A flame that is yellow and smoky at the tips indicates air leaks into the fire pot. If dirty blue and irregular, it may be getting too little air.

A rotary atomizing burner flame should be white at the base, yellow above, then orange toward the tips.

Correct adjustment of an oil burner is really a job for the service man. If the installation has an automatic draft regulator, all that may be needed is to move the adjusting weight on the damper slightly. However, the right amount of air can be determined accurately only by analyzing the flue gases and this requires special equipment.

An odor of burning oil in the house should be investigated. It may mean too little air for burning, or it may mean air leaks in the furnace or boiler which need to be sealed up with furnace cement or boiler putty.

Fluorescent Street Lights Favored

Spartanburg, S. C., Nov. 27 (AP).—Twin-tube fluorescent street lights have proved so satisfactory here that the city plans to double its 104-unit system.

They are four times as bright as the former standard bulbs and use less electricity, City Manager T. Edward Temple reports. They cost about half as much, last approximately a year and are easily replaced.

Plain white tubes can be replaced with multicolored ones for Christmas decorations or other special ocasions. The patented fluorescent lights were invented in 1939 by A. M. Miles, who was city electrician for 12 years.

Home Builders, Gas Company Outline Home Heating Plan

MORE efficient home heating installations are expected to result from a voluntary plan outlined to Washington trade groups last week.

The plan is based on standards developed by a committee of warm air heating contractors in consultation with the Home Builders Association of metropolitan Washington and the Washington Gas Light Co. This aim: Elimination of sub-standard heating conditions.

Robert Lewis, sales manager for the Maryland division of the gas company, described the work of the committee at a trade group conference last week.

In an effort to reduce sub-standard heating installations, he said, home builders will be furnished copies of the minimum standards adopted by the committee. These may be used by their heating contractors in actual installation work.

Upon completion of the job the technical staff of the Washington Gas Light Co., and representatives of the Home Builders Association, will inspect the work. If it meets the voluntary standards they will issue a certificate of installation.

The certificate states that equipment installation is in accordance with local code requirements and conforms to the forced warm air heating standards adopted by committee, the gas company and the Home Builders Association. Lewis stressed the fact that the plan is entirely voluntary and he said the heating committee has spent several months in outlining standards that cover installation from furnace erection to location of the thermostat.

Clarence W. Gosnell, president of the Home Builders Association, said his organization has given the new plans considerable study and does not believe they will necessarily increase the cost of homes.

Building, Remodeling Loans Show Increase

Loans made by savings and loan associations to finance building of homes amounted to 904 million dollars during the first nine months of 1948, a 26 per cent increase over the same period of '47, the Home Loan Bank Board reports.

New mortgages to finance the purchase of homes declined by 15 per cent, while loans for home improvement and remodeling increased by 21 per cent.

Swiss Check House Racket

Geneva, Nov. 27 (AP).—The tidy Swiss have a new kind of house-cleaning problem. The federal council has announced that it is taking steps to clean the rental racketeers out of Geneva. The seat of the European headquarters of the United Nations is bulging with new residents and there aren't enough homes for them.

Before the war there were 6000 empty dwellings in Geneva. Now there is an estimated shortage of 2500. Operators have obtained control of a large number of apartments and rent them at fantastic prices either furnished or unfurnished. Some foreigners, in their anxiety to find a home, are even paying rent on apartments still under construction.

Realty Roundup

THE LOCAL DEMAND for new homes boasting tile baths, full basements, insulation, fireplaces, dinettes or dining rooms, equipped kitchens and other items dear to a homeowner's heart is causing District members of the United States Savings and Loan League to renege, unwillingly, on the league's pledge to allot major portions of 1949 mortgage funds to builders erecting homes selling under $10,000.

The pledge was made at the league's national convention in New York early this month. A statement adopted by the league's resolution committee said home financing institutions would insure the production of approximately one million new homes next year.

A check of local members revealed that Washington buyers want homes with all the trimmings. And the price tags are generally above $10,000, not under. Lenders would like to see low-cost homes built here, but are afraid to lend money on "economy" homes which may fail to attract buyers.

Clarence E. Kefauver of Columbia Federal, pointed out that scores of West Coast builders are selling two-bedroom homes for under $8,000. But, he added, the houses don't have full basements, equipped kitchens, insulation and other niceties demanded by local buyers.

Carl J. Bergmann, president of Washington Permanent Building Association, said his firm was shying off loans over $10,000 and had ceased loaning on homes in the $25,000 and higher brackets.

The American Building Association, said Wilfred H. Blanz, secretary, would like to finance construction of new homes selling under $10,000. American has already financed several low-cost homes in nearby Maryland. Blanz pointed out savings funds for home construction were not being increased at the present time. Depositors, he said, are withdrawing funds to buy cars, television sets and other commodities. "Money is going out faster than it is coming in."

Generally speaking, here is the mortgage picture in Washington: Most lenders have increased their interest rates at least one half of 1 per cent over 1946 rates; most have shortened maturity periods and decreased their ratio of mortgage to price by approximately 10 per cent or more.

George C. Keeler, Alexandria realtor, has been elected president of the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board. Other officers are: Charles L. Hanowell and Ashton C. Jones, jr., vice presidents; Frank Clark, secretary; Talmadge Wilcher, treasurer. The executive committee is composed of Clyde L. Eastman, Harry Kirk, Carroll Wright, W. S. Hoge 3d, and the above named officers.

New officers will be inducted at a banquet next month and will assume their duties on January 1.

Building operations of the W. C. and A. N. Miller Development Co. are profiled in the current National Real Estate and Building Journal. Highlights: "They build attractive two-story houses, each individually designed, send a monthly magazine of community news to home owners, establish bus service to their subdivisions, provide a community building for subdivision dances, parties, meetings, children's activities."

Real estate holdings of insurance companies have topped the one billion dollar mark for the first time since 1944. The September total of $1,015,000,000 is nearly 40 per cent greater than in 1946. Largest single block of realty holdings is now commercial properties held as an investment.

C. L. Hanowell Co. has moved its office from 2112 N. Quincy to 6819 Lee hgwy., East Falls Church, reports Mr. Hanowell.

Work was started on 1060 new homes and apartment units in this area during October, a drop of 50 units under September's totals, BLS reports. This is less than half the number of units started in October 1947, when builders rushed to take advantage of mortgage insurance provisions of Section 608, National Housing Act.

A recent study, "If Your Next Neighbors Are Negroes," by the American Missionary Association, Fisk University, declares it is a myth that Negroes depreciate property values.

The study cites, in dollars and cents, instances and neighborhoods where realty values rose with Negro ownership and residence. "In one neighborhood an appraiser studied 30 houses. Before Negroes moved in prices were between $2200 and $3500. Six months later prices averaged $4500 and $5000 for the same houses."

Panic-selling usually following on the heels of the first Negro families into a residential area, the study claims, can be attributed to ignorance or market manipulation.

Caution:

Xmas Trees, Fire Rules Go Together

FIRE HAZARDS from Christmas decorations, which claim hundreds of victims every holiday season, can be greatly reduced without sacrificing color or traditions if proper precautions are taken, claims the December issue of Science Illustrated magazine.

The tree itself is one of the most inflammable products of nature. The article suggests the following safety steps be taken: (1) Choose a small tree and keep it outdoors until ready for use. (2) Place it in the coolest part of the house and turn off the radiator nearest it. (3) See that it doesn't block an exit. (4) Use only safety cotton to decorate. (5) Don't set up electric trains around its base. (6) Provide a switch some distance from the tree to turn the lights on and off. (7) Turn off the lights when you leave the house. (8) Don't plug and unplug the cord and do not use a frayed one. (9) If needles near a light are turning brown change its location. (10) When the needles start to fall discard the tree.

Flameproof paper is available for decorations. If it cannot be found, a solution made from one pound of ammonium chloride in a gallon of water can be sprayed on paper to make it slow burning. Flimsy gauze-like children's costumes can be made flame resistant by rinsing in a solution of 9 ounces of borax, 4 ounces of boric acid, and a gallon of water. The cloth should be saturated and wrung by hand and dried. Each washing removes the solution.

As an added word of caution, warn Santa Claus against smoking. Nothing can spoil the fun so much as blazing whiskers.

Hong Kong's Jerry-Built Homes Crack

Hongkong, Nov. 27 (AP).—A number of Hongkong's postwar jerry-built dwelling houses are, like the old London Bridge rhyme, "falling down, falling down," but not so very "merrily" for the plaster-spattered victims.

In the collapse of one rebuilt prewar structure four people were killed. The building, standing next to the end in a block-long row of four-story tenements, had been severely damaged by bombs during the war. At the wars end the building was repaired with inferior materials. Mud was used in place of cement and gaps in supporting concrete walls were smoothed over with plaster. The building stood because it was supported on both sides by tenements.

One night the end tenement, which had been crammed to the roof with dry goods, caved in and the jerry-repaired structure went right along with it and so did the weary old building on the other side.

Building authorities say that unscrupulous contractors and slipshod architects are often responsible for the collapse of postwar-built houses.

Building Authority V. Kennif says his office just doesn't have the staff to keep a day and night eye on contractors and architects. "With all the building that's going on it would take several thousand inspectors to do the job," he said.

The cost of erecting a building today, according to a government estimate, is 3 to 10 times that of prewar years and the cost of labor has increased 7 to 12 times.

HOLC's Million Loans Are 90% Liquidated

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation, rescue agency of the depression years, has liquidated itself by nearly 90 per cent, the Home Loan Bank Board reports.

A balance of about 395 million dollars remains from its total investment of nearly 3½ billion dollars in loans and properties. HOLC made more than a million loans to distressed borrowers. About 745,000 borrowers and purchasers of HOLC houses, have now repaid their loans in full.

$5,000,000 for Sausage

Vienna, Nov. 27 (AP).—Vienna's largest slaughter house, bombed out and destroyed by fire during the war, is to be rebuilt at a cost of more than five million dollars.

German Fair For New York

Frankfurt, Nov. 27 (AP).—Americans will have a chance next spring to see what has been done with their tax money in Germany.

Western Germany's industry, rebuilt mostly with American aid, will send its products and statistics to Rockefeller Center, New York, where the "Industry Show of Germany 1949" will be held March 1 to 21.

This was announced by Western Germany's Association for Foreign Trade.

The exhibit, sponsored by the Anglo-American Joint Export-Import Agency, is intended to show the American public what has been achieved in the economic field since the end of the war.

The announcement said a group of German tradesmen will leave for New York soon to make all preparatory arrangements.

46 in First Class Graduated At 'Bricklayer's University'

"Bricklayer's University" graduated its first class last week as 46 embryo t r o w e l handlers were awarded diplomas by Henry J. Connor, representing the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, school sponsors.

The trainees learned the finer points of bricklaying at the Bricklayers Apprentice Training School at Ayrlawn Farms, Bethesda, where practical instruction has been held for the last several months.

With winter ahead, the school is moving to indoor quarters at Leland High School for textbook instruction. Most of the graduates have already enrolled for further study. Connor said any one interested in receiving training may enroll for classroom work now and obtain actual practice when classes at Ayrlawn Farms are resumed next April.

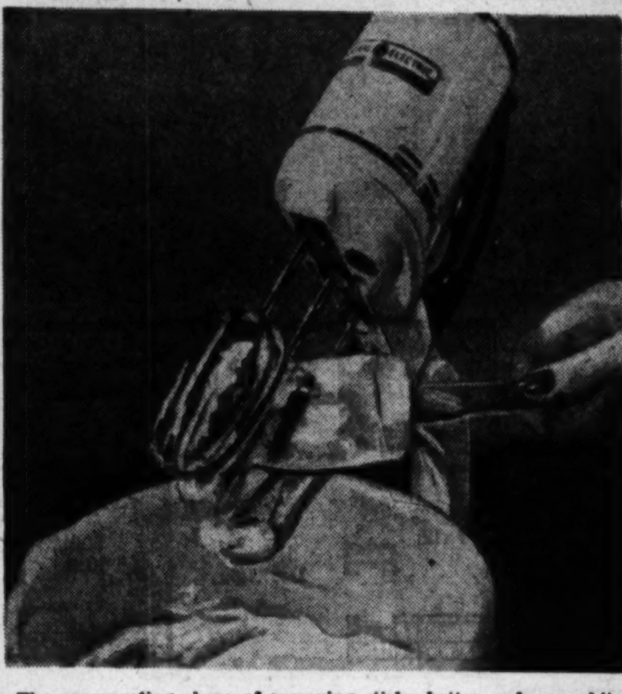
Indoor classes will start Tuesday evening at Leland, 44th and Elm sts., Bethesda, and will meet twice weekly. Cost of the trade school is borne by the Home Builders Association, Montgomery County Board of Education and the students. Graduates are expected to increase the supply of skilled mechanics in the local building trades.

Goldilocks Rose Wins John Cook Gold Medal

Goldilocks, a golden yellow floribunda type rose, has been awarded the John Cook Gold Medal of the American Rose Society, given every three years to the best new seedling rose of American origin. It is made possible by an endowment of the late John Cook of Baltimore. The winner was originated in the research laboratories of the Jackson & Perkins Co. of Newark, N. Y., by Eugene S. Boerner.

Soviet Russia covers nearly one sixth of the world's land area and has almost one tenth of the world's inhabitants.

Product Previews



The exasperating chore of removing sticky batter and egg whites from electric mixer beaters has been reduced to next to nothing by the improved design of the beaters on the General Electric mixer. The center shaft, which usually supports the beater blades—and invariably gets in the way of the rubber scraper, knife or kitchen brush used to clean the blades—has been eliminated. To make the homemaker's job still easier, the curved cornerless blades flow into one another, forming an unbrokean surface at their intersection and doing away with crevices in which food can lodge.

Santa's workshop is busy these days dreaming up new toys to amuse the kids. Already available locally are such things as the Junior Juke Box, a project of the Bing Crosby Research Foundation. It's a small fry version of the tavern nickel grabber, beautifully molded in colorful plastics, with lights which change colors as the record plays.

The Skeeter Bug is a pressed metal racing car decorated in bright colors, which runs in concentric figure-eight motions—just like the real carnival racing cars. A hard all-around rubber bumper saves wear and tear on the furniture.

Automobile accidents involving persons and vehicles struck at night because they couldn't be seen, will be cut down considerably through "Scotchlite," a new reflecting material reported by Science Illustrated magazine.

Although it has a smooth outer surface, in the base of the new material are 30,000 glass bead reflectors per square inch. Each of these beads will reflect headlight or flashlight rays directly back to the source instead of scattering them.

The new material comes in fabric as a tape and in rolls of plastic sheeting. Some of the uses are: arm bands and clothes trimming for pedestrians, outlining of bicycle wheels and frames, trim on automobiles, reflectorized s i d e panels on a station wagon, signs on truck rears, markers on freight cars, and trim on the black slickers of highway patrolmen.

MERRILY you'll roll along if you have a Fold-Away shopping and laundry cart. It folds with a lift of the rear frame. Opened, it locks tight so that it won't suddenly collapse as you trundle it across the cobblestones. The fold-up feature saves storage space. Rubber-tired wheels make the going easy—folded or open.

KITCHEN SHEARS that have something to boast about come apart as slick as the proverbial whistle—for removing grease and sterilizing. Simply openthe blades as far as they will go and lift apart. When the blades are partially closed, the locking device holds them firmly together for cutting—there's not the slightest chance of their coming apart while you are snipping vegetables, meat, fish or fruit. Another talking point is the serrated edge on one blade for scaling fish: the serrations on the United Kitchen Shears slant backward so that the teeth dig in to keep the food from pushing away as you cut.

ALL-IN-ONE polish that has been used by hotels and hospitals for 10 years is now available to the homemaker. It cleans, waxes and polishes all wood and metal surfaces in one operation.

WE DON'T KNOW the man who has 192 ties, but maybe you do. You might tell him that he can have a gold rack to hold his accumulation of ties. Or if you are dough-heavy to the tune of $150, buy it for him. This new jumbo rack is door-size —22½ inches long.

YOUNGSTERS can have a lot of fun with a pair of pinking shears made just for them. They cut paper only, leaving a pinked edge on their cutouts. Kiddie Pink Shears are made of plastic in five colors: blue, green, red, yellow and pink.

STOPPER for carbonated soft drink bottles keeps the zip in to the last drop. Snap-Tite, as the name indicates, snaps on and off with no tugging. Another feature is that a turn of a lever to right or left increases or decreases the stopper for a good tight fit.

IT'S ALWAYS name-tape time and you'll save a lot of sewing if you use the press-on kind called Full-Name Tags. Place the name tag where you want it on the garment, adhesive side down, press with a hot iron for about 10 seconds. Fusing takes place during the cooling process so do not handle until the tag is cool. Give the full name when ordering.

GIVE your sweaters, mittens, blankets, socks and other wool washables a rinse in Moth Chek. You just add the contents of the package to 3 gallons of tepid water for the last rinse and the garments will come out soft and fluffy but fully protected against moths until they are rewashed.

JEEP or limousine can be kept shining with a Flo-Jet Handy Wash that attaches to the garden hose. This holds a detergent that combined with the flow of water at high velocity removes dirt and grime in a jiffy. Windows, screens, porch and garage floors can be sudsed down with it, too.

SCHOOL children can carry a ruler along in their notebooks that have two or three ring binders. These slotted plastic rulers have raised numerals and millimeter markers for quick reading. They are made in crystal, red and ivory plastic.

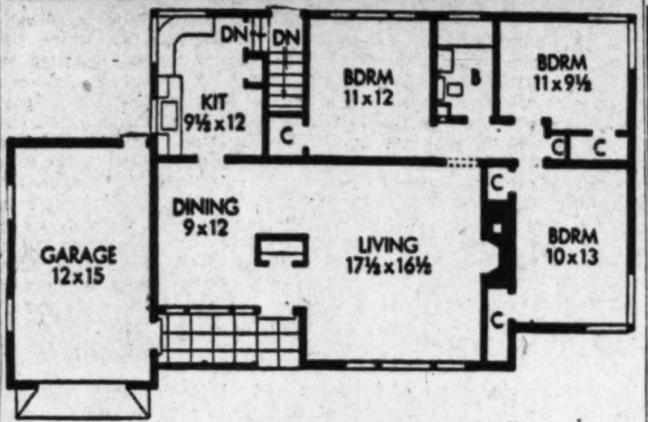
Meets Most Requirements



There are six reasons why this home plan is outstanding.

First, it has a rectangular plan, with enough variation on the front to make the house interesting to look at. A rectangular plan is also economical to build.

Second, this home has three bedrooms, arranged with a minimum of hall space, yet private from the rest of the house and close to the bath.

It has a flexible living-dining area. The only division between living and dining rooms is a clothes closet which can be placed to control traffic within the home.

A bright kitchen is the fourth feature. Light floods the room from three windows, giving an even light without glare.

There is a full basement, providing plenty of storage space.

Low lines are the sixth feature of this home plan. They give the house a snug look and make it seem longer without costing a cent for extra length.

Traffic Permits Meeting Planned

The board of directors of the Federation of Business Men's Associations will meet Wednesday at 8:15 p. m. to discuss proposed changes in procedures for revoking traffic permits.

The directors meeting in the board room of the American Security and Trust Co., 15th and Pennsylvania ave. nw., will take up a proposal by Traffic Director George Keneipp which would eliminate the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators' Permits and place its authority in the hands of the director of traffic.

Also scheduled for discussion at the meeting is the Federation's stand on elimination of income and personal property taxes in case a sales tax, already approved by the group, should be enacted in the District.

Turkey Day Home Mishaps Hurt 5 Here

1948 injuries to date	5439
1947 injuries same period	4724
1948 deaths to date	228
1947 deaths same period	194

Carving the Thanksgiving turkey caused 5 of the 90 home accidents reported last week in the District by the Red Cross Accident Prevention Service.

One death last week followed a fall at home.

A 4-year-old who received second-degree burns when he tipped over a pan of hot French-fried potatoes was one of six persons treated at local hospitals for burns last week.

An adult who fell in the bathtub and two other adults who tumbled off banisters were among 37 persons who suffered falls during the week.

Four accidental poisonings were reported, including children who drank turpentine and furniture polish, a 6-year-old girl who ate rat poison, and an 18-month-old baby who swallowed an unknown quantity of an intoxicating beverage.

Other accidents included a 2-year-old boy whose eye was burned accidentally by an adult holding a hot light bulb and a child whose playmate bit him on the chin.

Blind Man Can Thread This Needle

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP).—A blind man can now thread a needle.

With the latest gadgets he can also play cards, checkers, go fishing, cook, cut a roast, even read a slide rule or a micrometer that measures to two-thousandths of an inch.

These devices by which the blind can expand their vocational and recreational horizons are on display at the New York headquarters of the American Foundation for the Blind, clearing house for information on such gadgets.

Much of the equipment has been developed and designed by blind people themselves and is now commercially produced. Charles Ritter, the foundation's supervisor of technical research, advises:

"If you have a blind friend who wants to be a physiotherapist, biochemist, physics teacher in college, electrical engineers, X-ray darkroom worker, composer—almost anything—write to us. We know of people doing all these jobs and many others, and chances are they have tools to make the job easier."

Ritter displayed a plastic and metal needle threader. It automatically aligns needles so that a metal hook, operated by a metal strip protruding from the end of the threader, can be passed through the needle eye into a slot that receives the thread.

When it comes to cooking, the blind chef has the aid of automatic pancake turners completely covered, safety knives, carving knives with a guide that insures even slices and tableware that hooks to the sides of pots and pans and can't get lost.

How does the blind housewife separate an egg? Simple. She uses a funnel that retains the yolk and allows the white to slip through. To make certain she is pulling the right can off the shelf she simply adds a plastic band, bearing the brand and content in Braille, to the can.

Among the other simpler gadgets are playing cards with identifying pips added to the corners, square and round checkers and a board with cut-out spaces to hold them, alarm clocks with Braille dots for touch reading to which can be added a vibrator for waking the deaf-blind, and even a fishing bob that whistles when the fish bite. The bob is hollow. When pulled down in water, it creates a whistle.

Power Projects Planned in India

New Delhi, Nov. 27 (AP).—Irrigation and power development projects in India will, when completed, add more than 27 million acres of irrigated land to the existing 48 million acres. An official pamphlet says about nine million kilowatts of hydroeleceric energy will be added to the existing 500,000 kilowatts. It says that at present only about 6 per cent of the water available in rivers and subsoils are being utilized while the rest runs to waste.

Churchill Coming Round the Bend

London, Nov. 27 (AP).—There's a choo-choo named Churchill now—an engine on the Romney, Hythe & Dymchurch Railway, which is one of Britain's most famous short lines.

Winston Churchill's 12-year-old grandson, Julian Sandys, christened the engine, cracking a bottle of cider over a cylinder and reciting:

I name this locomotive Winston Churchill, after my grandfather, and on his behalf."

Bring Your 'Clinging Vine' Indoors

By Henry B. Aul

GARDENERS CAN derive a large measure of satisfaction from vines used decoratively indoors. There are a number of handsome foliage vines that make a healthy and luxuriant growth away from windows. In fact, they grow better and last longer in diffused light than in a sunny window.

When removed from the restriction of being placed in or near a window vines can form a tracery of foliage over trellis and arbor supports that will prove ornamental in almost any part of the house. They can be used to screen one section of a room from another, or as part-partition between rooms; they can be used to introduce the cool green of foliage colors into the decorative scheme, to fill empty corners and relieve barren wall spaces.

A trellis arrangement between living room and dining room transforms an ordinary corner into a feature planting that can be admired from both rooms. Three different vines growing from separate pots are trained to the trellis.

Easy to Build

THE construction of the trellis is simple. A 1x6 inch board, nailed or screwed securely to the edge of the dining room wall, is mitered to a similar board 4 feet long, secured to the ceiling. They are sanded and finished to harmonize with the room trim. Eight medium, heavy screw eyes are set 6 inches apart, close to the dining room edge of the ceiling board, while four screw eyes are set 6 inches apart at the bottom of the wall board and along the corresponding edge.

Thin wire-rope or cable of approximately 3-16-inch diameter is stretched between these ceiling and wall fasteners. Each ceiling eye receives one wire, and each eye at the bottom of the wall board receives two wires. Eight additional screw eyes, spaced 10 inches apart, are set along the wall board. These receive a smaller-gage wire stretched diagonally, as shown, across the top to bottom wires.

Three brackets or shelves are secured to the wall board at 12, 42 and 72 inches above the floor to hold three 5½ or 6-inch pots. Pots equipped with saucers are best for this purpose. The bottom one is planted with Cissus rhombifolia or C. antarctica; the middle one with Philodendron cordatum, and the top one with pothos. Long growth from each plant is secured to the wire trellis with Twist-Ems, short lengths of paper-covered wire made for this purpose.

The wires making up the trellis can be rubbed until they shine and then lacquered, or they can be painted or enameled white, pale green or another color that will harmonize with the interior color scheme.

Where the breakfast nook and kitchen are in the same room, it is desirable, in some instances, to establish a line of demarcation between the two. This is done in many residences with vines trained on a trellis of vertical poles and siv short horizontal spacers of the same material. The poles are secured at their tops to a 1x4-inch board that is fastened to the ceiling. Shallow holes are bored in this ceiling piece to receive the ends of the five 1½ to 2-inch diameter uprights. The bottom ends are fastened to the bottom of a plant box built to fit along the top of the breakfast nook bench. This box can be lined with metal or fitted with a pan, or the inside can be given three coats of white lead paint.

Peat Moss Around Pots

TWO potted philodendron and one phothos are suggested as long growing vines to train on the trellis and there is room for several pots of nepthytis, peperomia, dieffenbachia or other foliage plants to be placed between the vines. Peat moss or vermiculite can be placed in the box under and around the pots to keep soil moisture and temperatures from wide variations.

The structure is painted white or a color to match or harmonize with the kitchen color.

A third example of using vines for ornamental and architectural effects has three pot-grown philodendron trained on a rope trellis that serves to partly screen a view into the living room from the entrance door. Several nepthytis or other foliage plants in pots can be grown between the vines.

They are set in a planting box of brick, 10x12 inches by 6 feet, that is built on the floor diagonally out from the front wall of the living room. The inside of this brick trough is coated with a waterproof masonry coating to make it watertight, but all plants are kept in the pots with peat moss or vermiculite placed under and around them.

The latticelike network of half-inch manila rope on which the vines are trained is supported by a frame consisting of 1x4-inch vertical wallboard, a vertical pole extending from the end of the plant box to the ceiling, and a 1x4-inch horizontal top piece connecting the top of the wallboard to the vertical pole. This pole can be of metal, dressed wood or bamboo. It is 1½ to 2 inches in diameter and extends through a circular hole made in the end of the top member of the frame.

Screw eyes spaced approximately 2 feet apart on the top, bottom and sides of the screen serve as guides through which the rope is threaded to form the looped lattice. At the two points where the rope extends into the planting box, the screw eyes are placed in cross pieces set between the bricks.

This screen is finished to conform with the living room colors. The rope might be stained a color or left natural and varnished or painted white or a color. The pole, top and wall piece could be stained and varnished or painted. The bricks might be left natural and waxed or painted the same as the pole and other wood members.

Control of Bookings Is Heiman's Ace

By Richard L. Coe

CHIPS FROM A GNAWED BIRD: From the president of Actors' Equity's Clarence Derwent, and several members of the theatrical union's council, comes word that several New York theatrical producers think Washington resents Equity's stand on the National theater's segregation policy.

The big boys seem to construe Washington's anger at the loss of its only living theater to mean criticism of Equity and the Dramatists' Guild's stand against segregation.

Such is definitely not the case. Apart from the apathetic silence of the many, those who do discuss the matter for the record have only the highest praise for Equity and the Guild. From letters, phone calls and innumerable conversations with varied groups, this department would like to assure those New York producers who have misinterpreted the matter that such criticism refers to Marcus Heiman and those producers who stand in fear of his double role as the National's controller and as Lord High Ruler of the powerful United Booking Office.

More than anything else, it is probably Heiman's control of the UBO (which books 90 per cent of the Nation's touring plays) that strikes fear in the hearts of the producers. So far, this has been a silent weapon. But it means that any producer who attempts to break the Washington deadlock fears that when one of his plays asks for cross-country routing by the UBO, the play may be given such long jumps and undesirable bookings that the project will be unable to pay its way.

This role which Heiman could play also was felt by Ted Granik's so-far abortive effort to build a legitimate theater in the uptown area. It means that if such a theater were opened, Heiman, even though he routed his UBO-booked plays into the new theater, could conceivably then reopen the National stage and send the superior plays into his own house. So far Heiman's shoes are clean, but as a silent weapon, his UBO is a real threat.

WHICH ACCOUNTS for the pressures now being put on Equity to shift its stand. Last week Equity reiterated its ban with the following statement:

"The officers, council and membership of Actors' Equity Association and the Chorus Equity Association regret that the people of Washington, D. C., have been deprived of the legitimate theater.

"They believe that in the conversion of the National Theater to motion pictures and the loss of the only legitimate theater in the city, the theater patrons of Washington were not considered and that if they had been given the opportunity, they would have welcomed the elimination of the discrimination in order to keep the legitimate theater.

"Equity believes, as its second vice president, Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner, said 18 months ago: 'There is an increasing sense of amazement on the part of thinking people that the capital of a great Nation, to which most of the world is turning for guidance, should not be representative of its professed policy of democracy.'

"And so Equity is convinced that the legitimate theater's absence from Washington will be temporary and pledges to the people of this country assistance and cooperation in bringing back to Washington a theater where no one shall be barred because of race, color or creed."

A ROUND-ROBIN LETTER from members of the teaching staff of Georgetown University brings up the question of segregation at Ford's Theater, Baltimore, which Washington playgoers lately have been attending.

The writers state they did not know Ford's was being picketed by the AVC and the NAACP, although the fact has been alluded to many times in these columns.

The case of Ford's raises several points. The reason the writers and actors have put the pressure on Washington's National is clarified by Miss Skinner's allusion to this city as a world capital.

Since Equity can't very well throw the book at all the cities on the segregated list, it has to start somewhere and what city is more natural than a capital which professes democracy? Furthermore, Washington's National was guilty of total discrimination; other cities practice segregation, bad enough, but several inches less in total crass. Even idealists have to be practical.

So it was that Charles Boyer's blast at the end of his week at Ford's ("I will never again play Baltimore while segregation is in force") was both foolish and in poor taste. Boyer had played his week and made his money; his words do not fit his actions. If he did not know Ford's was segregated, he should have known it as a member of Equity. It was his business to know it and empty phrases only give aid and comfort to the forces of reaction.

THERE IS ONE cheerful hope on the horizon, but it's a very thin one indeed. The Board of Recreation, which controls the school auditoriums, is considering opening auditorium facilities after school hours to mixed groups.

The catch here is that such a ruling would apply only to Negro schools. Since 99 per cent of the groups seeking such facilities—the AVC, League of Women Voters, etc.—are dominantly white, such a plan is hypocritical on the face of it. This plan is being pushed by the chairman of the board, Harry Wender, president of the Argo Lodge of B'nai B'rith.

If Wender would push his plan sincerely to its logical conclusion and have done with his empty-hearted approach, the result would open the way for Heiman to follow the official policy he says he seeks.

For Wender to grasp the nettle firmly might well restore the living theater to this capital of free thought.

In Right Places

Artist Looks For a Girl Who Bulges

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—New York models are supposed to be the most glamorous girls in the world.

But not to Al Moore.

Moore is an artist who paints pictures of girls for calendars. He needs models, but the only thing he can find around New York are flat-chested beanpoles who have dieted down so they can model clothes for fashion publications.

His greatest need right now is a buxom country girl who drinks plenty of milk, eats French fried potatoes and bulges in the right places.

Jane Russell and Joan Caulfield would be fine, but they're busy making movies in Hollywood. Rita Hayworth would be okay, too, although Moore is worried by her latest photographs.

"You don't think she's getting a little thinner, do you?" he asked.

Too Skinny

BUT back to the New York models.

"They're too skinny and too flat," he said gloomily. "They look like tall, pale poles with hat boxes."

He has tried inviting them out to his Kent, Conn., estate for a week before a modeling job so he and his wife could feed them lots of proteins. The models, however, take a dim view of the extra pounds.

"They can't afford to pass up the raw-boned fashion modeling business," Moore said.

Now he looks for girls from outside New York or picks ones who have just started professional modeling.

"They're pretty nice kids for the first six or eight months after they get to New York," he said. "But a long cigarette holder and a little starvation and I have to start looking again."

Maybe Flo Mozert (above), herself an artist, is the type for Al Moore, who is looking for a lass who eats plenty of French fried potatoes and who bulges in the right places. Al wants to put such a girl on his calendars

No Man's Idea

MOORE claims that the lean look of today's so-called smart woman definitely was no man's idea.

All men, he insists, prefer the ample figure. He checked back into Darwin and Freud to find reasons and decided that angular women can't compete with the instinctive feelings most men have for women who remind them of their mothers.

Two Beauties and Three Beasts

IDA LUPINO, who's giving such a biting portrait of a night spot songstress in "Roadhouse" at the Columbia, is a cat-fancier

MISS JOSEPHINE is the simian creature above, a 41-year-old character actress, who made her screen debut in "What Price Glory," 22 years ago. Now she's completing her 100th screen role for Warner's in "Ever the Beginning." The young lady with the pooch, lower right, is Jean Simmons, the Ophelia of Olivier's "Hamlet" on the Little and Playhouse screens. The pup wandered into the Simmons yard just as the picture was getting underway. His name, naturally, is "Hamlet"

No Time for Mirth On Suspense Hour

By Sonia Stein

IT AMUSES me not one whit to have somebody tell me between chortles about the wonderful radio program he heard, and how awfully sorry he was that I missed it.

Even in print, unbridled joy over a program the reader undoubtedly missed because ye editor wasn't sharp enough to know in advance it would be good, seems something short of constructive.

"Suspense" finally took this bull by the horns and sent out handsomely bound copies of several of their upcoming scripts. Their help is purely temporary, and far from satisfactory, since the scripts can only hint at what Peter Lorre, Claude Rains, Rosalind Russell and a vibrating violin string cut sharply with a razor will add up to.

However, it is possible to see that the actors are not going to be asked to waste their eerie efforts on anything light and gay, Messrs. Rains and Lorre will be heard this Thursday (WTOP, 9 p. m.) in a well-constructed item about a strangler loose in London. Miss Russell and the violin string will work out in a shivery little piece called "The Sisters" the following week.

A FIVE-HOUR period of "good" music will be offered every Sunday beginning today at noon over WASH-FM. Each "Sunday Music Festival" will include light classics, popular symphonies and collector's items. A complete opera will be broadcast on each program, beginning about 2 p. m. Today's opera is Bizet's "Carmen."

"Is Love Blind?" will be the first subject brought up on the "You and Marriage" series of five broadcasts on CBS this week. Heard at 11:15 p. m. over WTOP Monday through Friday, this week's segment of the regular "You and . . ." series will include discussion of the universally fascinating subjects of love at first sight, working wives, in-laws, planning for junior, the double standard, the predatory female, courtship and other related items.

I WONDER IF WGAY has looked at its coverage map lately. The staff must think the station can't be heard in the area serviced by Washington newspapers.

On a woefully dull movie review program last Sunday, the announcer gloated that the WGAY commentator "actually went to the movies with the other people" instead of relying on information from Hollywood press agents "as most newspapers do." Venturing to ask our local newspaper critics what they thought of this canard, I was accidentally trampled as they rushed from one movie to another.

"METROPOLITAN Opera Auditions of the Air" begin today at 5 over WMAL. This annual series which gives young singers an opportunity to try out for the Met, concludes in the spring with the awarding of $1000 and a Met contract. Today's aspirants are Joan Francis, lyric soprano, and Frank Edwinn, bass.

WMAL-TV will pick up some of the Roller Derby sessions from the New York Armory during the next two weeks. The rough and tumble sport, which resembles six-day bicycle racing and wrestling at times, will be aired here this Friday and next at 9:30, and next Saturday at 8:30 p. m. Tonight at 7, films of previous roller derbies and interviews with players and officials will be offered as a preview.

Bert Lytell, who customarily acts as host on the "Philco Television Playhouse," will appear in the role he originally created in "I Like It Here," a comedy by A. B. Shiffrin, tonight at 9 over WNBW. Oscar Karlweis will also play his original role. Marjorie Gateson and Jennifer Bunker will appear in smaller parts.

Tonight's "Actors' Studio" presentation on WMAL-TV at 8:30 will be "Ten Per-Cent," a comedy about a literary agent, adapted for video from a short story by Bruce Gould and Beatrice Blackmar.

By John Crosby

"THE 13 years from the beginning of 1933 to the end of 1945 was an era for ear. The first and perhaps the last. Future great happenings will be televised and be remembered visually as well as in the mind's ear."

The most important and moving sounds of that era of massive history, in which radio only coincidentally came of age, have been superbly condensed by Edward R. Murrow and Fred Friendly in an album of five records now on sale in book and record stores.

The paragraph above is part of the introduction. It explains better than I could the purpose and importance of the album, called "I Can Hear It Now," possibly the first volume of aural history ever produced. Murrow and Friendly, in what they describe as a labor of love, spent two years poring over 500 hours of recorded noises, most of them taken off the radio. Out of the 500 hours came 45 minutes of the most significant oratory and other sounds of our time, pulled together, explained and introduced in a running commentary by Murrow.

They're All Here

ALL THE famed voices are here—the heroes, the villains, the mountebanks, the clowns. "We held the distinction of being the only nation that ever went to the poorhouse in an automobile," declares that drawling, mocking voice from the past—Will Rogers, wisecracking about a not-very-funny depression in 1932. And 1933. "We have nothing to fear but fear itself." The radio technique of the greatest radio orator of them all had not then been perfected, and it's interesting to watch the devlopment of President Roosevelt's confidence and mastery as the 13 years roll by.

There are a babble of lesser voices in the middle years. LaGuardia, playing Falstaff to Roosevelt's Henry IV, boasting he hasn't a friend among the county bosses. Huey Long redistributing everyone's bank account. The Biblical imprecations of John L. Lewis. A former King of England telling a hushed world he can no longer carry the heavy burden without the help of the woman he loves.

"We take you now to Lakehurst, N. J." . . . Herbert Morrison of WLS, Chicago, described the great airship Hindenburg approaching its mooring, almost motionless in the sky. Then: "Oh . . . oh, it's terrible. It's terrible." This incoherent babble is possibly the most frightening single broadcast in the album.

Adolf Hitler's sing-song ranting seems from this distance remote and ridiculous but there is still a note of menace in the massed and organized Sieg Heils that greeted every other sentence. Then the precise, spinsterish voice of Neville Chamberlain after Munich: "He told me privately that (Sudentenland) is the end of his territorial claims in Europe."

"The only defeat the Nazis suffered that year," comments Murrow glumly, as Clem McCarthy counts out Max Schmeling in the first round of his second Joe Louis fight.

Pace Quickens

IN 1940 and '41, the pace quickens, the babble of sound increases in fury. Charles A Lindberg at an American First rally at Madison Square Garden: "If we enter a war to save democracy abroad, we may lose it at home."

Roosevelt in Chicago: "The hand that held the dagger has stuck it in the back of its neighbor."

"I speak to you for the first time as Prime Minister." He had nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat. There isn't as much Churchillian oratory as I'd like but there is enough to remind us again that language was used more effectively on both sides of this conflict than at any time since Demosthenes.

"Let us brace ourselves to our duties and so bear ourselves that, if the British Empire and it Commonwealth last for a thousand years, men will still say, 'This was their finest hour!'"

French Post High Marks In Music

By Paul Hume

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the French National Orchestra in Constitution Hall next Wednesday night.

The orchestra is touring the United States under the sponsorship of the French government, with Ambassador Henri Bonnet as patron. The program for the evening is a brilliant representation of the history of French music from 1700 to the present.

Unlike some of her European neighbors, France has consistently maintained high standards of creative activity in music through every century in the history of western musical culture. From the twelfth century with its troubadour songs, through the years until today, France has poured out a wealth of music and musicians in every sphere.

The influence of French musical achievement upon the rest of the occidental world is not measurable.

The folk songs of Provence, of Normandy, Brittany, and of the Basque region are as distinct as those of our own Kentucky hills or the Texas cow country. The sacred and secular motets and ballades of the fourteenth century Machaut had their influence on later writers of chansons, those unique folk songs which French composers right up to present times have delighted in originating or imitating.

Leader in Dance

IN THE realm of dance, France has long led the world. America enjoyed a visit from the Paris Opera Ballet earlier this season, and saw again standards established in the cradle of ballet. Visitors returning in recent weeks from Paris have spoken enthusiastically of the staging, singing, and acting of operas in both the Grand Opera and the Opera Comique in Paris. Since the war almost all scenery and costumes have been restudied. Lighting and mise-en-scene (itself a phase taken directly from the French), have been completely overhauled.

Some of music's greatest names are contained in the musical heritage of France. Couperin, Rameau, Lully, Berlioz, Gounod, Faure, Franck, Debussy, Ravel, and today Honegger, Milhaud, Poulenc, and Messiaen form a cloud of witnesses to testify to the genius of France in the realm of music.

Opera, symphony, songs, chamber music, the dance, and great religious music have constantly thrived in an atmosphere of intellectual stimulation. The official interest of the French government, as typified in the establishment of the Academie Nationale de Musique et de Danse in 1669, cannot be discounted in its beneficial encouragement of music and its allied arts.

The Prix de Rome

TO THIS royal patronage was added the Prix de Rome, granted annually to the outstanding candidate from the Paris Conservatory. While several of France's greatest musicians were denied this prize for musically political reasons (Faure, Saint-Saens, and Ravel failed to win the prize), the yearly competition has produced and aided some of the finest efforts in French composition. It has also spurred on that host of lesser musicians and composers, who have either not possessed a first-class talent, or have failed to catch public attention.

Among this list of lesser men are counted such fine gifts as those of Ambroise Thomas, Massenet, Pierne, Charpentier, Henri Rabaud (once conductor of the Boston Symphony), Florent Schmitt, Marcel Dupre, and many more.

In the contemporary scene among performing artists, how much poorer we would be without Robert Casadesus, Zino Francescatti, the brilliant new violinist Ginette Neveu, Lily Pons, Martial Singher, and the superb Pierre Bernac, who made his American debut in Washington three weeks ago.

There is a Gallic manner of presentation which is unique, and in its way remarkable. French orchestras, at their best, play with beautifully balanced tone, produced without effort, possessing remarkable clarity rather than that amalgam of homogeneity which is too often the goal of American orchestras. There is restraint in the style of the finest French musicians which mirrors

Anderson Drama Opens Tomorrow in Baltimore

MAXWELL ANDERSON'S first drama since "Joan of Lorraine" opens a week's pre-Broadway run tomorrow night at Baltimore's Ford's Theater.

This is titled "Anne of the Thousand Days," the story of Henry VIII and his ill-fated second Queen, Anne Boleyn. The drama represents Anderson's third dip into English history for material; "Elizabeth the Queen" and "Mary of Scotland" were among the most popular plays of the '30's.

Rex Harrison, most recently of the Hollywood screen, plays Henry. The star made his first American stage appearance at E street's National 10 years ago in a short-lived comedy titled "Sweet Aloes;" his most recent screen appearance was in "Escape," and he'll soon be seen in "Unfaitfully Yours."

Anne will be acted by Joyce Redman, the lively redhead who scored with the Old Vic company during its New York season two years ago, acting Doll Tearsheets in "Henry IV, Part II" and Sonya in "Uncle Vanya." Her most recent role in London was in Sartre's "Crime Passionel," which is being played this season here as "Red Gloves," with Joan Tetzel in the Redman role.

Ford's matinee days are Wednesday and Saturday.

4 New Plays Challenge Broadway During Week

By Jack O'Brian

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP).—"Light Up The Sky," Moss Hart's funny valentine, opened this week at the Royale Theater. It's about a play during the first night of its tryout engagement in Boston. The conflict arises over the way the characters battle with bad manners when the play looks like a turkey. The characters supposedly are prototypes of the most publicized families of this gaudy Manhattan Main street.

It's a fashionable back-fence squabble among stylish gentry whose yards look out on each others' penthouses. The tone is highly sophiscated in the cafe society understanding of the word, and it is almost always very funny.

There are times when Moss Hart, the author, indulges in some opinions on the dignity and future of the drayma which make sense, although not much diversion. He is in the right place when he deals heavily in highly literate abuse. That's his well-tailored long suit and when he dons it he's a noisy delight. Going soft doesn't suit the Hart dramatic reflexes too well. Fortunately he doesn't go mushy too frequently.

When he is dealing in prototypes of Billy and Eleanor Holm Rose, Guthrie McClintic, Gertrude Lawrence and other shiny Broadway luminaries, he's on familiar, if slightly painful, literary ground.

So far as acting is concerned, Moss has assembled a splendid cast. Sam Levene plays the rather broad low comedy caricature of Billy Rose. Audrey Christie is a roistering parody of Billy's personal mermaid. Virginia Field, Glenn Anders, Phillis Povah, Barry Nelson and Bartlett Robinson are other cafe society carbons, and the author has Philip Ober playing his protagonist.

THE EVENING before, a play of equally bright content but of less thematic nastiness opened at the Morosco Theater, entitled "Goodbye, My Fancy," by Fay Kanin.

Its credit side is brightened further by the presence of Shirley Booth as a superb sardonic comedienne, the best we have around Broadway; the Broadway debut of Miss Madeleine Carroll, whose warmth, assurance and solid presence establishes her right off as a lady who is welcome back anytime she pleases; a story by Miss Kanin full of good talk, good comedy and an attitude which fortunately isn't a message, blithe and bright for two acts before it starts to ride off in several hapless directions or no direction at all.

It has good direction by Sam Wanamaker, who also gives a sharp, cryptic portrayal of one of those tough young intellectuals, and Conrad Nagel as a college president whose white-tower conservatism serves as the intellectual villain of the piece.

Briefly: "For Heaven's Sake, Mother," starring Nancy Carroll and Molly Picon, open at the Belasco Theater and closed four days later. Julie Berns is the literary culprit.

"The Young and Fair" by N. Richard Nash, opened at the Fulton Theater. It's set in a girl's school, an exercise in collegiate manners in which Frances Starr gives an outstanding performance.

Maggie Sullavan Has a New Play

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP).—Margaret Sullavan and Leo Genn, both plagued by many theatrical offers, have signed for a Broadway production of a play about a celebrated British court case.

The play has had an interesting and theatrically hazardous history. Based on the noted Thompson-Bywaters case—one of the most sensational in British jurisprudence and in which Mrs. Thompson was the last woman hanged in England—its course has been stormy indeed. British authorities would not permit its production in England for years, because it hinted a miscarriage of justice. It eventually was played in a private club, as many such controversial British dramas have been in the past. Renewed interest in the play came some months ago when Parliament debated abolition of capital punishment, with the Thompson-Bywaters case figuring prominently in the discussions.

It finally was presented in London after acquisition of a license but was taken off the boards when it was forced to shift theaters because of an original booking commitment. The Lord Chancellor, says Henry Sherek, who produced it in London, thereafter refused a subsequent license because of protests from the family of the hanged woman.

Sherek is here in behalf of "Edward, My Son," Broadway's most resplendant current smash hit. The original physical production, having been rendered useless by the Lord Chancellor's reluctance, will be shipped here for the version starring Miss Sullavan and Genn. They will start practicing January 3 for a Broadway premiere the week of February 21.

CUFF STUFF: No plays opening this week . . . "Magdalena" is quitting the Ziegfeld Theater next Saturday, after 88 Broadway performances. Including its West Coast engagements, it has played a total of 144 times . . . Mae West opens finally at Montclair, N. J., in her dependable antique, "Diamond Lil," on Monday . . . Kitty Carlisle will be starred in the Broadway presentation of Benjamin Britten's opera, "The Rape of Lucretia," which follows "Magdalena" into the Ziegfeld December 29.

"Anne of the Thousand Days" will tenant the Shubert Theater, easing "My Romance" into the Adelphi . . . Brock Pemberton sends along word from London that he's delighted with his British cast of "Harvey" . . . "Inside U. S. A." has paid off its backers and is starting to roll in the profits at the rate of more than $5000 a week . . . Its original cost was $235,000.

THE HARTMANS, last seen in "Angel in the Wings," will be in Anthony B. Farrell's new musical, "All for Love." . . . Farrell's last tune show, "Hold It," also was all for love; it didn't make any money . . . In fact, he dropped almost $350,000 on the deal . . . Farrell's the Albany, N. Y., industrialist with a big crush on the theater who bought the big Warner Theater on Broadway, renaming it the Mark Hellinger Theater, after the late Broadway columnist-producer.

Beautiful Marilyn Day, tall wonder of "Small Wonder," has been given star billing on a weekly network television show on WJZ-TV. . . . "The Play's the Thing" starts touring December 27 . . . It closes December 18 at the Booth Theater after 244 performances.

That Redskin Hymn's No Ordinary Steal

By Harman W. Nichols

SEEMS there are very few original tunes any more.

"The Eyes of Texas"—anthem of the proud Lone Star State—is billed as original. Pffft! It's a theft from "I've Been Workin' on the Railroad," which, in turn, is a steal from "I've Been Workin' on the Levee."

So what would you-all expect for "Hail to the Redskins," the marchy spine-tingler which is the theme song for the Washington professional football team? A steal?

You said it, and you can say it again, and again. It's a whole flock of steals.

The composer of the song is a fiddler named Barnee Breeskin, who for 18 years has had a band in the Blue Room of the Shoreham. Like other musical thieves—using the word on advice of counsel—Barnee checks his sources before he steals.

Stealing, in the musical profession, is popular. Not to mention profitable, and it's within the law.

The Library of Congress operates a department called "the Folklore Division," headed by Duncan Emrich. It's Duncan's job to look up the history of various tunes and rule whether they should be declared "public domain." In other words, whether swiping them would be a copyright violation. If a song has lived through the ages, it's supposed to belong to all of us.

It seems there are few, if any, violations in most of the songs we hear at the concert hall and over the radio.

And if Emrich ever had a look at "Hail to the Redskins" he'd have a hatful of research ahead of him. Between Bandleader Breeskin and Corinne Griffith, wife of George Marshall, who owns the Redskins, they ran the scale. Mrs. Marshall wrote the words.

Washington being a border town, Barnee thought he ought to straddle the fence. So the first 16 bars are copied from Dixie," or "I Wish I Was in the Land of Cotton," etc.

He balanced it with part of "Yankee Doodle."

The fiddler thought it would be nice to get something Indian in the piece, so he hit upon a tom-tom he remembered for the middle part. By accident he struck one of the radio give-away mystery tunes. But don't ask him the name of it—he doesn't know and wouldn't have if they'd called him with $30,000 or so at stake.

There's also—by mistake, according to the dark-haired, chubby leader—a steal from a Sunday school song.

And for a punch—one of the biggest steals of all. From the stirring French national song, "The Marseillaise."

Maggie Sullavan Has a New Play

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP).—Margaret Sullavan and Leo Genn, both plagued by many theatrical offers, have signed for a Broadway production of a play about a celebrated British court case.

The play has had an interesting and theatrically hazardous history. Based on the noted Thompson-Bywaters case—one of the most sensational in British jurisprudence and in which Mrs. Thompson was the last woman hanged in England—its course has been stormy indeed. British authorities would not permit its production in England for years, because it hinted a miscarriage of justice. It eventually was played in a private club, as many such controversial British dramas have been in the past. Renewed interest in the play came some months ago when Parliament debated abolition of capital punishment, with the Thompson-Bywaters case figuring prominently in the discussions.

It finally was presented in London after acquisition of a license but was taken off the boards when it was forced to shift theaters because of an original booking commitment. The Lord Chancellor, says Henry Sherek, who produced it in London, thereafter refused a subsequent license because of protests from the family of the hanged woman.

Sherek is here in behalf of "Edward, My Son," Broadway's most resplendant current smash hit. The original physical production, having been rendered useless by the Lord Chancellor's reluctance, will be shipped here for the version starring Miss Sullavan and Genn. They will start practicing January 3 for a Broadway premiere the week of February 21.

CUFF STUFF: No plays opening this week . . . "Magdalena" is quitting the Ziegfeld Theater next Saturday, after 88 Broadway performances. Including its West Coast engagements, it has played a total of 144 times . . . Mae West opens finally at Montclair, N. J., in her dependable antique, "Diamond Lil," on Monday . . . Kitty Carlisle will be starred in the Broadway presentation of Benjamin Britten's opera, "The Rape of Lucretia," which follows "Magdalena" into the Ziegfeld December 29.

"Anne of the Thousand Days" will tenant the Shubert Theater, easing "My Romance" into the Adelphi . . . Brock Pemberton sends along word from London that he's delighted with his British cast of "Harvey" . . . "Inside U. S. A." has paid off its backers and is starting to roll in the profits at the rate of more than $5000 a week . . . Its original cost was $235,000.

THE HARTMANS, last seen in "Angel in the Wings," will be in Anthony B. Farrell's new musical, "All for Love." . . . Farrell's last tune show, "Hold It," also was all for love; it didn't make any money . . . In fact, he dropped almost $350,000 on the deal . . . Farrell's the Albany, N. Y., industrialist with a big crush on the theater who bought the big Warner Theater on Broadway, renaming it the Mark Hellinger Theater, after the late Broadway columnist-producer.

Beautiful Marilyn Day, tall wonder of "Small Wonder," has been given star billing on a weekly network television show on WJZ-TV. . . . "The Play's the Thing" starts touring December 27 . . . It closes December 18 at the Booth Theater after 244 performances.

JOHN LOVES HER: Katherine Hall, as Mary, in the George Washington University Players' "John Loves Mary," which will be played in Lisner Auditorium Friday and Saturday nights after preview performances in the service hospitals. Eugene Picciano and Tom Walker are among Miss Hall's stage companions

Anderson Drama Opens Tomorrow in Baltimore

MAXWELL ANDERSON'S first drama since "Joan of Lorraine" opens a week's pre-Broadway run tomorrow night at Baltimore's Ford's Theater.

This is titled "Anne of the Thousand Days," the story of Henry VIII and his ill-fated second Queen, Anne Boleyn. The drama represents Anderson's third dip into English history for material; "Elizabeth the Queen" and "Mary of Scotland" were among the most popular plays of the '30's.

Rex Harrison, most recently of the Hollywood screen, plays Henry. The star made his first American stage appearance at E street's National 10 years ago in a short-lived comedy titled "Sweet Aloes;" his most recent screen appearance was in "Escape," and he'll soon be seen in "Unfaitfully Yours."

Anne will be acted by Joyce Redman, the lively redhead who scored with the Old Vic company during its New York season two years ago, acting Doll Tearsheets in "Henry IV, Part II" and Sonya in "Uncle Vanya." Her most recent role in London was in Sartre's "Crime Passionel," which is being played this season here as "Red Gloves," with Joan Tetzel in the Redman role.

Ford's matinee days are Wednesday and Saturday.

4 New Plays Challenge Broadway During Week

By Jack O'Brian

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP).—"Light Up The Sky," Moss Hart's funny valentine, opened this week at the Royale Theater. It's about a play during the first night of its tryout engagement in Boston. The conflict arises over the way the characters battle with bad manners when the play looks like a turkey. The characters supposedly are prototypes of the most publicized families of this gaudy Manhattan Main street.

It's a fashionable back-fence squabble among stylish gentry whose yards look out on each others' penthouses. The tone is highly sophiscated in the cafe society understanding of the word, and it is almost always very funny.

There are times when Moss Hart, the author, indulges in some opinions on the dignity and future of the drayma which make sense, although not much diversion. He is in the right place when he deals heavily in highly literate abuse. That's his well-tailored long suit and when he dons it he's a noisy delight. Going soft doesn't suit the Hart dramatic reflexes too well. Fortunately he doesn't go mushy too frequently.

When he is dealing in prototypes of Billy and Eleanor Holm Rose, Guthrie McClintic, Gertrude Lawrence and other shiny Broadway luminaries, he's on familiar, if slightly painful, literary ground.

So far as acting is concerned, Moss has assembled a splendid cast. Sam Levene plays the rather broad low comedy caricature of Billy Rose. Audrey Christie is a roistering parody of Billy's personal mermaid. Virginia Field, Glenn Anders, Phillis Povah, Barry Nelson and Bartlett Robinson are other cafe society carbons, and the author has Philip Ober playing his protagonist.

THE EVENING before, a play of equally bright content but of less thematic nastiness opened at the Morosco Theater, entitled "Goodbye, My Fancy," by Fay Kanin.

Its credit side is brightened further by the presence of Shirley Booth as a superb sardonic comedienne, the best we have around Broadway; the Broadway debut of Miss Madeleine Carroll, whose warmth, assurance and solid presence establishes her right off as a lady who is welcome back anytime she pleases; a story by Miss Kanin full of good talk, good comedy and an attitude which fortunately isn't a message, blithe and bright for two acts before it starts to ride off in several hapless directions or no direction at all.

It has good direction by Sam Wanamaker, who also gives a sharp, cryptic portrayal of one of those tough young intellectuals, and Conrad Nagel as a college president whose white-tower conservatism serves as the intellectual villain of the piece.

Briefly: "For Heaven's Sake, Mother," starring Nancy Carroll and Molly Picon, open at the Belasco Theater and closed four days later. Julie Berns is the literary culprit.

"The Young and Fair" by N. Richard Nash, opened at the Fulton Theater. It's set in a girl's school, an exercise in collegiate manners in which Frances Starr gives an outstanding performance.

That Redskin Hymn's No Ordinary Steal

By Harman W. Nichols

SEEMS there are very few original tunes any more.

"The Eyes of Texas"—anthem of the proud Lone Star State—is billed as original. Pffft! It's a theft from "I've Been Workin' on the Railroad," which, in turn, is a steal from "I've Been Workin' on the Levee."

So what would you-all expect for "Hail to the Redskins," the marchy spine-tingler which is the theme song for the Washington professional football team? A steal?

You said it, and you can say it again, and again. It's a whole flock of steals.

The composer of the song is a fiddler named Barnee Breeskin, who for 18 years has had a band in the Blue Room of the Shoreham. Like other musical thieves—using the word on advice of counsel—Barnee checks his sources before he steals.

Stealing, in the musical profession, is popular. Not to mention profitable, and it's within the law.

The Library of Congress operates a department called "the Folklore Division," headed by Duncan Emrich. It's Duncan's job to look up the history of various tunes and rule whether they should be declared "public domain." In other words, whether swiping them would be a copyright violation. If a song has lived through the ages, it's supposed to belong to all of us.

It seems there are few, if any, violations in most of the songs we hear at the concert hall and over the radio.

And if Emrich ever had a look at "Hail to the Redskins" he'd have a hatful of research ahead of him. Between Bandleader Breeskin and Corinne Griffith, wife of George Marshall, who owns the Redskins, they ran the scale. Mrs. Marshall wrote the words.

Washington being a border town, Barnee thought he ought to straddle the fence. So the first 16 bars are copied from Dixie," or "I Wish I Was in the Land of Cotton," etc.

He balanced it with part of "Yankee Doodle."

The fiddler thought it would be nice to get something Indian in the piece, so he hit upon a tom-tom he remembered for the middle part. By accident he struck one of the radio give-away mystery tunes. But don't ask him the name of it—he doesn't know and wouldn't have if they'd called him with $30,000 or so at stake.

There's also—by mistake, according to the dark-haired, chubby leader—a steal from a Sunday school song.

And for a punch—one of the biggest steals of all. From the stirring French national song, "The Marseillaise."

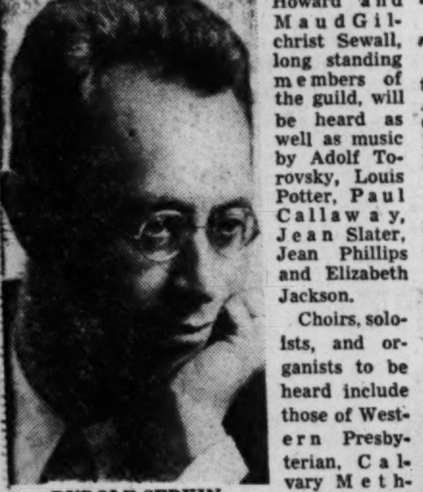
The Music Box

Organists' Program on Today

THIS AFTERNOON at 4 the Washington Chapter of the American Guild of Organists will present a program of works by their own members. Music by Edgar Priest, Harry Wheaton Howard and Maud Gilchrist Sewall, long standing members of the guild, will be heard as well as music by Adolf Torovsky, Louis Potter, Paul Callaway, Jean Slater, Jean Phillips and Elizabeth Jackson.



RUDOLF SERKIN

Choirs, soloists, and organists to be heard include those of Western Presbyterian, Calvary Methodist, and Grace Episcopal Churches, with Annabelle Hoge, Cathleen Carrico, Robert Nicholson, Louis Potter, Temple Dunn, and others.

Thursday evening the annual Westminster choirs of Washington concert in Constitution Hall under Dr. Williamson.

Tonight Charles Dana Beaschler presents David McK. Williams' recent cantata, "A Hymn to the Immortals," at his 8 o'clock service.

Tomorrow noon the Washington Music Teachers' Association will hear Genevieve Rystrom, soprano, accompanied by Dorothy Radde Emery. The program, scheduled for the luncheon meeting at the Willard, includes songs by Schubert, Wolff, Marx, Faure, Poulenc, Hindemith, Naginski, Nordoff, Engel, and Spier.

Olea Aanrud, contralto, will sing for the D. C. Branch, National League of American Pen Women, today at 4 p. m. Songs and arias by Grieg, Verdi, and Herbert.

Mrs. Kathleen Davison, national president of the National Music Professional Fraternity, will be honored Monday evening at 6 in the Arts Club. The music of the evening will include a Beethoven sonata, Brahms variations on an original theme, and art songs.

THE WEEK'S outstanding programs include Pinza's good list this afternoon, the organ recitals of Louis Potter and Lewis Atwater, the Faure Requiem at Washington Cathedral, and Paul Callaway's astonishing list of a cappella choral music in the Phillips Gallery.

Takoma Park Presbyterian Church also lists a fine set of works for tonight. Rudolf Serkin's program tomorrow evening promises both much and little, musically.

William Watkins has an unusual organ program set up for Tuesday evening, and the French National Orchestra on Wednesday is one of the fine programs of the year.

The Bach Aria Group in the Library of Congress Friday is an exceptional organization in some of the world's most notable music.

Mitchell Again to Lead

THE National Symphony Orchestra Association announces a series of six Students' Concerts, beginning January 11 at Gonzaga High School, 27 I st. nw.

The other concerts will be held January 12, Western High School; January 14, Armstrong High School; February 28, Roosevelt High School; March 21, Eastern High School, and March 28, Armstrong again. All concerts begin at 2:30 p. m.

The association says it is happy to announce that each concert will cost 20 cents less than last year. This year's concerts are 40 cents.

Howard Mitchell, the National Symphony's associate conductor, will conduct these concerts again this year, as well as act as commentator. Adults who would like additional background information on the appreciation of symphonic compositions, as well as parents, are invited to attend.

Munch Here Wednesday

strikingly a corresponding economy of means in their native music.

Two Programs

WEDNESDAY NIGHT, Munch and his orchestra will unfold for Washingtonians one of the two excellent programs they are playing in America this fall. A Berlioz overture, suites by Debussy, Roussel, and Ravel and an American Toccata are Munch's choices. The Toccata is by Walter Piston, one of our leading composers. It was commissioned by Munch, especially for this tour.

That America regards the music and musicians of France highly is attested in the fact that Charles Munch has been selected as successor to Serge Koussevitsky to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra beginning next season.

MUNCH

Two other French conductors, Henri Rabaud and Pierre Monteux, have held that post in the past. Monteux, now conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, is one of the most honored conductors in the world today, and rightly so.

We commend, and are deeply grateful to, the French government and Ambassador Bonnet for enabling us to hear and see outstanding representatives of their country's art. Our concerts have been enriched by their music for generations. Our present season will be happier for their visits.

Cantor Puts Jewish Gems on Wax

FESTIVAL GEMS, Cantor Moshe Kusevitsky with string ensemble. Victor S-56. $4

Cantor Kusevitsky is singing tonight at Adas Israel Congregation, 6th and I streets nw., in a benefit concert for overseas relief.

His album of sacred prayers covers the majority of Jewish religious holidays. Kusevitsky's voice is brilliant and powerful. It is well recorded, and for those who are interested in this highly expressive music, here is a fine album.

Opera singles—Massenet (Herodiade: Il est doux, il est bon); also Massenet (Manon: Adieu, notre petite table). Licia Albanese, soprano. Victor 12-0525. $1.25.

Verdi Il Trovatore: Tacea la notte placida. Florence Quartararo. Victor 12-0530. $1.25.

BJOERLING

Puccini Tosca: Perche chiusa, duet, Act I). Florence Quartararo and Ramon Vinay. Victor 12-0531. $1.25.

Thomas (Mignon: Adio, Mignon, fa core!); also Ah, non credevi tu. Giuseppe di Stefano, tenor. Victor 12-0529. $1.25.

Rossini: (Barber: Largo al factotum); also Leoncavallo (Zaza: Zaza, piccola Zingara). Robert Merrill, baritone. Victor 12-0450. $1.25.

Gounod (Romeo and Juliet: Waltz); also Mozart (Marriage of Figaro: Voi che sapate). Eleanor Steber. Victor 12-0526. $1.25.

Massenet (Manon: Ah! fuyez, douce image); also Gounod (Romeo and Juliet: Ah! leve-toi soleil). Jussi Bjoerling. Victor 12-0527. $1.25.

Wagner Tannhauser: Rome Narrative. Set Svanholm, tenor. Victor 12-0528. $1.25.

Wagner (Flying Dutchman: Die Frist ist um). Joel Berglund, baritone. Victor 12-0532. $1.25.

Nine opera singles represent Victor's welcome to the new opera season, opening tomorrow night at the Metropolitan. All of these artists are members of the Met at present. Albanese and Vinay will sing in the opening night, "Otello." Albanese's work in the Massenet arias is beautiful and stylistically smooth. The high B flat in Manon's farewell is decidedly flat, but the B in the Herodiade is pure as a bell.

Quartararo's voice is a natural Italian opera organ (she is a native of San Francisco). Her singing in the Trovatore scene, given in its entirety here, is good. Phrasing could be smoother, and the top, which taxes everyone, is rather forced in sound. But the whole scene comes off with real effect. Quartararo is much more at ease and dramatically most convincing with Vinay in the Tosca duet. Here is the real flavor of the opera.

Di Stefano is very young. In his late twenties, he has a voice of sweetness and strength. I find his soft work more honest and appealing than Tagliavini's and think, with the right coaching, that he will be a better singer. He must overcome a bad habit of scooping up to almost every high note and he will be a useful member of any opera company.

Merrill's voice is by now familiar to thousands of radio listeners, as well as opera-goers. It is my favorite opera baritone today in the Italian wing. But will he ever soften it down to less than that golden forte he uses so consistently? The Barber aria is a bit rough, but the Zaza is pure velvet.

Steber's Juliet Waltz is slow, cautious, and lacking in any flair. She is not a good coloratura singer and ought to avoid these things. But her Mozart is about perfect in this familiar aria.

Bjorling, when he feels like it, is the Met's best robust tenor. His voice sounds marvelous in these two French arias, though he really wallops the top B flats in both.

Set Svanholm's musicianship and feeling for style is far ahead of anything we have heard from Melchior in almost a decade. He makes the Rome Narrative as interesting as possible, though for my dollars it is still one of opera's dullest moments, and what a long moment.

What a beautiful Wagnerian baritone is Joel Berglund. Here he sings the long scene of the Dutchman from act one of the flying Hollander. With superb orchestral support by Leo Blech this is a fine and unusual addition to your Wagneriana.

Moussorgsky: Pictures at an Exhibition; also, By the Water, Vladimir Horowitz, pianist. Victor 1249. $6.

Moussorgsky wrote these for piano, and except for Ravel's orchestral version, they have always seemed more effective to me in that form. Horowitz has played the set two years running in Washington, in his own revision. No notes have been changed, but octaves have been added, and certain bell effects increased.

Unfortunately, this recording seems to emphasize all Horowitz's tendency to pound the piano in most unmusical fashion. I find, with some surprise, that I prefer the older recording by Brailowsky.—PAUL HUME.

Robert Ryan as star of RKO Radio's "The Set-Up" has less than 200 words to speak. His longest role dramatically is his shortest vocally. His lengthiest speech consists of only 65 words.

how to help a boy become a man

MANY American leaders attribute their adult success to the lessons they learned as carrier boys for some newspaper.

They learned that success depends on service: American customers expect to get what they pay for.

They learned that 75% may be a passing grade in school but one missed paper on a route of 100 subscribers means an annoyed customer and very likely a complaint to the office.

They learned that a contract must be kept—when the customer agrees to take the paper the boy agrees to deliver it every day, and neither weather, sleepiness, nor any other excuse should interrupt that contracted service.

They learned how to talk to people—how to speak up with self-assurance when seeking new customers, how to handle non-payers politely but firmly, how to think fast and talk to the point when trying to make a sale.

They learned self-reliance, to stand on their own two feet and not be eternally dependent on parents for pocket money or even for clothes and college funds.

They learned, in short, to grow up as men in the proud American tradition of self-discipling and self-reliance.

Sound of History Recorded

Princess Elizabeth and Margaret Rose piping to evacuate British children during the Battle of Britain: "Good night, children, and good luck to you all." At Elwood, Ind., a drawling, deeply earnest voice in unmistakably Mid-West accent accepts the nomination for an office he persistently called "the Prezdunt."

'A Landing Was Made . . .'

"WE INTERRUPT this program to bring you a special news bulletin." John Daly delivered the bulletin in such matter-of-fact tones it's just possible he didn't realize its significance. "The Japanese have attacked Pearl Harbor . . ."

"Yesterday," said the famous voice, now tired and profoundly sad, "December 7, 1941, a date which will live in infamy . . ."

And presently the then unfamiliar voice from SHAEF headquarters: "People of western Europe, a landing was made this morning on the coast of France . . ."

Roosevelt's voice is heard a last time, after his return from Yalta before a joint session of Congress, a sick, listless, exhausted voice unrecognizable as the same one that 13 years earlier had declared ebulliently: "We have nothing to fear but fear itself."

After that the sounds, though important, seem anticlimactic. The death of F. D. R., the swearing-in of President Truman, the successive announcements of VE-Day, the atom bomb, VJ-Day were great news stories but they produced no thunders comparable to the early ones. The great voices—heroes, mountebanks, clowns and villains alike—had with few exceptions been stilled forever.

Tikes Invited To Pay Call at 'Moppet Shop'

YOUNGSTERS are invited to toddle their way to WTTG's Studio A this Tuesday before 6 p. m. to see "The Moppet Shop" operate. The new local children's show which features Gordon, Hoppity Skippity the Rabbit, Chief Thundercloud, and a Trading Post for swapping things, is shown Monday through Friday at 6, but will be open for a studio audience only occasionally.

Eric Johnston, current high priest of the movie industry, and Countess Eleanor Palffy, author of "Largely Fiction," will visit Hazel Markel on her WTTG show Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.

JO STAFFORD, who now has her own ABC show Thursdays (WMAL, 8:30 p. m.), as well as her Tuesday stint on the Chesterfield Supper Club (WRC, 7 p. m.) is the highest paid girl singer in radio.

Transvision, Inc., one of the large manufacturers of home television kits, is now supplying a home study course—both theory and home laboratory lessons—which probably helps you understand why wire X44 must be soldered to gizmo 14L72. Strikes me that if you learn the importance of each connection you make in the set's little insides your hand will shake so much you'll never get the set finished.

VIDEO film producers have been tearing their hair out because the few usable bits of music available to them are licensed for only 30 days or less. The Jerry Fairbanks producing company finally cried, "Hold! Enough!" and organized a music publishing firm which will concentrate on getting music for film and live video productions. This might be the very place to send all those little ol' hit parade candidates nobody would ever take from you before. The Fairbanks Music Publishing Co. will probably operate in Hollywood.

Three Quiz Shows Are Calling It Quits

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Whether or not a trend away from the super type radio quiz is in the making, three programs of the general category have decided to quit. The changes are due to sponsor decision.

One program already off the air is the Phil Baker quiz, "Everybody Wins," which was replaced on CBS with drama.

The other two shows to leave both are ABC; "What's My Name," which is signing off today after 26 weeks; and "Whiz Quiz," which got network status 13 weeks ago. This one reversed things by giving the pyramiding jackpot to the listener sending in the puzzling question used. It ends December 4.

If you tune in Sherlock Holmes on WOL tonight at 7 you may hear Margaret Draper, who often plays supporting roles in the detective serial

Giveaway Guy Passes Out Million Bucks a Year

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP).—The crown prince of the radio giveaway shows passes out more than one million dollars a year.

And this queer variety of wireless philanthropy pays Mark Goodson at the age of 33 more than the President of the United States gets. His net take is better than $100,000. How much better is his own secret.

He has six network quiz programs, and is probably the most successful young radio producer in the business. Among his shows are "Hit the Jackpot," "Time's A-Wastin'," "Winner Take All" and "Stop the Music."

Has Its Troubles

BUT today Goodson's invisible realm, like the British Empire, has its troubles. Comedian Fred Allen and the Federal Communications Commission are threatening to stop the music of his private cash register.

The FCC has under consideration rules to ban or regulate programs which "buy the audience by inducing listeners to tune in chiefly in the hope of winning prizes."

Allen is currently engaged in a one-man war against the giveaways. He has posted $5000 bond to insure any of his listeners against the loss of any prize they might have won by listening to any rival program.

Goodson thinks Allen's campaign is only a reflection of the comedian's annoyance because "Stop the Music," aired over a competing network, knocked the funnyman out of a top Hooper rating last spring. The most recent Hooper poll, however, showed Allen again ahead of the musical quiz show.

"Frankly, I was flattered to have one of America's best comedians throwing rocks at us," said Goodson. "But we aren't going to throw any rocks back at him over the air.

"We feel that the man at the dial is the one who should decide what he listens to—not a comedian or a Federal bureau."

He Denies It

HE DENIES that "audience participation" shows—he dislikes the term "giveaways"—are only nuisance programs that attract morons.

"Audience participation shows are about the oldest thing in radio," he said, "but only about 12 per cent of the network programs can be classed as this type.

"The shows are competitive and appeal to eager, competitive people. Most people realize they have perhaps only 1 chance in 20 million to win a prize. They tune in for the excitement and entertainment—and I don't think entertainment has to be justified."

Goodson believes he will win what he calls his fight against "the Goliaths of the radio industry."

"The right to tune in is as free as the American ballot," he said. "We'll have quiz shows over the radio just as long as we have baseball or any other game."

WINX Wins New Award

WINX HAS recently received another national award for one of its dramatic productions. The latest award, given by the Billboard for "Exodus," a play about the Palestine situation, is the fourth national award won for the station by Playwright Sol Panitz. In 1947, two awards from Ohio State University and one from Variety magazine came to the station for a series of plays produced, and for the most part written, by Panitz.

During the summer, WINX recevied another award from the Billboard, for the Ed Hart forum series, "Is Congress Doing the Job?"

WINX was eligible for the awards in the category of local stations of 250 to 1000 watts.

Berle TV Show Costs 11 G's Weekly

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Just what does it cost to put on a good television show today; an example is the Milton Berle vaudeville production on NBC which tops the current ratings of visual programs. It averages $11,000 a week.

Comparing this to the radio, it would seem to entail a lot lower outlay from the sponsor. In radio, the combined Charlie McCarthy and Fred Allen hour on NBC runs to a total of $63,500 a week.

But there's this basic difference. The television network is made up of only seven stations on the East Coast, for which the facilities cost is $3500. The radio hookup is many times larger, 162 stations from coast to coast, for which the sponsors pay $20,000.

There's quite a contrast in talent costs, too. Berle's runs $7500; Allen's and Bergen's $43,000.

TV Reviving the One-Act

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Here's something else television is reviving along with vaudeville. It's the one-act play, also from the old vaudeville stage. You know, the one usually inserted in the center of a five-part bill and having a single setting along with the smallest possible cast.

As a result of the renewed attention for the dramatic shorts a sudden demand for scripts has sprung up. Not too many are available, putting the market in a rather tight situation.

Luigi Could Be the Best Idea Radio's Had in 10 Years or So

"LIFE WITH LUIGI," on CBS-WTOP at 9:30 p. m. E.S.T. Tuesdays, may not be the best radio idea in a decade or so but it is well up there and I'm sorry it had to come along in what I stubbornly think of as radio's twilight years.

Luigi Basco, the hero of this radio comedy, is an Italian immigrant. He is discovering America and he finds the place a delightful though puzzling place to live.

Luigi takes up residence in Chicago and I heartily approve of his choice. Radio has too many small towns on its agenda, enough New York City locales, and far, far too many Hollywood settings for its comedy shows. The Windy City is a lovely and refreshingly new spot to locate Luigi. He runs an antique shop jammed to the rafters with Americana. "Everything in da shop is old," he explains. "I'm da youngest ting in da place."

Some Reservations

WHILE the aims and much of the execution of "Life With Luigi" excite my warmest admiration, I have a number of small reservations which better be expressed forcibly right now before these defects become irrevocably imbedded in the show. For one thing, the little immigrant's patriotism had best be confined within reasonable limits.

Luigi, to take a recent example, explained to an American insurance man why he felt so strongly about a Winston-Salem chair, expounding on the early history of Winston-Salem to the accompaniment of soft, patriotic music in the background. That sort of thing—Luigi better find out about this before he's been in this country another fortnight—is known here as corn. Corn, Luigi. Avoid it.

Reservation No. 2, a minor complaint, concerns a certain vaudeville air that creeps into the proceedings now and then. Luigi and his friend Pasquale are made occasionally to sound like burlesque pantaloons and too much of that will rob the little immigrant of his dignity.

J. Carroll Naish, an excellent actor, plays Luigi with just enough accent to be amusing and not enough to be incomprehensible.

Amateur Radio Helps Report Plane Search

Ham radio gained new significance here recently, when Kenneth Cox, engineer at WWDC, picked up a short wave broadcast from Argentia, Newfoundland, reporting on the search for the B-25 carrying six men from the Washington area, which disappeared November 5.

Cox contacted the commanding officer of the Argentia Air Force Base, and a special broadcast via short wave was arranged. WWDC transcribed this on-the-spot report of the activities in Argentia, and rebroadcast the description on its News and Names program.

Gold Starts Radio Column on WTOP Monday

BILL GOLD, whose column in The Washington Post makes more people happy by printing their names than any other column in the Capital, begins a Monday-through-Friday series of half-hour programs on WTOP Monday.

GOLD

"This Is Washington" will carry into radio the formula that made "The District Line" one of the most popular features in The Post: local news, names, short quips, names, local features, names, and names.

In addition, "This Is Washington" will bring neighbors to the WTOP microphone to tell their own stories. Gold will use live interviews, tape recordings, and telephone recorded interviews in his daily search for stories about Government workers, housewives, children, students, everyone and anyone.

If the "District Line" is a guide, "This Is Washington" will do almost everything. Help an unemployed Santa Claus get a job. Find people who rush out of stores without taking their purchases. Locate homes for hundreds of dogs, cats and other animals. Collect thousands of dollars in cash and streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital. Or, as currently, start a campaign to raise $10,000 for the physical rehabilitation of Dorothy Kilmer.

Larry Beckerman, WTOP producer, will aid Gold in his daily search.

D. C. Players Plan For Miami Meet

By Marian H. Barre

NEXT SUNDAY the twenty-second winter-half of the annual contract championships opens in Miami, Fla., at the Roney-Plaza Hotel, closing December 12. Two sessions daily will be required to complete the program of seven major events, in addition to which there are 15 one-round matches. In both groups Washington will have its due quota of representatives.

Blue ribbon events of the tourney are world masters mixed pairs and the open pair championship, the former starting December 6 and continuing through three sessions, while the opens will be played in four rounds, beginning on December 10. The national individual is the curtain-raiser next Sunday; remaining matches include men's and women's foursomes, open teams of four, and amateur pairs.

LOCAL offerings at home this week include several master point games: The Federal Bridge League holds its open pair monthly tomorrow evening at 2600 16th st. nw. There will be big doings at the Washington Bridge League Wednesday in Hotel Roosevelt when the Women's Auxiliary stages its annual toy party for Children's Hospital, each player is asked to bring a Christmas present for some little patient. The following evening is "first Thursday" master point at La Salle Studios. Arlington Farms Club holds a similar contest on Friday at 7:45 p. m. And the Agriculture Bridge Club's monthly matinee will be played Saturday beginning at 1 p. m. in Euclid Studios.

Partnerships are now being made for the annual mixed pair championship of Arlington Farms Club, a two-session match on December 10 and 12. It's wise to attend to this matter promptly as many players will be in Florida attending the Nationals—have an "alternate" in mind in case your favorite running mate is one of these lucky ones.

For the next five days Fred L. Karpin's articles will appear in the William McKenney syndicated bridge column. The series of articles is a reply by the author of the "Point Count System of Contract Bidding" to an attack on it which appeared in the August issue of the Bridge World, published and edited by Alphonse ("Sonny") Moyse. No Washington paper carries the column.

THE local bridge world mourns the passing of one of its charter members, Clarence W. Zimmer, who died on November 21 at Bethesda Naval Hospital after several weeks illness. Born in Dodgeville, Wisc., he came to Washington after serving in the infantry in the first World War. Employed as an auditor in the Internal Revenue Bureau, Mr. Zimmer's avocation was duplicate bridge, a hobby which he shared with his wife, to whom the sympathy of the bridge group is extended.

Life Master John J. Parish will not be spending as much time in Washington as formerly, now that he has been elected to the Illinois State Legislature.

At three local clubs where the monthly quota of master points were in competition recently the distribution was follows:

At Euclid Studios top awards went to Mrs. L. L. Gibson-Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rossons; runner-up points to George Kathan-W. S. Benedict, Dr. C. C. McDonnell-Charles Lyons.

The Walker Club in Arlington—Mrs. T. M. Boyle-Mrs. William Tidball, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Barnard, it was a first major win for the latter pair. Second awards went to Mrs. Mildred Linderman-Mrs. Edward St. John, Francis Drake-Capt. A. C. Northrup.

At Buckingham Club Miss Kathleen McNutt-A. E. Lane, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Blasangame led their sections with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cruise and the Allan Vetters in second places.

Autographed Stamps Command High Prices

By William M. Stuart

WHOLE sheets of mint United States stamps, with autographs of Presidents, command high prices. Recent sales of these sheets reveal the fact that many deem them simply souvenirs which should not be considered a standard for future price adjustment.

There are specialized collectors who declare any autograph on a stamp, sheet or block should not add monetary value to the item. Autograph collecting is one thing, stamp collecting is another.

A sale just consummated of 200 sheets of mint United States stamps bearing the autograph of President Franklin D. Roosevelt brought $8800. These sheets were a part of the Harold L. Ickes collection now being disposed of. The 20 entire sheets of the so-called Farley issues of 1935 was another autographed lot bringing a record price of $750. Nine sheets with President Truman's signature sold for $350.

On taking office, President Roosevelt began signing sheets of stamps for his friends, mostly Cabinet officials and others high in the Government service. It is unknown how many sheets the late President signed, but at this date they are evidently regarded as worthy items for they command high prices.

ANOTHER highway postoffice service will be inaugurated by the Postoffice Department during the period of November 29 to December 13, between Middletown, N. Y., and Newark, N. J., and Wanaque and Newark, N. J. Special first-trip cachets will be provided for each of these offices. On each route the initial trip between the first-named and the last-named city will be designated as "Trip I" and the initial trip between the last-named and first-named city will be designated as "Trip 2." No provision will be made for point-to-point covers but they will be backstamped.

Philatelic service will be provided for covers carried by the first air-mail flight from Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Oreg., to Honolulu, Hawaii, and return on Route F A M 95. The flight will be flown by Northwest Airlines, Inc., on or about December 1. Special cachets will be provided for Portland, Seattle, Honolulu and the Air Mail Field at Seattle and covers may be addressed for delivery in the United States or in Hawaii, and the present air-mail rate of 5 cents an ounce will apply to the new service in both directions. Covers carried on the first flight from Portland and Seattle will be backstamped at Honolulu, and covers carried on the first flight from Honolulu will be backstamped at Seattle and forwarded to destination.

On the first-day sale of the 3-cent Will Rogers stamp at Claremore, Okla., 1,012,460 stamps were sold and 450,359 covers canceled.

Cuba has issued two commemoratives honoring the fiftieth anniversary of the death of Jose Marti, a leader in the war for Cuban independence. One stamp, 2-centavos, red, shows an allegorical design of Marti's death and the 5-c., blue, shows the disembarkation of Marti at Playitus.

THE SALE of unclaimed stamps, covers and coins, known as the dead-letter sale, was held at the City Postoffice, November 17, at 7 p. m. There were 230 lots disposed of at a total of $902.05. Prices were lower than usually realized at such sales and there were no outstanding bids for special lots. The top price for stamps was a lot of approvals that brought $30. First-day covers were very cheap, lots of from 40 to 100 going for $1.25 to $3. Packets sold for 27 to 50 at prices from $3 to $9.

At the meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., on Tuesday evening Edward Mack of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association was the speaker. He told of the work of the association and how important it was to the community. He also exhibited sheets of the 1948 seals and told of the four varieties. At the meeting on Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., the Boys Club will be entertained. Junior collectors are invited to attend; a special program will be presented.

The Postoffice Department has announced that a 3-cent stamp to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the founding of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., will be issued. First day will be held on April 12, 1949, at Lexington, Va. Details as to design, color and details will be announced later.

The receipts at the Philatelic Agency in October, 1948, amounted to $306,050.50.

Regional Art Steps Rearward

"Debris," by Benjamin Abramowitz, one of the accepted works in the Washington-and-vicinity show at the Corcoran Gallery

By Jane Watson Crane

THE sad part of the debacle of the third annual exhibition of work by artists of Washington and vicinity, which opened at the Corcoran last weekend, is that an enterprise intended to be constructive should have misfired so completely.

The jury evidently was trying to use the work of a few to preach a sermon to the many. So assailed were they by the onslaught of community effort that they passed over the work of several artists who have consistently gained entry to national exhibitions. Some of these unfortunately took advantage of the opportunity offered to withdraw their work from display in the refused section, thereby contributing to the fiasco. A few of the more established, who either did not submit or were unable to, were roused to the point that they regretted their nonparticipation; but there were others who were glad they had not sent in.

One could laugh off the whole episode if it were not for the possibility of two destructive results. First, it may increase the tendency, already well established, of Washington artists to retire to their own small inner circles. Second, it sets back the effort to build up through the local museum, which is the logical center, a representative regional show of the type which has had such successful development in Cleveland, to name a conspicuous example, and in other metropolitan regions.

A New Theory

SINCE the turn of the century, when thinking people generally discarded the cherished view that art in the visual sense is above all things imitation and representation, no other theory has won universal acceptance, much less been given any clear definition which could be used as a frame of reference.

In spite of this, the so-called art experts have won increasing ascendancy, so much so that there is prevalent today the idea that they, and they alone, can in one swift glance apprehend all and make the pronouncement, "This is good; this is bad," as if they were picking strawberries.

From the technical point of view, the most valuable criticism the artist can obtain is from an experienced teacher who is an artist himself. It is our experience that the greater the artist the greater is his consideration for all workers in the field.

One of the complaints of the jury was that the work submitted was mediocre and that it illustrated once again the "alarming" increase in the number of amateurs romping around in the field.

At a time when the forces of publicity and the approval of experts have enabled individuals to capitalize on their intuitive sense without benefit of skills or training, is it any wonder that unqualified contestants should be rampant? Who has not the right to aspire to be a successful primitive? At a time when statistics have proven repeatedly that very few artists, except those designated and practicing as commercial, can earn an adequate living through their work alone, what is so alarming about individuals in increasing numbers working in a medium for the love of it?

We think the evidence that many engaged in other full-time pursuits have the fortitude and interest to apply themselves to the arts is magnificent, not deplorable. What more natural than to take the opportunity of a local show to try one's luck? What more natural than for the jury to judge from the crop, reject the most strikingly inept or insincere, and to try to build up as good an assemblage as possible from the material left?

If the jury had picked from 50 to 100 works, and accompanied their choice with constructive comment, they would have done a service. As it stands, amateurs don't need an out-of-town jury to tell them they are amateurs. Professionals, who have been accepted repeatedly by other juries, will be neither helped nor hindered by being turned down by this one.

Bias for the Nostalgic

AMONG the chosen, we were heartily glad to see paintings by John C. Lewis and Benjamin Abramowitz. Lewis is a young fellow who formerly studied at the Corcoran and got his first real chance to exhibit publicly through the Artists Cooperative last season. Abramowitz had his first one-man show in oils at the Barnett-Aden Gallery this year. Pietro Lazzari's great natural gifts as a draftsman are recognized once again; the art department of American University is represented also by several talented students.

Sculptors and print makers did not submit much, but they had even rougher treatment than the painters. The only print is Jacob Kainen's distinguished "Head," which was included in the Pennell Fund Print Annual at the Library of Congress this summer.

With the possible exception of a school study head in crayon and an innocuous pastel of Tokyo, we have no quarrel with the jury choices, except the fundamental one of their failure to fulfill the purpose of the show by unreasonable and ill-considered limitation, and their rather obvious bias for the nostalgic and the art of the Studio, with a capital S.

For the record, we would like to mention the following whose work seemed to us outstanding: (Undoubtedly there are a good number of others we missed on two visits to such a big assemblage.) William B. Thompson, Melvin Buckner, Helen Biehl, Celine Tabary, John Malloy, Robin Brant, Blaine Carter, Sidnel Gelfand, M. Caldwell, Arvin Hedin, Ether Robertson Gath, Henry Olson, Gustav Trois, Fritzi Morrison, Betty Tiffany, James V. Cupoli, Charles Chinn, Howard Chapman, K. Sater, W. H. Calfee, Leo Steppat, Minnie Barz, Theodora Kane, John Galloway and Molly Stern.

"Three Women," by Leonard Maurer, another of the accepted works

Book of U. S. Paintings Is One of Best

Great Paintings in America: One Hundred and One Masterpieces in Color. Compiled by Fiske Kimball and Lionello Venturi. Coward McCann. 216 pp. $20.

THIS collection of 101 art masterpieces in color, ranging from the Italian primitives down to the Post-Impressionists and moderns, is one of the finest volumes of its kind ever published. The plates are superb. The text is perceptive. And the selections are, in general, excellent.

The price, $20 (for a short time $15), is not excessive considering the $200,000 invested in producing the book and the exceptional craftsmanship displayed in plates and printing. Next to owning the originals or haunting the galleries of America for many months, there is no better way to enjoy American-owned paintings.

However, it is not true as the book implies that these paintings have never before been reproduced in color.

For instance, five of them were adequately reproduced in "A Treasury of Art Masterpieces," edited by Thomas Craven (Simon & Schuster, 1939). And no less than 16 were reproduced in even larger and equally excellent color plates in "Masterpieces of Painting from the National Gallery of Art," edited by Huntington Cairns and John Walker (Random House, 1944). Other volumes among my fairly extensive art library include good color reproductions of at least half of these paintings.

The point is relatively unimportant, since the real aim of this volume is not to make art exclusive, but to make it widely popular. But it is interesting to see where the critics have coincided in their nominations for the all-time Oscar winners among the art masterpieces.

Craven, for instance, seems to agree that Gauguin's sultry South Sea Island nude, "The Spirit of the Dead Watching;" Van Gogh's strong, angular "L'Arlesienne;" Renoir's gay, sun-drenched "Luncheon of the Boating Party," Daumier's uncharacteristically unembittered genre painting, "Third Class Railway Carriage," and Seuart's prismatic "Sunday Afternoon on the Island of the Grande Jatte" rate top honors.

Huntington Cairns and John Walker agree on selections Kimball and Venturi made from the works of the Byzantine School, Botticelli, Castagno, Corot, J. L. David, Giorgione, Giotto, Goya, Raphael (twice), Reynolds, Romney, Stuart, Vandyke, Dominico Veneziano, Vermeer and Renoir.

In fact, there are few inclusions to cavil about in this excellent but rather conservative gallery save the last three or four. I am glad that the editors chose from Picasso's work "Boy Leading a Horse" painted back in 1945 before that talented showman had begun to grind out two-headed roosters. Picasso of the Pink, Blue and Harlequin periods could paint. I question the selection from Matisse, and deplore the added publicity given Roualt and Marin.

Obviously, the editors feel less sure of themselves among the moderns and have snobbishly deleted many important American painters. Surely among "Great Paintings in America" there should be examples of Eakins, Sloan, Bellows, Grant Wood, Thomas Benton and John Steuart Curry.

But emphasis on a few differences in taste is ungrateful. This is a book any art lover will be proud to own.

Gallery Notes

Whyte's and A. U. Plan Joint Show in January

THE Whyte Gallery and the Watkins Gallery of American University announce a joint exhibition of work by artists of the Washington area, to open January 16 and continue for three weeks. A "then and now" project, it will aim to show the development of work by artists who have been actively contributing to the art of this region during the past decade. One recent work will be shown in conjunction with one done 10 years ago by the same artist. The exhibition, divided into two units, will be shown concurrently at the two galleries.

The jury for this project will meet January 5 to make selections. Jurors are to be Duncan Phillips, director of the Phillips Memorial Gallery; Hermann Williams, director of the Corcoran Gallery; Mitchell Jamieson, painter; James V. Herring, head of the art department of Howard University, and one other still to be designated. To be eligible to submit work an artist must have maintained at least three years' continuous residence in the Washington area within the last 10 years. Further information may be obtained from either sponsoring gallery.

An exhibition of paintings and drawings by Marguerite Burgess opens December 1 at the D. C. Public Library and continues through the month. This is the artists' first show in the District for some time. Last season she was a winner in the Maryland Artists Annual at the Baltimore Museum, and on the strength of her entry was accorded a one-man show there recently.

Eliot O'Hara, who is still in Europe, has sent a group of recent water colors from abroad for exhibition at Chequire House in Alexandria. Author of "Making Water Color Behave" and numerous other books and articles, O'Hara and his work are well known to Washington. Once again he makes his medium behave in these highly professional landscapes.

One seldom sees a group of small sculptures as intelligently and deftly handled as those offered by Maxim Elias and Alice Decker at the Georgetown Library.

A loan exhibition of water colors by the late Hugo Inden has been assembled for display in the Library of George Washington University through December 13. Before coming to Washington, Inden taught art and interior decoration in Munich and Dusseldorf. From 1929 until his death in 1941, he was associated with the Arts Club of Washington and had many friends in art circles. Paintings shown are from the Arts Club and private collections.

Marin Honored

A special feature of the annual Pennsylvania Academy watercolor and print exhibition, current in Philadelphia through December 12, consists of 21 watercolors by John Marin. The Philadelphia Water Color Club award, given this year in Marin's honor, recognizes the distinguished contribution to the medium made by Marin during the last 40 years.

'Mother-Daughter' Show Open Today In Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Nov. 27.—A Mother-Daughter Art Show will be held at the Gallery of Creative Art, in Rugby rd., Charlottesville, beginning Sunday, Mrs. Philip Speed, directress of the gallery, announced today. The exhibit, featuring works of Madame Henrietta Crespel and Madame Renee Cornell-d'Echert, will be open to the public from Monday to December 15, it was pointed out.

On Sunday, the vernissage will take place, to be attended by guests only. Invitations have been sent to some 500 art lovers, critics, museum directors and private collectors in Virginia, Maryland, the District of Columbia, West Virginia and North Carolina.

The artists, two French ladies who now live at Waynesboro, are established painters in their native country, and have lived in the New World and the Orient over a period of several years.

The Gallery of Creative Art is open from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily.

Antioch Gets News Straight

Renata Manasse, left, Fred Beckner, and Jane Mary Hanford discuss world problems with John Sparks, professor of political science at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio, Nov. 27—First-hand accounts of the Berlin blockade, British socialism, and election bloodshed in Panama are being given by three freshman students at Antioch College here this fall.

"Figures which stand for 'Heil Hitler' still are chalked up on Berlin walls at night," reports Freshman Fred Beckner, 19, formerly of Washington, D. C., who flew out of Berlin to Antioch seven weeks ago.

"At first we couldn't figure out what '88' stood for," he explained, "but then someone thought of 'H' being the eighth letter of the alphabet—so Heil Hitler."

Fred grew up in Washington, D. C., but has lived in Berlin for the past two years while his father served in the manpower division of the American Military Government there.

10,000 Miles

FRED and his classmates, Renata Manasse from England and Sweden and Jane Mary Hanford from the Canal Zone, traveled 10,000 miles to come to Antioch this year.

When political parties are equally matched in Panama, 18-year-old Jane Mary reports, it means "lots of bloodshed." Jane Mary's father is a lieutenant colonel in the judge advocate's office in the Canal Zone, and she was there through the excitements of the last presidential election.

But in Socialist England, Renata, 18, says that "even the soap-box orators and their listeners use parliamentary procedure."

Renata, who originally left Hitler's Germany in 1933 via Switzerland, Sweden, Russia and Japan, has lived in the United States since 1940, but returned to Europe this summer to visit old friends in England and Sweden.

"Sweden is more American than England is," she reports. She cited "nothing but American cars," jazz and American-style clothes as evidence of Sweden's sympathy with the West. "Every school child knows English, not Russian, but Russia is so near."

These first-hand student reports are adding to Antioch classes in economics and political science this year.

In Germany, Fred reports, "they steal anything. Organized gangs work the houses. We had bars on our basement windows, but the man came back three times and finally sawed through. Someone slugged me on an ordinary city street and took my clothes."

The American zone in Germany is in the best shape, Fred observes. As to how the Germans feel, he says only: "They dislike the Russians more than the Americans."

There are democratic forces in Berlin, however, and "all the Germans pray we stay there."

"People in Berlin can't sleep. Food planes fly overhead every few minutes, night and day."

Fred traveled through Switzerland, southern France, Italy, Malta and North Africa. He would like to go back to Germany as an American newspaperman some day.

Liberal Arts

AS TO Panama, Jane Mary says: "They resent Americans because of the bases we control."

At Antioch, Jane Mary plans to major in liberal arts and thinks she'd like to be an air hostess. She is awaiting a reunion with her identical twin, Jean Mary. The girls have separated for the first time this fall, Jane Mary to come to Antioch and her twin to start nurse's training at City Hospital in Cleveland, Ohio.

Renata is planning to major in art at Antioch. She, too, would like to return to Europe for another look at the socialist experiment in Sweden and England.

The complete absence of slums in Sweden's capital impressed Renata, but she also observed a "certain laxness" on the part of labor, due perhaps to the absence of competition and the assurance of social security which they have.

In England, she was "impressed by the quietness of the people and their grim determination in face of all hardships."

All three students will study full time at Antioch this year, and will then begin alternating work and study next summer.

New 'Met' First Night Is Coming

By W. G. Rogers

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (AP).—What ladies will hoist their feet up on the tables in Sherry's, what gentlemen will do cartwheels and stand on their heads in the Metropolitan Opera House Monday evening when the sixty-fourth season there opens with Verdi's "Otello"?

It has happened before on "Met" first nights, when also in recent years a girl fell down and bumped her head, and a woman fainted, and a $5000 bracelet was lost (and recovered).

Jewelry at only five grand is practically five-and-ten stuff in comparison with the necklaces, rings and pins which glitter at opera openings. Even in the middle of the war, Manager Edward Johnson felt certain that we "will enjoy opera more if we dress up in its honor," and this season should see a record number of top hats and capes, and of gowns that, at both bottom and top, come closer than ever to the floor.

Two Shows in One

"Met" first nights are distinguished no less for the show on the stage than for the occasional show-off in the audience. All the world's great opera houses have always been social as well as musical centers, and, of course, there have been periods and places—in Russia or Bavaria—when opera was staged solely for a ruler and the nobility. It was strictly a carriage-trade affair, conducted sometimes in "court" theaters, and in the old days under the severe eye of an emperor or king and his tiaraed followers in the royal boxes, there was no democratic horseplay or clowning in the lounge or lobby.

Festivities have marked premiers of works of the great composers in many music capitals. Rossini and Verdi have been madly serenaded; an orchestra was once sent down New York Bay to welcome singers from Europe; when the first Bayreuth Festival opened with the "Ring" in August, 1876, members of the audience included Saint-Saens, Grieg, Cui, Gounod and Tchaikovsky, and the first performance was followed by a gala supper and a torchlight parade.

And, of course, there have been very demonstrative audiences that did not hesitate to clap and cheer, or hiss and jeer. A rowdy gallery crowd created a disturbance during Mayerbeer's "Les Huguenots" at the opening of the Covent Garden season in 1858; when at half past 12 the audience was told that the last act would be omitted because of the lateness of the hour, objections were strenuous, vociferous and rude.

Popular Touch

THE POPULAR touch in "Met" openings appeared as far back as 1910 when a sedate and high-minded critic felt obliged to note that Gluck's "Armide" had attracted a houseful of people in "gorgeous garb." At the original "Met" first night in 1883, Gounod's "Faust" was the opera, and Christine Nilsson received "an avalanche of plaudits" and mountains of flowers. On the other occasions, in 1902 and 1938, when "Otello" inaugurated a "Met" season, there seems to have been no unoperatic behavior by the patrons.

When the "Met" gave "Otello" in 1902, Eames was Desdemona, Alvarez was Otello and Scotti was the Iago; in 1938 the same roles were filled by Maria Caniglia, Martinelli and Tibbett; last season with Toscanini and the NBC orchestra, they were Herva Nelli, Vinay and Valdengo; advance notices on Monday's cast indicates Albanese, Vinay and Warren, with Busch conducting.

Licia Albanese . . . sings in "Otello" at Met opening tomorrow

Coeds Invade Gonzaga U, Once All-Male Stronghold

By John Fahey

SPOKANE, WASH., Nov. 27 (AP).—Comes now the Associated Women Students of Gonzaga University.

For the first time in its 61 years, Crosby College has opened its doors to women students.

When women entered the gray stone front arches, the campus uniform at Bing Crosby's alma mater slipped out the back door. No more corduroy trousers, bedroom slippers and sweat shirts with "ASGU" stenciled across the chest.

Today you can wear a shirt and tie without raising a whistle in the shadowy corridors where once strode Ray Flaherty, the pro football boss; Tony Canadeo, erstwhile Gray Ghost of Gonzaga and more recently a Green Bay Packer, and the Crosby entourage—Bing, Bob, Everett, Larry and Ted.

Once upon a time, so goes the legend, Father James Kennelly of the Society of Jesus ruled the corridors with a bunch of keys swinging on the end of a long chain. Laggards were brought up sharply with a flick of this formidable sling.

There was the time that Mike Pecarovich, then university football coach, threatened to play the prep squad against Washington State College when his team went on a hunger strike.

They didn't like the food in the university refectory.

Today an etiquette strike is conceivable. But few would be impolite enough to raise their voices against the pudding.

How about the night an unidentified student dropped a dead duck from the gymnasium ceiling when the timekeeper fired his pistol, and a stooge hollered, "You got him!"? That nearly ended basketball in midseason.

Or whither the dear dead days when puckish stage hands dropped the curtain on young Harry Lillis Crosby, emoting Shakespearean drama, and stunned him for the better part of a half hour?

Where now greased drainpipes to discourage latecomers from shinnying into windows without reporting their tardiness?

A pert, blonde sophomore (whoever before called a Gonzagan "pert?") named Dorothy McGowan thinks Gonzaga women should organize. She is officially the first coed.

She is studying chemistry, trigonometry and analytical geometry. No double reverse, no greased pig for the frosh-soph fight, no Iron Bulldog for the classes to battle over.

It used to be that a freshman who forgot his green beanie could anticipate a hearty paddling from university lettermen. Today the girls wear green caps in the traditional style, but by what authority? Who would raise a hand if—go on, say it!—the Associated Women Students of Gonzaga University ordered hats off?

Lay aside the paddles, men.

Thus passeth tradition.

Gets Eighteenth Century Maps

Providence, R. I., Nov. 27.—Three copperplates of the eighteenth-century maps of Narragansett Bay and Newport were presented to Brown University here recently by the Lords of the British Admiralty. The gift consisted of two works by the eminent geographer, J. F. W. Des Barres, from his "Atlantic Neptune," published in 1780, and considered the greatest of all collections of charts, plans and views of the North American coast published before the nineteenth century.

To Lecture on Berlin Crisis

Hamilton, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Dr. Stefan Osusky, Czechoslovakian diplomat, is giving a lecture series entitled "Behind the Headlines" at Colgate University. A collaborator with Jan Masaryk in founding the Czech republic Dr. Osusky is visiting professor of European history and culture at Colgate.

Hines' New Book Is Upon Us

By Orval Hopkins

WRAPPED in celophane, stiff as a pair of new boots, and carrying a racy green cover, Duncan Hines' new Vacation Guide (Duncan Hines, Inc., New York: 371 pp. $1.75) is with us, for better or for worse. One of first notices in the book is a solemn adjuration marked "Important." It says, "To fully understand the reason for and the purpose of this book, please read the complete introduction." It ain't just fooling, either; you run into entries like this under Atlantic City: "Resort Hotel: Chalfonte-Haddon Hall, Dn., Fi., Rd., Sw., C." and also "Am. P. SWB $13 up daily. 2WB $11 up daily per person. Eu.P. also." This means, obviously, that you can enjoy dancing, fishing, riding and swimming (not necessarily in that order), that there is a cocktail lounge, or saloon, on the premises, that a single room with bath, American plan, costs you 13 fish a day, $11 each double, and that you can go European plan if you prefer to eat at the greasy spoon down the street.

Hines really gives you the complete treatment. Not only does he list prices and accommodation-ranges for resort hotels in every sector of this country, but he also penetrates Canada, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Mexico and Cuba and gives you the exact data on tidy but comparatively obscure places like the Naniloa Hotel at Hilo, on the Island of Hawaii. He tells you what to wear and what to take along, cautions you to turn off the water and gas before leaving, advises whom to tip and how much, sternly warns you to check the brakes, the wiper and the tire jack of your car. Sprinkled throughout are dewey pronouncements like "In our United States we have the grandest country in the world. Everyone should make the effort to travel, see and appreciate what we have at home," and candid blurbs like "If traveling by car, be sure to take along my 'Adventures in Good Eating,' and 'Lodging for a Night' for places to eat and stay en route." There are some photographs, mostly poorly reproduced, and a few cartoons, reprinted from magazines, poking sly fun at the Hines reputation. All in all, it seems as complete a book of its kind as you could obtain, and I unreservedly recommend it.

FIGURES OF SPEECH DEPT.: "The most popular ski resorts these days are only a gelandesprung, a high-speed Christie and a long downhill run away from airports across the nation." From United Air Lines. Alliteration Dept.: "Sun, surf, sand and scenic splendor await those who journey to this colorful county in the country's southwest corner." From the San Diego-California Club.

Indies Count on Tourists To Cure Economic Ills

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Nov. 27 (AP).—Folks down in the West Indies believe their picturesque area has at least 72 million dollars worth of charm a year for tourists.

That is the amount they estimate 475,000 tourists will be spending in the Caribbean section by 1950.

The Caribbean likes to see tourists around. In fact, they expect the tourists to help them out of their economic troubles. They figure tourists spend at least $15 a day, and they say the Caribbean has so many attractions the tourists will be glad they came.

The tourist situation is surveyed in a report prepared for the Caribbean Commission's West Indian Conference starting December 1 at Guadeloupe. The commission is an advisory agency of the governments of the United States, France, Great Britain and Holland for their Caribbean territories.

More Cruise Ships

CRUISE ships are beginning to run again in greater numbers and air lines now criss-cross many areas of the Caribbean in their flights from the United States to Central and South America. A few islands still have poor or infrequent connections with the outside world, but efforts are being made to remedy that.

In addition to the colonies and territories in the Caribbean, the independent republics of Haiti, Cuba, Dominican Republic, and the Central American countries are now within a few hours flying time from southern United States on fast and frequent schedules.

Cuba for years has been a favorite spot for air and cruise tourists. The government of President Carlos Prio, which took office October 10, already is at work on a program for bringing in even more of them. Better hotel and other facilities are planned for Havana, and many other parts of the 850-mile long island. Although Cuba is now one of the most prosperous countries in the world, it wants to build up a greater tourist industry as an economic insurance policy.

Colorful Haiti

PERHAPS one of the most aggressive campaigns for tourists is being executed by the government of Haiti. The country is one of the most colorful in the hemisphere. New hotels have been built in various Haitian cities and interior transport facilities improved.

The Puerto Rican insular government recently invested five million dollars in a tourist hotel, now under construction. Insular officials hope to have a yearly tourist income of three million dollars by 1950, and are shooting for a 10-year goal of 65,000 tourists yearly, spending nine million dollars.

The Virgin Islands, another United States territory, and the Caribbean possessions of France, Britain and Holland also are at work to build up a tourist industry. Mexico and the Central American countries also are busy. Mexico and Guatemala already have a magnificent tourist trade, but hope to build it up even more.

Ships to Scandinavia

The Swedish American Line has already announced its schedule for 1949 to help tourists who are planning to visit Scandinavia next year. The liner Gripsholm will sail from New York for Gothenburg on January 21, February 18, March 18, April 15, May 11, June 7, July 5, August 12, September 9, October 7, November 4 and December 3. The liner Stockholm will sail from New York for Gothenburg and Copenhagen on January 7, February 2, March 1, March 25, April 25, May 19, June 14, July 12, August 29, September 23, October 17 and November 12 and December 9.

Squirrels Get A New Idea About Cones

TULARE, Calif., Nov. 27 (AP).—Nature notes from Sequoia National Forest:

Rangers say the public is literally killing blue-fronted jays with kindness. During the summer tourist season the birds ate campers' scraps.

But now visitors are gone, rangers say, and many jays have starved to death because they know no other way to get food. The Forest Service is spreading rolled barley as an emergency measure.

And the squirrels. In years past the rangers have depended on squirrels to cut loose the cones of sugar pines. When they fall to the ground, forestry workers collect them, use the seeds to replenish nursery stock.

But this year, inexplicably, the squirrels aren't touching sugar pine. Instead they've switched to red and white pines.

Nutty, isn't it?

Change in Service To Prince Edward

Through sleeping car service from Montreal to Charlottetown, P. E. I., is now operating daily except Saturday on the Canadian National Railways "Maritime Express."

Carry Proof Of Insurance On Long Trips

IT IS becoming increasingly important for motorists to carry evidence of insurance with them when they go on trips beyond their State borders, Charles F. Pratt, director of touring services of the District of Columbia division of the American Automobile Association, said yesterday.

"Practically all the States now have safety-responsibility legislation in one form or another," he said, "and many of these have the special strong-type law which becomes effective immediately upon the happening of an accident.

"Under such legislation, it becomes necessary as a general rule for both motorists to demonstrate their ability to pay for any damages to the other car resulting from a crash. It is highly advisable, therefore, for a motorist to be able to show that he is covered with adequate third-party liability insurance."

"Insurance companies," he added, "issue an identification card, giving the name of the insured and the policy number. This should be kept with the car at all times, but particularly when traveling away from the home State."

More to Holland Than Cheese, Says Men's Club Leader

American tourists who visited the Netherlands last summer stayed an average of three or four days but still did not have time to visit more than the traditional tulip fields, canals and cheese markets, according to H. W. DeJong, president of the American Business Men's Club of Holland and representative there of the American Express Co.

He pointed out that there are many sections of the country outside Amsterdam and The Hague which are of interest to tourists, as well as outstanding art and historical museums, which many visitors miss during a short stay.

Hotel facilities were overtaxed last summer because of the coronation of Queen Juliana, and the meeting of the World Council of Churches, which was attended by 6000 persons, DeJong continued. Yet 7000 American tourists came to the Netherlands, half of them on guided tours and half of them traveling independently, twice as many as in 1947.

Next year, DeJong said, the country will be able to accommodate 15,000 Americans with ease. In Amsterdam all the leading hotels are again open for business with the exception of the Carlton, which was destroyed when struck by a crippled bomber, and plans are being made to rebuild it.

Transport Notes

American Airlines has inaugurated Convair service into Toronto, Erie and Baltimore . . . The British Guiana Tourist Committee and the Grenada Tourist Trade Development Board have issued new tourist information booklets . . . Northwest Airlines has replaced all its DC-3s with new Martin 202s on passenger schedules, retaining one for an all-cargo flight and another for pilot checking purposes.

Fashion Goes To Dogs

Canines now have their very own Mainbocher

PARIS may be the fashion center of the world for women, but their dogs go to an exclusive New York shop where fine materials combined with stylish tailoring make Towser a dog of unmistakable distinction.

Whether or not Towser cares is beside the point. The Poodle Specialty Shop, in the fashionable East 50's, caters not only to the aristocratic poodle trade but to any other dog with an adequate bank balance.

The shop stocks a complete line of clothing — pajamas, lounging robes, boots, and a variety of outer garments, both ready-made and tailored-to-measure—for its discriminating clientele.

To provide the gaiety and spirit dog psychologists say is necessary to Towser's physical and mental well-being, a great variety of toys is available. These include rubber "hot-dogs," balls, bones, rings, fire hydrants; and current inflationary conditions considered, the toy prices—of 15 cents to $1—are almost reasonable.

Guiding spirits behind the shop are Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Tracy, who have shown their own dogs for years. Two years ago they waited on their first customer. Today they cater to the needs of the Sutton Place, Beekman Hill, Park Avenue, Southampton and Westchester doggy sets and can satisfy their every wish both large and small.

While many an elegantly accoutred Towser will leave the small shop with his nose in the air, close observation will reveal his tongue in his cheek.

After bath terry-cloth robe ($2.95) keeps coat flat, is also worn about house when shedding.

Transparent but sturdy, custom-built carrying case gives dog view of surroundings. Cost, $30.

Tailored greatcoats in many styles and colors give a dog individuality, cost as low as $10.

In white pajamas ($1.95), dachshund is ready for bed ($10. up) with his toys nearby. THE END.

Carl Sandburg

"If America listens to the deniers then will rot begin."

CARL SANDBURG was a wandering troubador—with a wealth of stored-up knowledge about the country's little folk and their favored by-paths—when he joined the Sixth Illinois Volunteers during the Spanish-American War. One night, while encamped on a remote hill in the interior of Puerto Rico, a fellow soldier sold the restless Sandburg, then 20, on the idea of going back to school, which he had quit in an impatient huff seven years earlier. So started the literary career of America's most versatile writer — poet, biographer, historian, storyteller, and, with the recent publication of "Remembrance Rock," novelist.

At 70, he turns novelist . . .

At the mellow age of 70, Sandburg draws deeply on his rich experience to put down his first novel, "Remembrance Rock," one about the spiritual heritage of the country. "Live with these faces out of the past of America," pens Sandburg, "and you find lessons. If America forgets where she came from, if the people lose sight of what brought them along, if she listens to the deniers and mockers, then will rot and dissolution begin."

Somewhat aimlessly for many years, Sandburg knocked about the country before he listened to his army friend and, after discharge, enrolled in Lombard College in his native Galesburg, Ill. At 13, he drove a milk wagon. Later, he portered in a barber shop, shifted scenes in a theater, drove a truck at a brick kiln. When he was 17, he struck out for the West, riding freights — worked in Kansas wheat fields and washed dishes in city hotels. These tough jobs gave him an early sympathy for workers. They furnished him, too, with invaluable experience and background for his later writing.

At Lombard, Sandburg was captain of the basketball team, editor of the college's monthly and annual publications, won several declamation prizes and made the Poor Writers' Club, a select undergraduate group for the literary inclined. After graduation, he again traveled around the country holding various jobs, then settled in Milwaukee, working for the Wisconsin Socialist-Democratic Party. Inevitably, he got into newspaper work, first as a correspondent for a news service, then as an editorial writer.

Best known as Lincoln's biographer (he was awarded the 1939 Pulitzer Prize in history for his "Abraham Lincoln: The War Years") Sandburg, of all American writers, is most particularly fitted for that role. He, too, was a poor boy who grew up on the prairies, worked at a number of jobs and got little schooling, but liked the common people and understood them well. He has the same earthy, genuine sense of humor; he loves folklore and is a fascinating spinner of anecdotes and parables. A poet, he understands the poet in Lincoln; a practical man also (he could never have handled voluminous biographical material, he says, if he hadn't known how to be scientifically efficient), he could understand Lincoln's native shrewdness. And like Lincoln, he believes most staunchly in the destiny of democratic America.

"Sneak Preview"

Movie try-outs fit pictures to the man-in-the-street

BY ERNEST LA FRANCE AND SID ROSS

Continuing its series of authentic articles on the moving picture industry, Parade will describe next week how movies are made. Future issues will discuss various aspects of moviemaking, and experts' opinions about its future. - Kay Sullivan, Movie Editor

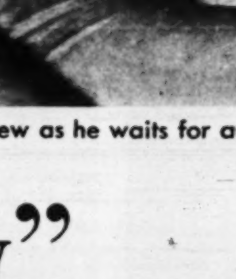
IF YOU HAVE been going along thinking that movies are made by magicians with an uncanny foresight into your mood of the evening, pet likes and dislikes, and what you consider a nice balance of belly laughs, wet eyes, Noble Thoughts, and songs-in-the-heart, you are not only unfair to clairvoyant magicians, you are unappreciative of the labors of moviemakers.

Moviemakers study you at least as carefully as Darwin studied the apes or Maeterlinck studied bees, and there is a good deal more money at stake. The average movie costs at least $1,000,000 to make and no moviemaker in his right mind would risk all that expense on mere guesswork.

To feel your cinematic pulse and measure your cranium, Hollywood has evolved a whole category of devices, ranging from Gallup polls of likely moving picture titles to electric push-buttons for sample audiences to record what in a movie they think is fine, puts them to sleep, or is frankly lousy.

By far the oldest of all is the "sneak preview," a surprise showing at an obscure movie house of a picture still in the rough stage as it leaves the studio. It is Hollywood's equivalent of a stage play's out-of-town tryout before it is put on Broadway, and the purpose is the same—to discover which lines, scenes, and songs will go over big and which ones may cause the customers to storm the box-offices to get their ticket money back.

Shortly after Hedy Lamarr, Robert Cummings, and Anna Sten completed the $1,100,000 "Let's Live a Little" for Eagle-Lion early this fall, the good burghers of Long Beach, Calif., who had gone to the Crest Theater expecting to see only "Deep Waters" and "Gallant Adventure" were treated to a bonus as a third feature unfolded on the screen.



Neighborhood theater in Long Beach, Cal., chosen for sneak preview, advertised only the regular double feature plus a last-minute notice of a "Major Studio Feature." Even theater manager was ignorant of identity of new film before it flashed on screen. Frequently even the title is changed before final release of picture.

Co-produced by Cummings and Eugene Frenke as the first picture of their own United California Productions, it was designed with all the tricks of the trade. A handsome go-getter (Cummings) gets involved in the familiar triangle with two beautiful girls (Hedy Lamarr and Anna Sten) against a background of 100% Americanism (a swanky advertising agency), to the accompaniment of such time-honored gimmicks as a slap stick goo--slinging (cold cream instead of custard pies), a lady doctor, a moonlit canoe ride, cheesecake, fashionable furniture, nightclubs, kisses, jealousy, and an enviable hunting lodge.

More or less a blast of entertainment buckshot, with elements that haye pierced audience armorplate since the days of Mack Sennett, it offered near-perfect material for a typical "sneak preview." Long Beach got, in Hollywood terms, the works.

So, to put it mildly, did the moviemakers. At the magic hour, producers, stars, film cutters, sound experts, musical director, bankers, and a stray extra drove up in a cavalcade of cars, unloaded the film they had worked on for months, and tried it on the audience. In the lobby a table was set up with "audience reaction" cards to be filled out on the spot or mailed to the studio. Sitting in the dark, some of the biggest names in Hollywood waited for judgment. It could easily be fatal.

To review the previewers, Parade set up infra-red photography equipment in the theater and concentrated on the real drama—the nerve-taut excitement of moviemakers in a movie theater, as Mr. and Mrs. Public and family tell if they are right or wrong.

The drama is in the theater seats as neighborhood

Teen-agers laugh merrily as Cummings, in part of nervous advertising salesman, forgets shirt while dressing to close big deal with cosmetics tycoon. A sure-fire comedy routine older than movies themselves, it had the expected appeal, was left in picture.

Actress Anna Sten, who plays role of cosmetics tycoon, watches from aisle seat as she makes screen love to Cummings. Brought from Europe by Goldwyn several years ago, and a flop in her first picture, she is trying come-back, seems to make it this time.

Pet gags often go in wastebasket

Producer Eugene Frenke pinches lip confidently as pet scene goes over. Box on knee is "fader," remote-control sound volume adjuster.

ONE OF THE classic Hollywood definitions of a "sneak preview" is that it consists of "a couple of $10,000-a-week producers getting into a limousine and traveling 50 miles to an out-of-the-way theater to have a gum-chewing, $35-a-week stenographer write on a questionnaire about a $3,000,000 epic that 'It Stinks' ! "

As a definition, it is probably too wordy and it is couched in the false-patronizing terms of executives who can make $10,000 a week only as long as there is a good supply of amiable $35-a-week stenographers to support them. On the other hand, it indicates the nervous respect that moviemakers have towards the public, and accurately describes the atmosphere at a "sneak."

There are very few people, even in Hollywood, who can afford to lose a cool $3,000,000 and come up smiling. To producers and their backers, it may mean the difference between a hacienda with a swimming pool or a trip to the poorhouse. To a director or actor who publicly stakes a reputation on the hour of intended fun and enlightenment, it may mean a better contract or a few years of button-holing producers or walking around to casting agencies. To lesser fry it may mean everything. Hollywood success is success at the box office.

As the interested parties file into the reserved seats in the rear, the air is that of an affair that may turn into either a jubilee or a hanging. If the audience reaction is bad, stars and producers usually slink out before the picture is over. Glamor girls have been known to follow lady customers into the powder room to listen to their conversation. Every rest-room attendant, ticket-chopper, and popcorn salesman turns detective for the night.

Judgement of movie, written on audience reaction cards at table in lobby, seriously influences final editing of movie. Typical comments: "Hedy is gorgeous but too thin," and "The sound was too loud."

Mixed reactions greeted scene where cosmetics tycoon gets return volley of cold cream from Cummings. Young man liked it, older couple looked shocked, in accord with old-fashioned ideas of chivalry. Movies depend on youngsters. The scene was left intact.

Movie extra, on screen only 3 or 4 seconds, leans forward anxiously as she appears in brief bathing suit shot as advertising model. Wolf howls could get her bigger parts, perhaps eventual stardom. Most top glamor girls started out in same sexy parts.

By all the rules of the game, "Let's Live a Little" should be a success. Of 500 audience-reaction cards handed out, 350 were returned. An average for the Crest Theater would be about 200. Of 200 examined by Parade, 122 marked the picture "Excellent", 71 said it was "Good", and only 7 said it was "Bad".

The Audiences Judge

BUT SOME of the best-timed gags raised not a chuckle, some of the best acting (Hedy Lamarr's as a lady psychiatrist) brought only bored snickers, some of the best slapstick (Anna Sten getting plastered with goo) caused disapproving tongue-clucking from elderly patrons. Some of the dullest (so thought the director) scenes brought gales of laughter that drowned out important lines.

Producer Eugene Frenke, with sound-modulator in hand, upped the decibels in the lines, made notes to have the scene lengthened to outlast the laughter. The musical director made notes to speed up or slow down the score. The cutters made rapid calculations of the film back on the cutting room floor that could fill out the time limit—at least 85 minutes for a feature.

The same audience gave diverse criticisms. "Enjoyed it all except the stupid ending," "Good comedy," "Story was weak," "Bugs Bunny should have played the lead," and "Hope it will be shown as is."

The picture, taken back to the studio, was cut and pasted again, with the favored scenes enlarged and the weak ones cut or eliminated.

Five minutes shorter, it was "sneak" previewed two nights later at Huntington Park, Calif. The audience, composed of what Hollywood calls the "average citizen type," went for it. When it is released, it is more than an even bet that you will get your money's worth and have a fine, average-citizen type evening.

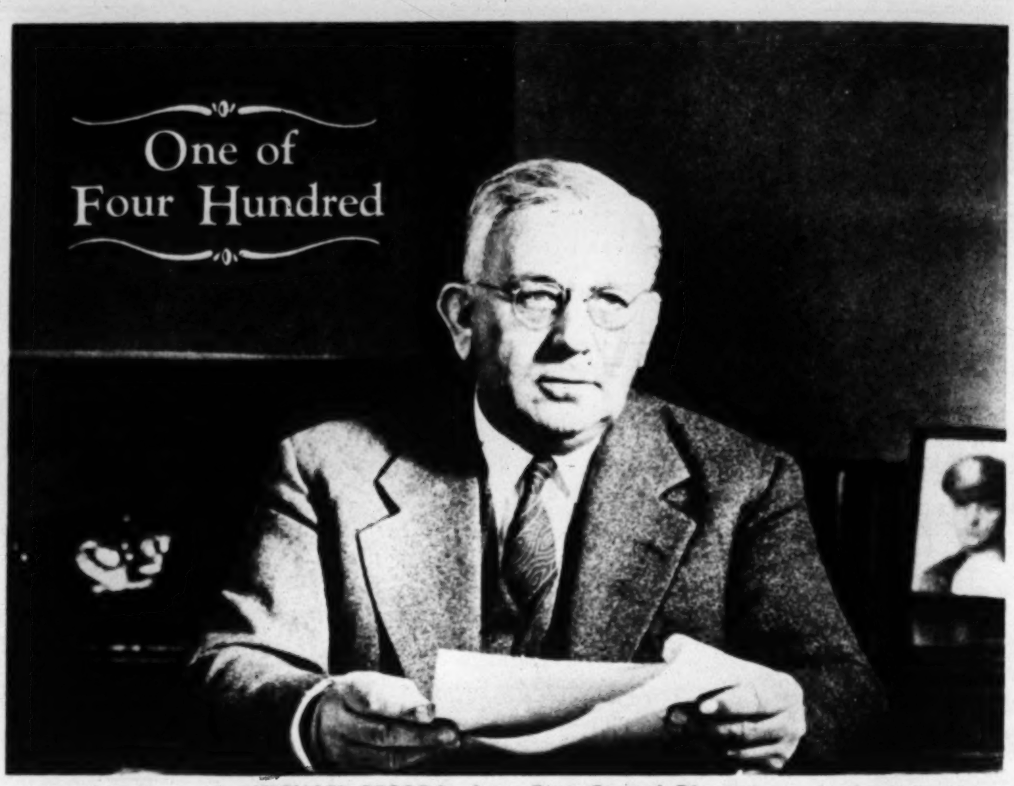
Casualties: Hedy Lamarr lecturing on psychiatry; prissy chemist; Hedy "analyzing" Cummings; and love scene in a canoe.

Photographs by Ben Ross

Star Robert Cummings, cheered by generally good reception, asks fan in lobby for her personal opinion.

Eavesdropping studio executive James T. Vaughn, loitering near water fountain, bends ear for verdict.

Morning after, director Richard Wallace, producer Frenke, co-producer Cummings and story editor Ed Wallace discuss necessary cuts. THE END.



MICHAEL PECORA, Area Rent Control Director

PARADE presents the first story in a series on men and women working at helping people.

A Public Servant

Aids hardship and inequity housing cases in northern New Jersey

ENDLESS LINES FORM daily within the nation's 400 rent control offices. People seeking shelter, or faced with other housing predicaments, file up to the partitioned wailing walls and state their complaints. "We are being evicted," some of them say. "Our rent is being raised," others protest. And, "They made us pay $1,000 bonus for an apartment," is still another common report.

These are the voices of our dispossessed housing problem children. At the federally-devised, locally-controlled, rent offices they reach sympathetic ears, finally receiving quick hearings and fair adjustments.

Area Rent Control Offices, offshoots of earlier housing and fair rent committees, have been operating since July 1942. Much of their success is due to the 400 individual local directors. These men have made immeasurable contributions towards alleviating one of the country's most aggravated living conditions.

Pecora heads busy, successful office

FOREMOST among these 400 is Michael Pecora of Newark, New Jersey. Heading one of the busiest and most effective offices, he is directly responsible for the housing destinies of over 600,000 family units in an area including 10 northern New Jersey counties, and covering about 75 per cent of the entire state.

Michael Pecora is 59, slightly under average height, heavy set, blue-eyed, grey-haired and good-natured. Deeply devoted to his own family, (wife, two daughters and a son, a war veteran) he is compassionately concerned about other families plagued with the housing pestilence. Years of training in federal housing and banking administration also qualify him for his present job.

Pecora and his staff of 80 employees see about 350 people daily, while some 700 telephone calls are answered. Within the last 12 months, 6,858 conferences and hearings, mostly veterans' cases, were held. During the same period, total interviews reached almost 100,000.

Unusual cases appear from time to time. Not long ago a landlord shut down the elevator in his apartment house, forcing tenants, many of them old folk, to walk up five and six flights. Service was soon restored. But the same man, trying to evict old tenants, offered his house for sale on a cooperative basis. A Federal injunction discouraged him quickly.

Other unusual cases included a 32-unit house in which 25 families paid $1,000 each for their apartments; and roomers being overcharged—under the table.

Not all dispositions, however, favor the tenant. Rent increases were granted in a case involving 1,100 housing units where gas and electricity had been provided free of charge.

Helping the Newark rent office, a Volunteer Advisory Board, composed of 12 substantial citizens, reviews appeals by tenants and landlords, recommending changes, if necessary.

"All told," Michael Pecora sums up his operation, "we are trying to make our outfit the nearest substitute yet devised for the 'To Rent—Reasonable' sign of the lamented halcyon days."

At local rent control office, housing problem cases receive quick action and just settlements. THE END.

Wondering what to wear with your furs? Try a dash of color—high key or pastel. These Terry Rogers originals are classics with calculated styling. In wools and gabardines of flattering hues, they're tops for a winter wardrobe pick-up.

The little touches count: a gold-buckled suede belt in a contrasting color trims the classic wool fly-front dress (left) while big gold medallions at neck and belt of the versatile two-tone gabardine (right) lend it elegance. Both sell for about $22.75.

Diagonal tucks mold the bodice and hipline of this flattering rayon crepe (1) with its easy-to-get-into button-down front; its price: under $30. Gold kid belt and gold buttons dress up the 'round-the-clock two-tone gabardine (2) which sells for about $23. STOP– loosening your skin!

MAKE THIS TEST! You will be shocked to find out how loose your skin really is!

DO THIS! Sit before your mirror. Do exactly as the girl is doing in the picture above. If folds of skin roll up under your eyes, you have loose skin! This loose skin may easily wrinkle too soon causing you to look much older than you really are!

Millions are actually loosening delicate skin tissues around their eyes in the very act of creaming their skins.

But this old way of skin care is rapidly being discarded. Well informed women are adopting skin care that ends destructive rubbing.

My Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting. No more need for rubbing at all. Think what this means!

When you use my cream that requires no rubbing, you are not loosening your skin—you are not deepening fine lines! In short, you stop helping your skin to grow loose and older looking. You help to preserve tone, elasticity and smoothness your skin naturally has.

Clearer Skin, Too, The First Day

What's more, I can promise you a clearer skin the first day you stop rubbing dirt-laden cream back into tiny skin crevices and into pore mouths.

Here's why. The cleansing ingredient in Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting—it has the power to surround each tiny particle of stale make-up and grime and separate it from the skin. It literally lifts dirt away from your skin! No destructive rubbing is necessary—just smooth it on and tissue it off!

What to Expect

Your first trial will convince you that my 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting (no more rubbing) and that it makes your skin far cleaner than before, without rubbing.

So get any size jar—even the smallest size is ample to prove that you don't have to rub your skin any more to clean it.

And remember, this one cream does 4 things for your skin. Besides self-acting cleansing—it smooths! —it aids the natural pore-refining process!—and it makes a perfect powder base!

He has a wide selection, products of America and Switzerland, oldest democracies on two continents. Your jeweler can show you many new styles—including water-resistant and shock-resistant watches, self-winding watches, calendar watches, and chronographs.

How to buy a watch this Christmas

2. A water-resistant watch is a boon to athletes and sportsmen. Of course, it will remain water-resistant as long as the crystal is intact and the case is unopened. When serviced, your jeweler should replace the crystal and seal the case tightly as when the watch left the factory.

3. A shock-resistant watch is the watch to give an active, busy person. Jars and shocks are minimized by cushioning the balance wheel jewel, permitting resilient movement of the tiny balance wheel under impact. A good shock-resisting watch is proof against the shocks received in normal service.

4. A self-winding watch is a wonderful convenience and is extremely accurate, too, since its uniform power is derived from the movement of the wrist. The calendar watch—still another innovation from Switzerland—shows the day as well as the hours and even the month—and is the ideal solution to the problem of what to give someone who "has everything."

5. How accurate should a watch be? Even the most accurate watch (and leading accuracy awards are held by a 17-jewel Swiss movement) may vary a few seconds a week, depending on the wearer and the weather. No matter what the make, your watch can be serviced economically and promptly, thanks to the efficiency of the modern jeweler.

Baked grapefruit-filled acorn squash tastes as good as it looks. Try grapefruit with other vegetables, too.

HERE IS AN IDEA that really sparkles! Add the tang of grapefruit flavor to vegetables and you have a brand-new taste treat for winter meals. We tried many combinations in Parade's Test Kitchen, and you will find recipes for four of our favorites at the right. In addition, substitute green beans for spinach, or mashed Hubbard squash in casserole or ramekins for the acorn squash. Add half a dozen bright new numbers to your recipe repertoire! We know they'll make your menus sing.

STUFFED ACORN SQUASH: Wash 3 acorn squash and bake, whole, in moderate oven, 375° F., about 50 minutes or until tender when pierced with a fork. Remove from oven; cool enough to handle. Slice lengthwise, scoop out seeds. Fill centers with grapefruit sections; sprinkle generously with brown sugar; dot with butter or margarine. Set in shallow baking dish containing ½-inch water. Return to oven for 15 minutes. Serve hot. Yield: 6 servings.

BEETS ORLANDO: Melt ¼ cup butter or margarine in saucepan; add 2 tablespoons sugar. Remove sections from 1 thin-skinned grapefruit; add to saucepan. Cook slowly until grapefruit is heated. Place 2½ cups hot, seasoned sliced beets in serving dish. Top with grapefruit sections and sauce. Yield: 6 servings of a most unusual and flavorful vegetable.

INDIAN RIVER SPINACH: Melt 3 tablespoons butter or margarine. Add sections from 1 grapefruit; heat thoroughly. Use to top 3 cups hot, chopped spinach. Yield: 6 servings. Even spinach-haters like this!

RED CABBAGE FLORIDA: Shred 1 head of red cabbage. Cook in small amount of water and ⅓ cup grapefruit juice about 10 minutes or until tender. Add sections from 1 carefully cored thin-skinned grapefruit and heat thoroughly. Yield: 6 servings.

Bake whole acorn squash until tender. Cut lengthwise and scoop out seeds and pulp.

Remove sections from grapefruit and place them in hollow centers of squash as shown.

Sprinkle grapefruit generously with brown sugar; dot with butter or margarine; bake.

Tower lab scientists at Nutley, N. J., use mechanical model of inner ear, resembling piano hammers, in sound studies.

"Ivory Tower" of Electronics

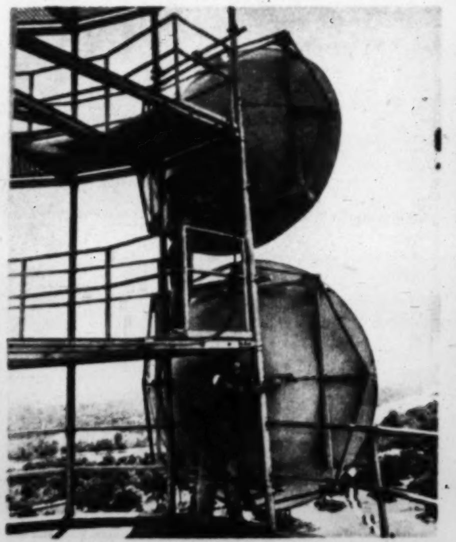
New frontiers in microwave region are explored atop 300-foot structure in New Jersey

IN A SLENDER, gleaming tower rising 300 feet above suburban Nutley, N. J., scientists are bringing the dream of "One World" closer to reality through the magic of microwaves. These powerful, ultra-high-frequency waves make it possible to link the nations in a global network of television, telephone and telegraph communications. What is happening in Cape Town, South Africa, may one day be seen instantaneously on a television screen in an American home. New, wide-band channels opened up in the microwave region can accommodate as many as 12 radio-telephone conversations simultaneously.

Built by the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, the $500,000 aluminum-sheathed tower houses one of the world's most modern laboratories. Here, engineers are using microwaves in the development of such electronic wonders as two-color radar and "DME"—Distance Measuring Equipment. Two-color radar accurately plots the course of an airplane as a moving green dot on an amber screen. DME is, in effect, an electronic tape measure which indicates the distance of an airplane to within one-tenth of a mile from a fixed point, with the plane as far away as 120 miles.

Microwaves have frequencies that are high up in the radio frequency spectrum, where they are much closer to light than to sound. Like light, they travel in a straight line and can be beamed in any direction. Also like light, their range is close to the horizon. Microwave towers, spaced every 30 to 120 miles, can retransmit the signals. Transmission of voices, pictures and print, now confined to several hundred miles, is possible on a world-wide scale with the aid of multi-channel microwave links.

Two-color radar spots friendly plane, having "responder," by green blob on amber scope.



"Dishes," parabolic antennae, beam 12 radio-telephone conversations on single channel.

Giant vacuum tube, especially developed for high-frequency experiments, is being welded.

Parade's Picture Quiz

*Today's quiz questions come from Dr. Roy K. Marshall's "The Nature of Things," televised on Thursday nights at 8:15 over the National Broadcasting Company's Boston-to-Richmond network.

1 Where on earth can you be if you travel 10 miles south, 10 miles west and 10 miles north, and be back at your starting point?

2 A housewife in Denver and another in Boston begin boiling a "three-minute" egg at the same time. Which will be done first?

3 Why is it possible to pick an ice cube out of a glass by simply laying a piece of string across it, then sprinkling with salt?

4 Where on earth is it possible for an airplane to fly further below sea level than a submarine has ever been known to operate?

5 You have undoubtedly seen it work many times, but, do you know why an egg sinks in fresh water and floats in salt water?

6 A German physicist pioneered in use of X-Ray. Was he (a) William Becquerel, (b) Wilhelm K. Roentgen or (c) Sir William Crookes?

7 As a child you often have looked through a piece of smoked glass at an eclipse of the sun. Why does such a phenomenon occur?

8 Would it be advisable for scientists in the United States to spend their efforts on the process of changing lead into gold?

9 Despite talk about "the man in the moon," why are scientists rather universally in accord that there is no life on the moon?

10 As you gaze into the heavens on a clear night, would you be more likely to see a meteor before or after midnight? THE END.

HY GARDNER'S . . . Newsreel

SO THIS IS PARIS: Jean Hennerie, a Parisian motorcycle gendarme, was fined $4 for exceeding the speed limit while chasing a motorist who exceeded the speed limit . . .

FOR PETE'S SAKE: If fate requires you phone the Health Department of Washington requesting a death certificate, the voice at the other end answers: "This is Saint Peter." Not that Washington's suddenly become the capital of Saints—it's just that the St. Peter in question happens to be a clerk named Joseph Saint Peter . . .

EMILY POST BURGLAR: After he ransacked a San Francisco residential hotel suite, on the opposite side of the card reading: "Don't Disturb," the intruder scribbled: "I didn't even wake your dog. Thanks for everything."

MEDICAL MEMOS: A doctor friend informs me that the stethescope was invented by a physician who was too bashful to examine female patients . . . Also that the caffeine, removed by the makers of coffee substitutes, is sold to certain soft drink brewers . . .

PSYCHOLOGY DEPT: We were quite surprised to notice a tough-looking Washington cab driver with a pair of baby shoes dangling from the inside of his wind shield; he didn't look like the sentimental type. "Nope, they ain't my kid's shoes," he grunted, "I dug 'em up in my mudder's attic; I think they're maybe mine. I'm a bachelor myself, but it gives passengers something to talk about and they tip family men bigger."

BATTLE OF THE SEXES: After her unhappy hubby ran a legal notice to the effect that his wife had left his bed and board and he would no longer be responsible for any debts incurred by her—his frau bought an ad in answer. Her bon-mot read: "Henry thinks he's smart taking an ad to say he's no longer responsible for my debts. He never was. That's why I left him. His never-loving wife, Francie."

QUIZ ANSWERS: 1. North Pole. 2. Boston, boiling point drops as altitude increases. 3. String freezes to cube. 4. The Dead Sea, 1300 feet below sea level. 5. Density of salt water is higher. 6. Wilhelm Roentgen. 7. Moon passes between sun and earth. 8. No. Lead is in greater demand today than gold. 9. Because of lack of atmosphere. 10. After midnight.

THE ORIGINAL WORCESTERSHIRE
Famous for over 100 years

Sure, America's going ahead...

if we all pull together!

Let's compare yesterday with today ... that will give us an idea of what tomorrow can be!

Machine Power: Since 1910 we have increased our supply of machine power 4½ times.

Production: Since 1910 we have more than doubled the output each of us produces for every hour we work.

Income: Since 1910 we have increased our annual income from less than $2400 per household to about $4000 (in dollars of the same purchasing power).

Work Hours: Yet, since 1910 we have cut 18 hours from our average workweek—equivalent to two present average workdays.

HOW have we achieved all this? Through the American kind of teamwork! And what is teamwork?

American teamwork is management that pays reasonable wages and takes fair profits—that provides the best machines, tools, materials and working conditions it possibly can—that seeks new methods, new markets, new ideas; that bargains freely and fairly with its employees.

Our teamwork is labor that produces as efficiently and as much as it can—that realizes its standard of living ultimately depends upon how much America produces—that expects better wages as it helps increase that production.

Teamwork is simply working together to turn out more goods in fewer man-hours—making things at lower costs and paying higher wages to the people who make them and selling them at lower prices to the people who use them.

What we've already accomplished is just a foretaste of what we can do. It's just a start toward a goal we are all striving to reach: better housing, clothing, food, health, education, with ever greater opportunities for individual development. Sure, our American System has its faults. We all know that. We still have sharp ups and downs in prices and jobs. We'll have to change that—and we will!

It will continue to take teamwork, but if we work together, there's no limit on what we can all share together of even greater things.

What we have already accomplished is just a foretaste of what we can do—if we continue to work together!

I want to help.

I know that higher wages, lower prices, shorter hours and larger earnings can all result from producing more goods for every hour all of us work.

Therefore, I will ask myself how I can work more effectively every hour I am on the job, whether I am an employee, an employer, a professional man or a farmer.

I will encourage those things which help us produce more and add to everyone's prosperity—things like greater use of mechanical power, better machines, better distribution and better collective bargaining.

I will boost the good things in our set-up, and help to get rid of the bad.

I will try to learn all I can about why it is that Americans have more of the good things in life.

Please send me your free booklet, "The Miracle of America," which explains clearly and simply, how a still better living can be had for all, if we all work together.

A team of prized Hackney horses, distinguished for their high action, draws a phaeton at John F. Cuneo's Illinois farm.

The Hackney's A High Stepper

Small in size, he's a big-shot in the show ring.

THAT ALL-ROUND HORSE, the Hackney, which used to pay its way by high-stepping in front of grandfather's carriage, pulling a plow and going nicely under saddle when asked to, has become an equine gentleman-of-leisure. The Hackney is found now in the stables of horse fanciers who want one of the showiest of all horses to represent them in the nation's rings.

Noted for breedy lines, extremely high action and a bold way of going, the relatively small Hackney is descended from a larger horse which was bred during the Middle Ages. Refinements in breeding in England, Ireland and later in this country resulted in today's flashy, high-spirited animal.

Shortly after the first Hackney Stud was founded in the United States 70 years ago by A. J. Cassat, of Berwyn, Pa., the Hackney enjoyed a great vogue here as a carriage horse, worker, and mount. In the country's show rings he was superb, winning consistently in harness, under saddle and as a hunter.

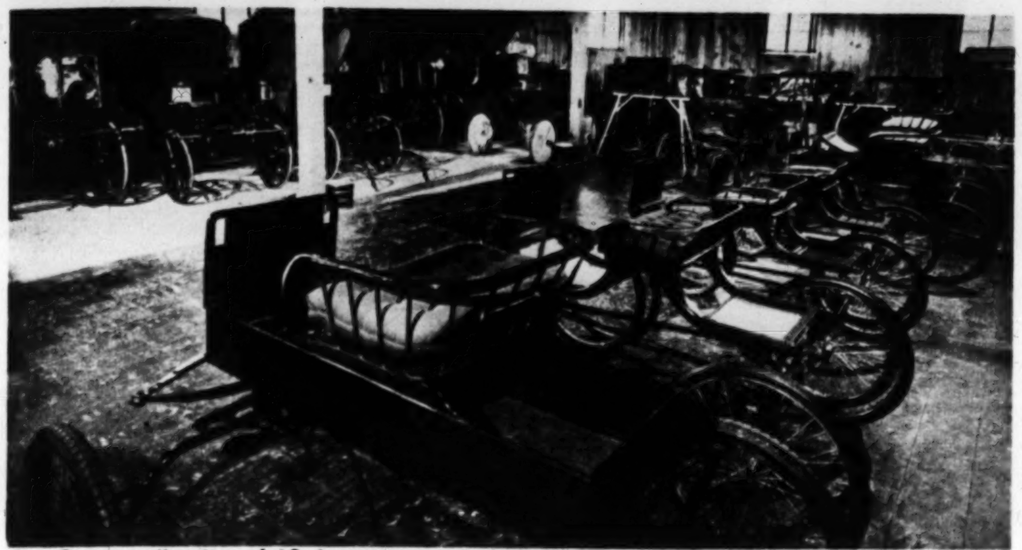
But with the automobile the Hackney's utility went into eclipse; and even though he still posesses the substance and willingness he had 50 years ago, it is seldom if ever he is used for any other than show purposes.

One Horse, 110 Prizes

ONE BREEDER, however, who still thinks the Hackney horse is tops is John F. Cuneo, president of the Cuneo Press, Inc., of Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Milwaukee and San Francisco.

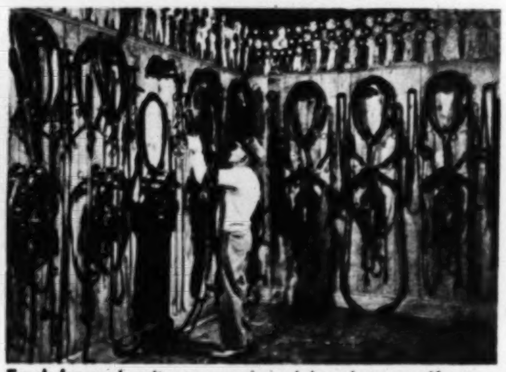
Mr. Cuneo's interest in horses dates from his childhood and is reflected in his 5,000-acre Hawthorn Farm at Libertyville, Ill. There he breeds Palominos, Clydesdales and Hackneys and has 40 Hackney mares, foals and stallions, among them Wensleydale Pilot, winner of 110 first prizes.

It was at Hawthorn Farm that the pictures on these pages were taken.



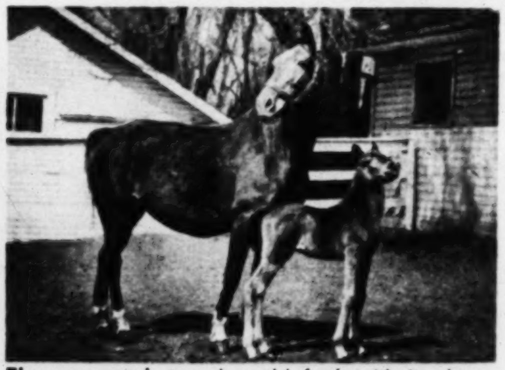
The Cuneo collection of 40 show wagons includes several types of phaetons, buggies, gigs.

Every Hackney at the Cuneo farm, 35 miles outside Chicago, undergoes systematic training and exercise.

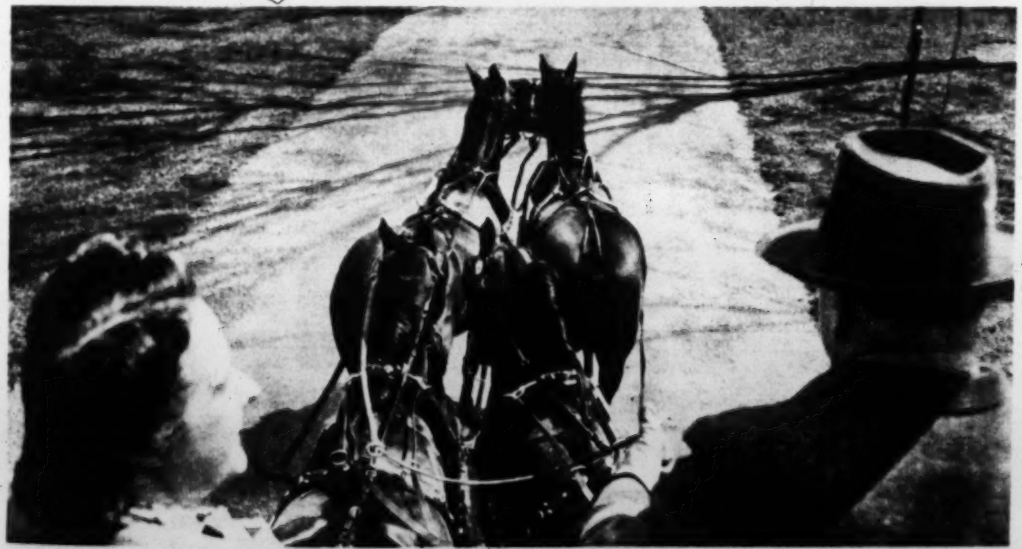


Each horse has its own work and show harness. Keeping them in shape takes full time of harness maker.

When Mr. Cuneo shows out of town two freight cars are needed to ship all horses' tack and the wagons.



The unnamed, two-day old foal, with its dam, "Craigwell Sybil," is the latest arrival at the farm.



Mr. Cuneo often drives his horses with Mrs. Cuneo for sport and relaxation. THE END.

THE PALEFACE

There are more laughs than the West has cowboys in this hilarious burlesque on all horse-operas. Bob Hope, a travelling dentist, is wooed and won by Calamity Jane (Jane Russell). The two get in and out of all the stock Western perils—Indian raids, gun fights, runaway wagons—with ease. (Para.)

This is such good comedy that it should have a sequel. Bette Davis (with a delightful "new look") is a magazine editor specializing in "before and after" stories; Robert Montgomery, her aide and suitor. Funniest scene: his hard cider bout. (W.B.)

MACBETH

Orson Welles has taken over Shakespeare and made "Macbeth" strictly a Wellsian field day. The grim, dour mood of the play is properly captured; the musical score is compelling but Welles turns the Bard's lines into gibberish. (Republic)

THE GOLDEN HAWK

LIGHT IN THE SKY

MERRY CHRISTMAS
STAND CLEAR, KID. I'M GOING TO STORE YOUR VICTIMS IN THAT ROOM ... BOTH OUT COLD YET ... GUARD HASN'T MOVED SINCE YOU DROPPED OFF AT THE END OF YOUR TRAPEZE SWING AND LANDED ON HIS GLASS JAW. THE OTHER ONE'S STILL IN A FAINT — HAVING CHOPS TOSS A KNIFE PAST HIS FACE JUST AS HE WAS ABOUT TO SHOOT YOU, MUST'VE BEEN QUITE A SHOCK.
SPEAKING OF YOUR FAT FRIEND, PAL — WHERE'D HE GO?
TO COVER A STAIR-CASE — THE ONE WE LAUGHINGLY REFER TO AS OUR LINE OF RETREAT!
AND BELOW...
BAH! THAT I SHOULD BE DISTURBED WHILE WRITING THE ALL-IMPORTANT CODE MESSAGE BECAUSE THAT FOOL DOES NOT RETURN.
ONE OCCIDENTAL, A PAIR OF HOODS... MUST BE THE OTHER SNATCH-BOY LOOKING FOR HIS PAL... WELL, TIME TO DETOUR THE PARADE...
FOOLS! YOU HAVE ALLOWED AN ENEMY TO PENETRATE TO THE FLOOR OCCUPIED BY MY HOSTAGE... QUICKLY! CHECK ALL EXITS — HIS ESCAPE ROUTE MUST BE CUT OFF.
MOMENTS LATER...
THE MAIN GATE, COMRADE — UNLOCKED AND THE GUARDS MISSING!
SECURE IT AT ONCE, AND SET A NEW GUARD.
NOW! TO THE ROOF WITH RIFLES AND GRENADES. OUR CALLER MUST BE SUITABLY WELCOMED.

REX MORGAN M.D.
I DON'T LIKE THE IDEA OF BEING PUT IN STORAGE FOR THREE WEEKS! WHAT'LL I DO WITH MYSELF IN A HOSPITAL?
YOU'RE GOING TO DO EXACTLY AS TED AND I TELL YOU, SUGAR!
DON'T YOU SEE, MAPLE? IT'S THE ONLY OUT WE HAVE TO CLEAN UP THE HAVANA MESS YOU GOT YOURSELF INTO!
WE'VE GOT TO SELL THE PUBLIC ON THE IDEA THAT YOU CONKED THE COUNT WITH A CHAMPAGNE BOTTLE BECAUSE YOU WERE UN-STRUNG! HE DISILLUSIONED YOU IN THE PERFECT MARRIAGE, SEE?
AND I'D HIT HIM AGAIN IF I HAD HIM HERE!
WE'RE GOING TO TRY TO GET YOU INTO CITY HOSPITAL AND YOU'RE GOING TO PLAY THE BROKEN-HEARTED AMERICAN GIRL!
DO YOUR ACT RIGHT AND I'LL HAVE THE PUBLIC CRYING TO SEE YOU IN "MODEL WIFE"!
HOW ARE WE GOING TO GET MAPLE INTO CITY HOSPITAL LEGITIMATELY, TED?
THAT'S THE STYMIE, BOSS! BUT I HAVE A PLAN..... TRY THIS FOR SIZE...
MEANWHILE, AT CITY HOSPITAL...
THE WORLD IS FULL OF GULLIBLE MEN LIKE MR. WINTERS, DR. MORGAN! HE STILL THINKS THAT MAPLE FORREST IS AN INNOCENT VICTIM OF CIRCUMSTANCES!
ISN'T THAT STORY ABOUT MAPLE FORREST TERRIBLE?
I STILL THINK HER COUNT HUSBAND MUST HAVE DONE SOMETHING AWFUL TO MAKE MAPLE ACT LIKE SHE DID!
WOULD YOU CHANGE YOUR STATEMENT TO "GULLIBLE YOUNG WOMEN" TOO, MISS WINESAP?
HUMPF!
HELLO, SALLY... WOULDN'T BE WAITING FOR DR. DAVIS, WOULD YOU?
DR. MORGAN, YOU'RE READING MY MIND!
BRADLEY & EDGINGTON
I WON'T HAVE YOU TALKING TO THESE RICH STAFF DOCTORS, SALLY! MIGHT TURN YOUR HEAD AND YOU WOULDN'T WANT TO LOOK AT A POOR RESIDENT AGAIN!
COME ON, HONEY! LET'S GET OUT OF HERE BEFORE THEY FIND MORE WORK FOR ME!
